Quebec Party Picks Loubier

QUEBEC (CP) — Gabriel Loubier, 37, a lawyer from Quebec City, was chosen leader of the Union Nationale Party Saturday in a close third-ballot win over Marcel Masse.

Loubier had 607 votes while Masse, who trailed closely throughout, had 584. He succeeds Jean-Jacques Bertrand, who announced his retirement after the Liberals won the Quebec election of 1970.

During his acceptance speech, Loubier spoke briefly in English, a break with party tradition. He asked English-speaking Quebecers to join the UN because the party "hopes that Quebec can be allowed to live with its traditions and aspirations."

Masse, disgruntled at his close loss, blamed former education minister Guy Cardinal, who threw his support to Loubier minutes before the third ballot.

Masse refused to say whether he would support the new leader, and some of his adherents said they would join the separatist Parti Quebecois on Monday.

He and Loubier were the only strong finishers at the convention. Mario Beaulieau was eliminated after the second ballot when he got only 99 votes to Loubier's 568 and Masse's 544.

Pierre Sevigny, former cabinet minister in the government of Conservative John Diefenbaker, lost out after garnering 26 votes on the first ballot. Unknown Andre Levielle received no votes.

The three men who made it to the second ballot are all strong Quebec nationalists whose Quebec-first views were expressed when they were cabinet ministers in various Union Nationale governments in Quebec.

Last of Nonuplets Dies in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The last of nine children born a week ago to Mrs. Leonard Brodrick died Saturday night, hospital officials announced. Cause of death of the child—a boy—was not given.

Mrs. Brodrick, a 29-year-old former nurse, gave birth last Sunday to the world's first recorded nonuplets.

Furnace-Like Desert Wind Mideast Bane

By TOM LAMBERT
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

JERUSALEM — This is the season of the Hamsin, the furnace-like desert wind which blows across the Middle East. It can cause such pronounced physiological effects on its victims that judges sometimes regard them as mitigating circumstances in criminal cases.

The air becomes hot, dry and parched when the Hamsin blows. Beer and soft-drink sales zoom. Children and their parents become snappish and seek relief in siestas. Dogs pant, even in the shade, and the trees murmur wearily. Nature's cooling systems are overtaxed with heat.

Known here as the Hamsin, the hot winds have various names in other countries. In Tunisia, they are called the Chili; in Morocco, the Chergui; in Tripolitania, the Ghibli. And many desert dwellers call them the Simoon, or the Sirocco.

Researchers at Jerusalem's Hebrew University are now seeking ways to relieve and protect the estimated 20 to 30 per cent of Israel's residents who are adversely affected by the scorching winds.

As the Hamsin develops and the heat increases, the researchers have noted, the following physiological effects may occur.

Persons keenly sensitive to the Hamsin become irritable, and some complain of insomnia, headaches, nausea, tension, shortness of breath and disturbances of their vision.

In others, the researchers have found, the Hamsin causes lowered blood pressure, lethargy, an inability to concentrate and a diminution of the sugar content in the blood generating a craving for sweets.

Still others manifest increased thyroid glandular activity.

The Hamsin comes at summer's beginning and end, blowing either from the west or the east.

When spawned in the west, in North Africa's Moroccan, Algerian and Tripolitanian deserts, the Hamsin swoops across Egypt, the eastern Mediterranean and Israel, and finally drifts away to the east.

The eastern Hamsin comes up out of the Iraqi, Syrian and Arabian deserts, blows west across Israel, then continues westward over the Mediterranean.

While the Hamsin from the east is generally an unburdened windstorm, the Hamsin from the west is usually laden with sand or dust. It sometimes darkens the sky and reduces visibility to less than a quarter-mile. Driven by the wind, the grit infiltrates even the most tightly closed doors and windows, leaving a film of soft yellow sand-dust on the floors and furniture in every building.

Despite its sometimes drastic effects, the Hamsin is rarely a violent wind by the time it reaches Israel and seldom blows more than two days. It is more a persisting sigh than a shout, lacking the savage velocity of a typhoon or hurricane.

Meteorologist Michael Levi describes it as "a first cousin to other hot and dry winds, such as the Foehn of the northern Alps, the Chinook blowing down the Rocky Mountains, and the Santa Ana of California."

Research here and abroad on hot windstorms has indicated some of them cause environmental changes. At the onset of the wind and heat, for example, the number of positively charged electical particles in the atmosphere increase noticeably.

"Some biologists think the unnerving influence of these hot spells is connected not only with heat and moisture conditions, but also with changes in the electrical field of the Earth's atmosphere," Levi says.

Hebrew University has established an outpatient clinic for Hamsin sufferers who are treated with — among other remedies — negatively charged air and thyroid-depressing drugs.

Boy, 14, Charged in Death Of Saanich Woman, 58

By HUBERT BEYER

A 14-year-old boy has been charged with a delinquency in connection with the death of a 58-year-old Saanich woman who was stabbed in her apartment early Saturday morning.

Saanich police said the youth is expected to appear in Greater Victoria Juvenile Court Monday.

The victim is Miss Mary Karpenic of Suite 131, Hampton Court, a senior citizen housing development at the corner of Seaton and Hampton.

Police said she was the sole occupant of the main-floor suite. Access to the apartment was through the bedroom window.

Several neighbors said they heard Miss Karpenic scream at about 5:30 a.m. One woman, living right across from the victim, also heard the screams and notified police.

Wilf Daniels, 86, who also lives in the development, said he heard the screams, but didn't pay any attention to them.

"They were loud all right, but I thought it was grandchildren visiting one of our tenants; so I didn't leave my room," Daniels said.

Those who weren't awakened by the woman's screams, found their surroundings a beehive of activity later in the morning.

Police cars were swarming all over the area; officers in uniform and plainclothes were busy questioning neighbors.

Members of the Saanich police department's identification branch combed the surroundings for clues that might lead to an arrest.

They carried a scorched cement block to a police car. The block was found at the bottom of the window through which the intruder climbed into the suite. There was a similar block missing from an outdoor barbecue or incinerator on a nearby property.

They took photographs of the window which appeared to be smeared with grime on the outside.

They measured footprints. There were deep impressions in the soft, wet lawn and were made up a slope to the road.

At one point, a police officer carried a pair of shoes to a waiting cruiser; the shoes had been found nearby.

Elton Nichol and his wife Lillie live at 160 Hampton, next to the Hampton Court and in view of the woman's apartment, but so they didn't hear anything.

"Funny thing, too," Nichol said; "I often get up that time of morning to take a walk, but I didn't this morning."

Charity Walkers Found on Moors In Rain and Mist

RAVENSCAR, England (AP) — Police and troops found hundreds of charity walkers exhausted and lost on the rainswept Yorkshire Moors Saturday during a 30-mile trek to raise money for the United Nations Children's Fund UNICEF.

At one stage, more than 100 young hikers were reported missing on the bleak and trackless moorlands. Many were found suffering from exposure and huddled in groups in the torrential rain and mist.

By late afternoon all the charity walkers but one had been tracked down and taken to local village halls for treatment. None was reported in serious condition.

The walkers set off Friday night to trek over the moors from Osmotherley to Ravenscar, each sponsored at various prices for every mile covered. All the proceeds were to go to UNICEF.

New Ruling Awaited

Cantankerous Press Upheld

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge Saturday upheld the New York Times' right to publish secret U.S. documents on the Vietnam war obtained without permission from the Pentagon, but continued to restrain the newspaper from doing so until a higher court can rule on the case.

The decision by U.S. district judge Murray Gurfein said the free flow of information was guaranteed by the constitution "so that the public will be informed about the government and its actions." Those in authority, he said, must suffer a "cantankerous press" whose existence helps preserve freedom of expression and the right of the people to know.

The U.S. Department of Justice, which last Tuesday won a temporary order prohibiting the Times from further disclosures of the study on how the United States got involved in Indochina, appealed Gurfein's decision to the Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, whose three judges will hear the case at noon Monday.

That means the soonest the Times would be able to continue publication of the controversial study would be in Tuesday morning newspapers, provided an appeals decision went its way. It was expected, however, that the case would end up in the U.S. Supreme Court, along with a

$2.5 Million Confiscated —All Phoney

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police and secret service agents seized $2.5 million in counterfeit currency Saturday, bringing the amount of phoney money confiscated in Los Angeles this year to nearly $10 million — half the U.S. total.

Los Angeles city police said they found $46,000 worth of bogus $20 bills in a car stopped Saturday morning for a routine traffic violation. The bills were printed in threes on uncut sheets.

They arrested two Los Angeles men, Alvin Smith, 50, and Joe R. Gindratt, 34.

The secret service said the rest of the money and the printing plates were recovered in a raid on Gindratt's home.

No Blank Cheque

THE KIDS are coming, the kids are coming!

We have been saturated with stories about young whelps running roughshod over our land, about the invasion of youth power that appears to have rattled us old squares to a much greater degree than the problem deserves.

To be honest about it, I think we are possibly envious of the travelling youngsters, envious of their ability to see the world, to see places and things that us old stick-in-the-muds merely dream about.

I have criss-crossed this great Canada dozens and dozens of times, mostly by plane and train. But you never really get the feeling of the country that way — you miss the important little things. Travel by thumb allows one to stop and smell the flowers, allows one to get to know Canada to a degree that most of us will never know.

IN SHORT, I can see no great harm in the travelling horde. I do, however, see the harm of the radicals who infiltrate and who demand, demand, demand.

The idiocy of a group of young socialists in Vancouver demanding free food from supermarkets, full access to parks and beaches, the opening of vacant hotel rooms, apartments and schools for housing purposes, the removal of sexual segregation at hostels, no time limit on the use of hostels by transient youth.

In other words, give us this day, our daily bread and anything else we can lay our hands on.

HOSTELS, at a nominal fee, I can buy. But I cannot buy the idea of providing them with everything from soup to nuts for their excursions.

Let them pay for their own vacations. Let them work to enjoy the summer of discovery. But please, don't pamper, don't mollycoddle, don't give them the blank cheque for a free ride at taxpayers' expense. Welfare? No sir, not for young people out to have a ball.

That's the only burr under the saddle. Don't knock them for enjoying themselves, don't knock their utilitarian travel attire. Let them have all the fun they can find — within the law.

MUCH concerned comment re an article on the Hanford atomic waste reserve in eastern Washington. Hugh Keenleyside writes to tell me that the Hanford "burial ground" for radio-active waste, encompasses a stretch of the Columbia River in a tract covering 650 square miles where no one is allowed to live or to trespass. Hell of a note that we have to barb-wire such a huge piece of land because of man's preoccupation of doing away with himself.

And from Duncan, a note from Kurt Horn of SPEC.

"On your column on nuclear wastes, you forgot to mention two additional hazards in connection with waste storage — earthquakes and sabotage."

Bang on. I'm sure those charged with the nightmarish task of guarding this hideous horde, realize only too well the possibilities of Horn's addition . . .

Right of Times Upheld To Publish Documents

similar case against the Washington Post.

The government has claimed that making the study public would cause "irreparable injury" to the United States.

Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, president and publisher of the Times, said Gurfein's opinion "reaffirms the basic principles on which a free press must be based. This reaffirmation is what the Times sought in the court proceeding, and we are heartened that the great constitutional issues involved have been faced and resolved in favor of the citizens' right to know."

Judge Irving R. Kaufman of the second court said the restraining order against further publication of the study by the Times would remain in effect until his court hears the case Monday.

The Washington Post, similarly restrained Saturday morning by a U.S. appeals court, also goes to court Monday in an effort to continue publication of disclosures from the same report.

In his 17-page decision, Gurfein said that from a reading of past court cases and congressional debate on legislation concerning national security it appeared "that Congress, recognizing the constitutional problems of the first amendment with respect to free press, refused to include a form of precensorship even in wartime."

He said both sides conceded the government had the power to restrain serious security breaches vitally affecting the interest of the nation and that "this court does not doubt the right of the government to injunctive relief against a newspaper that is about to publish information or documents absolutely vital to current national security.

"But it does not find that to be the case here."

Gurfein said that the testimony during the secret proceedings in his chambers last Friday "did not convince this court that the publication of these historical documents would seriously breach the national security.

"Without revealing the content of the testimony, suffice it to say that no cogent reasons were advanced as to why these documents except in the general framework of embarassment . . . would vitally affect the security of the nation."

He said that ". . . In the last analysis it is not merely the opinion of the editorial writer or the columnist which is protected by the first amendment. It is the free flow of information so that the public will be informed about the government and its actions."

The government had contended that the Times' stories, which first appeared on June 13, had "compromised our current military and defence plans and intelligence operations and (had) jeopardized our international relations".

But Gurfein rejected this argument, saying "There has been an effort on the part of the Times to vindicate the right of the public to know. It is not a case involving an intent to communicate vital secrets for the benefit of a foreign government or to the detriment of the United States.

"If there be some embarrassment to the government in security aspects as remote as the general embarrassment that flows from any security breach we must learn to live with it.

"The security of the nation is not at the ramparts alone. Security also lies in the value of our free institutions.

"A cantankerous press, an obstinate press, a ubiquitous press, must be suffered by those in authority in order to preserve the even greater values of freedom of expression and the right of the people to know," Gurfein ruled.

The Times began the series based on a study ordered by former defence secretary Robert S. McNamara last Sunday and had completed the second and third installments before the justice department asked Gurfein to stop them.

Those installments dealt with events surrounding the Gulf of Tonkin incident in 1964, the decision by former president Lyndon B. Johnson to bomb North Vietnam and the first use of American soldiers in ground combat in South Vientam.

On Friday, the Washington Post began its own series based on the Pentagon papers and the justice department immediately went into the U.S. District Court in Washington to stop the series. Government lawyers lost in district court but appealed to the appeals court and won an order halting additional disclosures.

The Washington Post said it would not immediately appeal the decision to the Supreme Court but would stage a full-scale legal battle before the district court, to which the appeals court had returned the case, on Monday.

The Times' legal team, headed by Alexander M. Bickel, an expert on constitutional law from Yale University, had argued that the first amendment forbids both the executive branch of government and the federal courts from using grounds of "national security" to prevent news media from publishing any article except in such extreme situations as threatened publication of battle plans or troop movements.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Next Question

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I'm a teen-age girl, I have regular periods and I would like to know at what age should a girl begin taking the pill if she wants to. I'm 15 years old. —Miss R.P.

This is about the bluntest inquiry I've seen on this subject — the blunt part being that phrase about when she "should" start taking birth control pills.

I don't mean this critically so far as Miss R.P.'s letter-writing ability goes, but I do think it is illustrative of the kind of thinking (if you want to call it thinking) that exists now.

I'm not willing to concede that any 15-year-old "should" use the pill. Admittedly some of them are doing so, and some of them will, but that doesn't mean it is good for them, or that they have thought things through.

For one thing, there's no doubt in my mind that the pill has contributed to the frightening amount of venereal disease which we now have. Girls think there's no danger of pregnancy, so what is there to worry about? Well, VD is one thing to worry about.

For some girls, there can be psychological repercussions — some qualms about free-and-easy sex experience. (Yes, I know; some don't care.)

I have substantial reservations as to the consequences of unrestricted sexual activity at 15 relative to the effect on marriage perhaps half a dozen years later. Isn't sex one of the elements that is important in working out the adjustment period of marriage?

Further, I wonder, if sexual involvements begin at 15, isn't there a genuine danger of getting into the habit of taking sex where you find it? And what does that do to marriage later on?

Medically, the pill is pretty good. But it is not perfect. In some percentage of cases, it can cause unwanted side effects. Furthermore, we don't yet know what effects might be possible if the pill is taken for 30 years — say from age 15 to 45. That's a reason why nobody can possibly say when a girl "should" start the pill.

U.S. Pride Came First, Chinese Threat Second, Freedom Last

When the United States sent combat troops to South Vietnam in the spring of 1965 it cast aside a policy born in the anguish of the Korean War more than a decade earlier: Never fight a land war in Asia.

President Lyndon Johnson had decided after a month of heavy bombing of North Vietnam that air power alone never would bring Hanoi to its knees.

The consequence of his decision was foreseen with uncanny accuracy by George Ball, then undersecretary of state. He sent a memorandum to Johnson, shortly before the decision was made, proposing negotiations.

"The alternative ... is almost certainly a protracted war involving an open-ended commitment of U.S. Forces, mounting U.S. casualties, no assurance of a satisfactory solution, and a serious danger of escalation at the end of the road," Ball wrote.

Befor a U.S. federal court ordered a suspension of the New York Times' Vietnam articles, the newspaper's reports on secret government studies described the origins of the U.S. involvement in that struggle. This story summarizes the major points in those disclosures and draws togehter the narrative of escalation.

By The Associated Press

Vietnam Involvement Just Grew and Grew

Secret Study

These events unfold in a top-secret study of the Vietnam war prepared by the defence department in 1967-68 on the orders of Robert McNamara, then secretary of defence.

The New York Times obtained part of the report and began a series of stories last Sunday, covering the period 1964-65.

Two more instalments appeared before a federal court ordered a halt Tuesday, while the government sought an injunction against resumption.

The study shows that planning for an active role in the war began in the spring of 1964, a full year before the first heavy U.S. bombing strikes on North Vietnam and the introduction of combat forces into South Vietnam.

Joint Chiefs

On Jan. 22, 1964, the joint chiefs of staff, with Gen. Maxwell Taylor as chairman, suggested in a memorandum to McNamara that the U.S. involvement in South Vietnam be stepped up.

The memorandum said: "The joint chiefs of staff are increasingly mindful that our fortunes in South Vietnam are an accurate barometer of our fortunes in all Southeast Asia ... A loss of South Vietnam to the Communists will presage an early erosion of the remainder of our position in that subcontinent."

They suggested the United States take over the tactical conduct of the war from the South Vietnamese, bomb North Vietnam "using U.S. resources under Vietnamese cover" and support South Vietnamese commando raids in the North.

Covert Drives

The government decided on covert attacks on North Vietnam, under the code name of Operation Plan 34A. They began in February and consisted of South Vietnamese commando raids along the coast to destroy rail and highway bridges, the parachuting of sabotage and psychological warfare teams into the North and kidnapping of North Vietnamese to obtain information. U-2 spy flights also were flown over the North.

Returning in March from Saigon, McNamara painted a gloomy picture of South Vietnam. He proposed South Vietnamese raids into Laos against North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh supply trail, plus air attacks on military and industrial targets in the North by South Vietnamese planes backed by a U.S. Air Force squadron.

Parts of It

Johnson approved the plan but parts of it apparently were never carried out.

William Bundy, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, sent Johnson a plan in May, 1964, for increasing military pressure on North Vietnam culminating in full-scale bombing by U.S. planes. He suggested a congressional resolution "authorizing whatever is necessary with respect to Vietnam."

Johnson resisted advice to step up the war, however.

That summer, John T McNaughton, assistant secretary of defence, sent a memorandum to McNamara suggesting these U.S. aims in South Vietnam:

Percentages

"70 pct. — To avoid a humiliating U.S. defeat to our reputation as a guarantor.

"20 pct. — To keep SVN and then adjacent territory from Chinese hands." SVN means South Vietnam.

"10 pct. — To permit the people of SVN to enjoy a better, freer way of life."

In August, the U.S. destroyer, Maddox, in the Gulf of Tonkin to gather intelligence for commando raids, reported an attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats. The Maddox was joined by the destroyer C. Turnery Joy, which also came under the torpedo boats' attack, according to government announcements.

Less than 12 hours after the news reached Washington, U.S. carrier planes were on the way to North Vietnam for the first retaliatory bombing raids.

Tonkin Gulf

The Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, drafted by the administration and giving Johnson broad powers to conduct operations in Vietnam, passed Congress easily as a result of the destroyers' reports.

The Pentagon study says the U.S. air reprisal was "an important threshold in the war crossed with virtually no domestic criticism."

During these months, Johnson was campaigning for the presidency with professions of restraint in Vietnam while his opponent, Republican Senator Barry Goldwater, was urging heavy bombing of North Vietnam.

White House

At a White House strategy meeting in September, the Pentagon study reports, there was a general consensus that air strikes against North Vietnam were necessary early in 1965 but "tactical considerations" required a delay.

The study notes Johnson was "presenting himself as the candidate of reason and restraint" and the need for gaining "maximum public and congressional support."

The White House meeting rejected a plan put forward by McNaughton to provoke the North Vietnamese into actions that would justify air raids on the north.

Weak Point

The reason given was that the government of South Vietnam was weak and vulnerable, and such air strikes might bring Communist retaliation in the South. A memorandum by Bundy said that "by early October, however, we may recommend such actions."

When the Viet Cong struck the Bien Hoa airfield Nov. 1 with a devastating mortar attack, killing four Americans and destroying five B-57 bombers, the joint chiefs of staff urged strong reaction, including air raids on North Vietnam. Taylor, by this time ambassador in Saigon, suggested milder reaction, the bombing of selected targets in the North.

'Do Nothing'

The Pentagon account says the president disagreed and "apparently the decision was made to do nothing." At a White House meeting Johnson expressed concern that heavy air raids on the North might bring retaliatory strikes from North Vietnam or Red China against U.S. bases and civilians in South Vietnam.

Instead of taking action on the recommendations, Johnson named Bundy to head a group to draw up various political and military options for action against North Vietnam. The group met on Nov. 3, the day Johnson was elected by a landslide.

In a draft paper, Bundy said: "Bien Hoa may be repeated at any time. This would tend to force our hand, but also would give us a springboard for any decision for stronger action.

"The president is clearly thinking in terms of maximum use of the Gulf of Tonkin rationale, either for an action that would show toughness and hold the line until we can decide the big issue, or as a basis for starting a clear course of action under the broad options."

Bundy suggested Congress must be consulted before any major action although "we probably do not need additional congressional authority, even if we decide on very strong action."

At a Meeting

There was considerable disagreement at a meeting called later that month to consider the group's recommendations for bombing North Vietnam.

State Secretary Dean Rusk said that while he favored bombing the North he disagreed with Bundy and McNaughton that if the raids failed to save the weak South Vietnamese government "we would at least obtain international credit for trying."

"In his view," the report says, "the harder we tried and failed the worse our situation would be."

Three Days

The cabinet-level meeting resumed three days later when Taylor arrived from Saigon with a plan to increase air strikes gradually against North Vietnam. They would last two to six months during which Hanoi was expected to yield and agree to negotiate to end the war.

The recommendation was presented to Johnson. The Pentagon report notes that the president shared the view that "the threat implicit in minimum but increasing amounts of force (slow squeeze) would ultimately bring Hanoi to the table on terms favorable to the U.S."

The plan had not yet been put into effect when a Viet Cong attack on a U.S. military adviser compound at Pleiku in the central highlands in February prompted a U.S. raid by 47 jet fighter-bombers on Dong Hoi, a port 45 miles inside North Vietnam.

At the end of the month, the administration ordered Operation Rolling Thunder, the continuous bombing of North Vietnam on a rising scale, to begin.

"Official hopes were high that the Rolling Thunder program ... would rapidly convince Hanoi that it should agree to negotiate a settlement to the war in South Vietnam. After a month of bombing with no response from the North Vietnamese, optimism began to wane."

The Pentagon report says the United States had two options, to withdraw from Vietnam, leaving the South Vietnamese to their fate, or "to commit ground forces in pursuit of its objectives."

"A third option," the report continues, "that of drastically increasing the scope and scale of the bombing, was rejected because of the concomitant high risk of inviting Chinese intervention."

In June, Gen. William Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Vietnam, called for 200,000 troops to hold off defeat long enough to permit an American buildup.

"Swiftly and in an atmosphere of crisis," the Pentagon study says, Johnson gave his approval, and ordered the additional troops to South Vietnam in mid-July. The study adds that Johnson also ordered this decision concealed.

By the end of 1965 U.S. forces in South Vietnam totalled 184,314. Eventually the number was to go over 500,000.

Time for Sharp to Go

IN OTTAWA LAST WEEK External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp came remarkably close to accomplishing the impossible by almost stealing the national headlines from the federal-provincial constitutional conference in Victoria.

Mr. Sharp's near touch of fame was not brought about by some masterly stroke of diplomacy as might have been expected of a man in his vitally important position but through his continuing demonstration — and the best to date — of his utter ineptitude in the field of international affairs.

The public diary of events of last week clearly records the fact that Mr. Sharp is not only incapable of doing his job but may now be responsible for dangerously widening the credibility gap between his government and the public at large.

In summary this is what happened:

Monday, June 14: National press coverage given to revelation that a Canadian civil servant, Blair Seaborn, acted as a messenger to deliver a threatening Washington note to Hanoi in 1964.

Tuesday, June 15: External Affairs Minister Sharp admitted this was true and commented that it was done with the approval of the Canadian government "with the aim of helping to bring peace in the area."

Wednesday, June 16: External Affairs Minister Sharp denied that the United States sent notes to Hanoi by Blair Seaborn.

Thursday, June 17: External Affairs Minister Sharp told the House of Commons that Blair Seaborn carried messages to Hanoi in 1964 and 1965 "as an authoritative channel of communication with the United States."

Such backtracking and self-contradictions are not unusual among politicians but when such practices are put to use in the area of international politics they can lead to serious trouble at home and abroad.

Surely Mr. Sharp has embarrassed this nation and his own government enough for Prime Minister Trudeau to give serious thought to replacing him.

A Law We Don't Need

ANOTHER ATTEMPT to make verbal abuse of policemen a crime has been launched by Mayor Courtney Haddock. A resolution to this effect which was too late for last year's Union of B.C. Municipalities convention has been revived for consideration by Victoria's city council. The mayor's aim is to persuade the UBCM this year to ask the attorney-general to press for a change in the Criminal Code of Canada to make it an offence for any person to use grossly insulting or abusive language in addressing a police officer.

For four reasons, at least, the proposed resolution should be smacked down at council level.

- A law with wide-open loopholes is worse than no law at all. A policeman could still be grossly insulted by remarks addressed to someone else; by gestures, for that matter.
- Adequate provisions exist in law to deal with the use of foul language in public places and with obstructing the police.
- The police are quite capable of enduring "words and faces" without loss of dignity or public respect.
- And the resolution tends to suggest that the problem — if there is one — is most acute in Victoria, of all places. What atrocious advertising for good old quiet, polite, dignified but gracious Victoria!

Measuring Unemployment

STATISTICS CAN BE slippery building blocks, and once more we have an example. No one really knows how much unemployment there is in Canada, not only because methods of measurement are different, but because the unemployed are ill defined.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics uses a sampling system in estimating unemployment, and last summer Tommy Douglas, then the leader of the NDP, noted a continual discrepancy between the DBS figures and the reports on the number of unemployment insurance claims made during the same periods. He contended, and without being shown wrong, that there could be anything up to 250,000 more workers unemployed than accounted for in the DBS monthly statistics.

Now we have another challenge, in a way, to the DBS statistics. A special labor force study prepared for the bureau says that when work is hard to find, some of the unemployed become discouraged and stop looking for it.

In 1963, the study finds, when the national unemployment rolls represented 5.5 per cent of the labor force, about 100,000 persons gave up seeking jobs, and if they had been counted the rate would have been close to 7 per cent.

This suggests that the May unemployment rate of 6.3 just reported by the bureau might in truth be 8 per cent, counting those who despaired. The difference is in line with the discrepancy cited by Mr. Douglas. But how many really wanted or needed jobs? Who knows?

OUR READERS' VIEWS

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest, and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

Primitive Habit

IT is pleasing to note Victoria's improvement in culture and industry, but there is one situation which is distinctly primitive, and definitely not improving, that is LITTER.

The fine success of our people, mostly young, in the Walkathon was marred by the heavy litter drop; another otherwise successful activity, the Oak Bay Tea Party, was the scene of volume littering when large quantities were dumped within a few feet of receptacles. There is a daily drop on lawns, sidewalks and boulevards, the litterers not being by any means all young people, but the situation is likely to clear up of its own accord.

I suggest that householders gather up the litter tossed on their lawns and on adjacent sidewalks and boulevards. This service would have three obvious advantages, namely, the saving of municipal expense, the improvement of the appearance of our lovely city, and the setting of a good example to the primitive litterers.

Big Families

Having come very recently from Port of Spain, Trinidad, where 42 per cent of the population is under 15 years of age, or 62 per cent under 25, it is interesting and gratifying to read in the newspapers of the past few days that members of the CMA at their recent conference held in Halifax, debated and are in favor of both vasectomy — a minor operation for men in connection with sterilization — and having legislation regarding abortions changed.

Certainly the time has come when something needs to be done to control large families among the low-income group, among which are those with a low IQ.

In this connection I am reminded of an incident that happened some years ago when a dear friend of mine — a well-known local writer — was doing some volunteer work one Christmas which brought her in touch with the masses, and she had been pointing out to a man with a large family how much better it would be if he endeavored not to have so many children. He replied — good-naturedly — "Yes, we kind of makes an 'obby of it."

Proxies

The great rush of Canadian company annual reports is now ending. Shareholders usually get a handsome and very expensive brochure, even if the year was a poor one (as it was last year to so many fine companies). Common shareholders also receive a proxy on which to set forth their supposed approval of directors to be appointed and any other business before the annual meeting.

Now there is no way in which dissenting shareholders may express their wishes. You approve or you are out! Many of our Canadian companies are controlled by some other company or more rarely by family interests. Control means anything over 50 per cent of the voting shares (usually common shares). This information accompanies the proxy, probably a legal requirement. If more than 50 per cent of the voting shares are controlled by some other company or individuals, you might just as well throw your proxy in the waste-paper basket for the majority must prevail.

But it will cost your company plenty to pay the return postage on several thousand proxies. It shows your interest? Come now, only a lunatic would place his or her money in a company and immediately lose all interest in the matter.

Can we not end this appaling farce? Minority shareholders can, and do, write the company expressing their view. Perhaps they will get a very polite letter in reply but that doesn't cut much ice.

Hospitals

In this day and age when members of the pampered public make for the medicine man for little more than a mosquito bite ("on the house", meaning the B.C. Medical Plan) the minister of health and the hospitals has a terrible task trying to deal with more urgent demands.

Institutions are always hard pushed for beds when the ruination or rescue of health often hangs on time. For example: a young man of my acquaintance is under sentence of kidney damage while being kept waiting for months from last March until next September for a simple tonsilectomy operation; a matter of a few minutes on the operating table with possible discharge to home the next day. In later years he may well find that the end result of living with his present diseased tonsils may mean the kidney machine for him, according to a well-meant medical warning.

What a prospect this is for an otherwise healthy youth with his life before him, while millions of mony are being mucked away in industrial and other developments which might be, or ought to be, content to make it a little slower. It seems that the accent is too much on the making of money while wasting it by delay in trying to cope with the sickness of modern times.

Health in any circumstances, anywhere and everywhere, should always come first.

The Empire-Building Bureaucracy

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

YOU'D think that something's got to give in the years-long power struggle between Parliament and the bureaucracy.

If anything does have to give, it could be any real chance of Parliament, barring the totally unexpected, ever winning the struggle in the foreseeable future.

But what won't give — and for this you can thank your lucky democratic stars — will be the determination of Parliament to keep on trying.

Prime minister after prime minister has come to power swearing to break the rule of the bureaucrats and restore the authority of ultimate decision-making to Parliament where it properly belongs.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker publicly swore he would, but discovered he couldn't. And didn't.

Prime Minister Pearson never tried, for he was one of the bureaucracy's own.

Prime Minister Trudeau took the oath at a televised press conference — his first after coming to power — that where others had failed, he would succeed.

The power of Parliament and its elected members would be restored, he swore, and went into detail as to how he would strip the bureaucrats of their supreme authority as decision-makers by shuffling them around from department to department, commission to commission, board to bureau to agency so that none of them could remain long enough in any one place to build an empire.

But he didn't.

And nothing more has been heard of his good intentions.

Since, from time to time, this parliamentarian and that takes a run at it.

Among the latest to fight the good fight was former defence minister Paul Hellyer who said "probably as many as 50 per cent of the senior bureaucrats should be replaced."

They had been around too long, he said, come to so love power as to think Canada was contained within the confined boundaries of the national capital, recently widened to leap the Ottawa River to take in Hull. And so, he lamented, they had lost all touch with the real world.

Nothing, of course, happened as a result of his attack. Nothing has changed.

And now into the battle has come Maritime Conservative MP Lloyd Crouse of Nova Scotia's South Shore.

What makes a little difference and perhaps a change in parliamentary pattern is that Lloyd Crouse, unlike Paul Hellyer, is not a political hell-raiser.

He flies into no rages, uses no intemperate words, never raises his voice, speaks reasonably in almost conversational tones.

So what's he been saying about the decades-old issue of Parliament versus the bureaucracy?

Well, he's alarmed that the bureaucrats have raised their eyes beyond the boundaries of the national capital and have discovered the north, the deep north, the big Arctic.

And having stumbled across this previously unknown wilderness they see it as virgin territory where they can start from Day One "conducting," Lloyd Crouse warns, "a vast experiment in state socialism."

What else is contained in the Crouse bill of bureaucratic indictment?

He has found, as did so many other parliamentarians, that old bureaucrats not only never die — in the sense of being chopped from the taxpayer's payroll — but they even refuse to fade away.

Lloyd Crouse, a quiet, reasonable, entirely amiable man, mourns, after 14 years of watching the depressing process, that "even when a senior departmental officer makes a grave and costly error, he is not dismissed nor even demoted. He is moved and most likely promoted to serve as the assistant deputy in an old department or as the deputy minister of a new department whose activities in empire-building are only adding to our inflationary problems.

"The government is prisoner of the bureaucracy.

"By the time one of these mandarins has worked his way to the top, as did Jack Pickersgill" — who had the best of both worlds, appointing himself when a member of cabinet as the chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission — "he has lost touch with the people and the country.

"Money is no longer the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars, it is revenue to be collected and spent, and always a little more than was budgeted so that the budget can be increased again next year.

"Departmental programs are set up, not in terms of what they will do FOR the taxpayers, but on the basis of what they will do TO the taxpayers and FOR the department."

In the strange world of the federal civil service, went on Lloyd Crouse, competition is not for excellence in public service but for dollars and programs.

As a horrible example he cited the sad case of the fisheries department which grew to become the fisheries and forestry department, and now is to expand into the new department of the environment.

So what?

So the current finance department estimates show that 2,094 civil servants are on the fisheries and forestry payroll.

But when it becomes the department of the environment, charged Lloyd Crouse, the staff will number more than 13,000.

If his figure is inaccurate, nobody in cabinet challenged it when he dropped it, with a plunk, on the floor of the Commons.

But whether it is 10,000 or 5,000 it will be many, many more than the current 2,094, and by all government statements, one of the very biggest of the federal departments where bigness is best. So big, says Lloyd Crouse, that no existing building in Ottawa can accommodate the enormous staff — so they have to custom-build a huge new office tower.

British Colonies

Sense of Guilt Ebbing

By ANTHONY LEJEUNE
from London

THE Pakistan cricket team, touring England was asked to autograph a bat, which would then be auctioned to raise funds for the Bengal cholera victims. But the Pakistan High Commission in London forbade the cricketers to do so, on the grounds that it would be a political act.

Nothing could have been better calculated to shock British public opinion.

The immediate rights and wrongs of the political situation which erupted into this fearful catastrophe in East Pakistan are complex and controversial. But the longer-term cause undeniably is the crude partition of the Indian sub-continent performed by Britain's post-war Labor government in its anxiety to get out of India.

At least a million people were killed in racial massacres at the time. The deaths now must be added to that toll.

The total of suffering is literally unimaginable. And this is only part of a much larger and even more frightful score. The Nigerian civil war, the civil war still raging in the Sudan, the recent fighting in Ceylon, the reign of terror which prevails in Zanzibar — the list could be extended almost indefinitely; and every item has this in common with what is happening in Pakistan, that it is a direct consequence of the dissolution of the British Empire.

The process may have been inevitable, but it is surely by no means as clear now as it seemed to the Labor government 25 years ago that for Britain to abandon her empire as quickly as possible was both morally virtuous and an inmitigatedly good thing.

Nor are the consequences exhausted yet. Every trouble spot in Asia, Africa, and the Middle East is a cockpit which could become the scene of a global confrontation. Meanwhile, many of the West's great naval bases — Aden, Alexandria, Trincomalee — have not only been lost but made available for use by Soviet warships.

All this, of course, is an old story, which has long been irreversible. But in Britain certainly, and perhaps in other Western countries as well, the Nigerian civil war and now the horror of Bengal have begun to have a considerable effect on fashionable attitudes toward "the Third World."

The sense of guilt which Asian leaders like Nehru, aided and abetted by British and American liberals, succeeded in imposing on the conscience of the West may not quite have disappeared yet but is fast ebbing. And the claims of Afro-Asian neutralists to some kind of moral superiority seem hollow indeed.

There should now be an end to what was, in fact, a very insulting form of racialism — the willingness of Western liberals to accept, as natural and tolerable, behavior by Afro-Asians which they would regard as quite intolerable if perpetrated by whites. The West should also feel freer now to consult its own interests, whether over South African arms or immigration control or the allocation of economic aid, without excessive concern for the susceptibilities of Afro-Asian politicians.

Future historians may well be puzzled to understand why Western civilization, in the middle of the 20th century, suddenly and suicidally lost confidence in its own values. Perhaps the truth is that nations, like individuals, grow tired and bored.

Unfortunately the Russian Communists aren't tired and bored at all. And the Chinese Communists are only just starting to get interested.

North American Indians First Environmentalists

By DEE BROWN, from Urbana, Illinois

When a giant coal corporation recently approached the Navajos and Hopis for strip mining rights to Black Mesa on their Arizona reservation, the Indians' first concern was not the money they would receive, but the damage that might be done to their land.

No people in the United States need money more than these Indians, whose family incomes average less than $3,000 a year, yet they refused to sign until they secured a binding agreement that Black Mesa would be returned to them "in as good condition as received," the terrain replaced, and native vegetation replanted.

Even after this guarantee, a considerable number of tribesmen remain opposed to the deal, seeing it as a betrayal of the land left to them by their ancestors, and fearing the white man's curse of polluted water and air.

Ever since their first contact with invaders from Europe, American Indians have been puzzled by the white man's apparent contempt for the earth. Conservation has always been an important part of Indian culture, and their recorded history reflects this basic need to work in harmony with nature.

"The measure of the land and the measure of our bodies is the same," Joseph of the Nez Perce said in 1877. When he was asked to surrender Nez Perce land for settlement, he protested that he had no right to do so.

"The one who has the right to dispose of it is the one who has created it," he said, and then added prophetically: "We are contented to let things remain as the Great Spirit made them. The white men are not, and will change the rivers and mountains if they do not suit them."

Satanta of the Kiowas often scolded government bureaucrats for the settler's mistreatment of the Southern Plains environment. "This country is old," he told General Winfield Hancock, "but you are cutting off the timber, and now the country is of no account at all."

On another occasion he complained of how soldiers were stripping protective timber covers from the courses of vital streams, and of their slaughter of buffalo for sport. "Has the white man become a child," he asked, "that he should recklessly kill and not eat? When the red men slay game, they do so that they may live and not starve."

In Wyoming as early as 1867, the Crows protested the white man's destruction of their ecology. "Your young men have run over our country," Bear Tooth said to a group of commissioners from Washington.

It is ironic that after almost 500 years of attempting to destroy both the American earth and the civilization of the American Indian, the oppressors are discovering that they now need the Indian to save them from themselves.

America still has national forests, parks, and wilderness areas, but everywhere they are under growing pressures of destruction. Excessive timber cutting, reckless mineral exploitation, damming and pollution of wild rivers, extinction of wildlife — all proceed apace.

If the government could persuade various Indian tribes to take over protection of these last natural paradises, perhaps they could be saved.

There are many non-Indians who are ardent conservationists, of course, but non-Indians always seem to be making a conscious effort to respect the earth.

Indian respect for the earth is instinctive, and if we may judge from the past, the Black Hills would be much safer in the care of the Sioux than under government management. After all, the Black Hills are Sioux territory through the Treaty of 1868, and it would be especially fitting for Custer State Park to be protected by Indians.

Similarly the Cherokees, who exist just outside the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, might be persuaded to preserve that priceless area. The Crows and Cheyennes could save Yellowstone Park; the Nez Perce and Blackfeet could defend Snake River and Glacier Park; and the Iroquois what is left of New York State's parkland and forests.

Perhaps the tribes would not be willing to take on this formidable mission. In a way it would be like starting the Indian Wars all over again — for them to defend the nation's last natural treasures from descending hordes of vandals.

But the situation is desperate, and the government should use all powers of persuasion, even to guaranteeing the Indians a decent standard of living for their services.

This time instead of red men calling on the Great White Father, delegations of white chiefs may be journeying to the reservations to ask for help from the Great Red Fathers.

Only Women Can Save Endangered Animals

By LEONARD GREENWOOD
From Rio de Janeiro

Brazil has launched a determined attempt to save its dwindling wild animal population from extinction with a complete ban on commercial hunting.

But it will fail and animals such as the jaguar and the beautiful Brazilian otter will disappear unless women in North America, West Germany and Great Britain stop buying fur coats made from the pelts of these animals.

Zoologist Jose Candido de Melo Carvalho, assistant to the president of the Brazilian Institute of Forestry Development, said that with the ban and the steps it will take to enforce it, Brazil is doing virtually all it can to protect its wildlife.

"But we can't close all the gaps," he said. "Brazil is bigger than the United States. The Amazon and other wilderness areas form about 60 per cent of the country and there are thousands of miles of borders. We can't guard them all.

"If the demand continues, hunters will still shoot and men will still smuggle the pelts out through countries such as Columbia, which has no ban on exports.

"We are appealing to women all over the world," said Melo Carvalho. "Don't buy animal-skin coats. Man-made fabrics are better, cheaper and last longer. And they don't endanger rare animals."

Last year commercial hunters killed more than 17,000 spotted cats, including 856 jaguars, in the State of Amazonas alone. They also killed more than 50,000 wild boards, large numbers of otters, alligators and other animals.

Exports here estimated roughly the same numbers of animals were killed in the State of Para and thousands of others in the States of Mato Grosso, Goias, Amapa and the North-East.

"Slaughter on this scale can go on only a few more years before everything is wiped out," said Melo Carvalho.

Already, a long list of Brazilian animals is close to extinction, including several types of monkey, spotted and black jungle cats, the otter, wild dogs, two species of turtle and the tamandua, a gentle anteater resembling a small, shortlegged pony.

There are also at least 23 species of birds likely to disappear because of the huge trade in the capture and export of exotic birds.

The new ban has raised protests from the fur trade and its lobbyists. "Everybody says we're taking food out of the months of people in the forests," said Melo Carvalho.

"But we're really doing exactly the opposite. We're making sure they'll always have food. People who live in these areas will be able to get licenses to shoot for their own needs out of breeding season. But the commercial slaughter will end or at least it will be reduced."

When Is a Package Not a Package?

Bennett Saves Face

Ian Street

The charter which came out of the constitutional conference held here last week—according to Prime Minister Trudeau — represents neither victory nor defeat for any of the governments involved. But there is the matter of face-saving.

Starting close to home, what about Premier Bennett's defiant "no package deals" speech made on the opening day of the conference last Monday? He's understandably embarrassed by any reference to this now, since the charter is being presented to the 11 participating governments on an all-or-nothing basis.

The premier, however, is always willing to argue black is white on such issues because he feels a politician must save face. So, when this issue was raised at a press conference last Thursday morning Bennett claimed there had been no package deal because all of the so-called constitutional texts making up the charter had been agreed to by the first ministers on individual merit.

The text of Bennett's opening speech dealt with the topic as follows: "British Columbia is opposed to package deals for agreements conceived in that way usually do not last.

"Let us proceed with those matters on which we all can agree and leave for future discussion those matters on which we cannot now obtain agreement."

When asked if he didn't have some misgivings about the charter package, if only for the reasons stated in his text, Bennett replied, "I personally agree with every one of the provisions." But that really didn't answer the question. Even if B.C. was satisfied did all of the other provinces feel the same way?

Bennett's argument in opposition to any attempt to tag the charter as a form of package deal didn't really impress. He likened it to a person going into a grocery store and buying a number of items, each to meet a specific need, and then checking them all out together.

The whole thing fell to pieces, however, when someone suggested that if, in the circumstances outlined by the premier, the grocery shopper had decided to put back one item no store owner would then order him to put back all of the items.

That is what Trudeau has made clear will happen on this occasion.

After three years of meetings the patriation of the British North America Act and the formula for amending it in Canada hang upon the unanimous acceptance of a package agreed upon after three days of meetings here in Victoria. No further negotiation will be permitted. The answer must be yes or no.

In the case of B.C., despite the package nature of the charter agreement, there is little doubt that the answer will be a quick yes. So it is likely to be in almost all of the other provinces and although Trudeau refused to commit the federal government to a course of action Ottawa is expected to agree as well.

But what about Quebec? Premier Bourassa, non-committal here like all of his fellow first ministers, may have relatively little difficulty in persuading his cabinet to say yes.

But he is bound to run into strong opposition from nationalist elements in that province.

The reason, of course, is that Quebec came here with a demand for full control in the broad field of social policy, which means setting policies in a whole range of income security programs. And it wanted Ottawa to continue to contribute half the total cost of these programs after control had been handed over.

What Bourassa actually got in the charter package was an agreement that there would be a shared jurisdiction in at least three areas of social policy — family, youth, and occupational training allowances. There was no commitment at all on the question of federal transfer payments.

The result, Quebec observers agree, has been to back Bourassa and his government up against the wall. If he accepts the charter he's going to be in trouble at home, but rejecting it won't help either, as that will get Quebec into trouble with the rest of the country.

So he's going to have to argue that the new provisions for consultation with the provinces in vital areas of income security will open the way to a future guaranteed annual income plan.

The most effective way to fight poverty, and here Bourassa has strong support from Bennett and Ontario's Premier William Davis as well as Manitoba's Ed Schreyer, lies in a guaranteed annual wage. But Bourassa wants it to be a provincial plan, tied into the province's other social programs, because he claims Quebec is better able to determine its own people's needs.

There is no possibility, however, that Quebec can finance such a plan without transfer payments from Ottawa. Estimates of the cost to the province made public last January are $368 million a year with Ottawa matching this amount. But since then the figures have climbed to a total of $1 billion annually with Ottawa and Quebec paying half each.

Trudeau said bluntly Quebec could have the final say on such a plan if it wished but Ottawa wouldn't help pay for it.

A note of hope was contained in the statement of conclusions issued about midnight Wednesday when agreement was finally reached after 13 weary hours of discussion. It said an early meeting of first ministers will be held to discuss all aspects of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, including tax reform, shared-cost programs, equalization and tax-sharing.

But clearly Bourassa must show his good faith first by agreeing to the new Canadian charter. That, too, though Bennett pretends it doesn't exist, is part of the package.

Premier Bennett reports

JANUARY 16, 1971 — 788,000 British Columbians gainfully employed
MAY 22, 1971 — 841,000 British Columbians gainfully employed
53,000 more people at work

I wish to draw attention to my policy statement in my budget address presented in the Legislature on February 5, 1971, which reads as follows:

"It is our wish, it is our desire, it is our determination, that more jobs be created within British Columbia. The Government will not only take action on its own account, it will seek the co-operation of business, of labour, of all segments of the economy and especially from every citizen in this Province to bring this about. I want to stress that this is the minimum objective, let nobody say it is the maximum. The minimum objective this year is to increase the number of jobs of people gainfully employed from October 1, 1970 to October 1, 1971 by a minimum of 25,000."

Mr. Barrett, the leader of the opposition has asked publicly: "Where are the jobs Premier Bennett promised?"

I am glad to announce that in accordance with the latest figures of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, which have just been released, the number of people gainfully employed in British Columbia has increased by 53,000 between January 16, 1971 and May 22, 1971. Even compared to October 17, 1970, the number of British Columbians gainfully employed has increased by 37,000.

Our firm policy. My government believes that unemployment in British Columbia is still far too high, but in spite of the thousands still flocking to our province, unemployment has dropped by 21,000 from January 16, 1971 to May 22, 1971. The policies we have inaugurated in all sectors of the economy will hopefully reduce it much further. A huge expansion of activity in reforestation, hydro development, highway construction, Provincial parks and the extensions to the PGE is creating more new jobs for British Columbians every month.

Athabasca Sands Revival Rising Oil Demand Hope

Canada's Athabaska tar sands are coming to life again, says Petroleum Press Services of London in a feature article in its June edition.

It says the revival is due to the steep rise in cost of conventional crude and the growing need for new oil reserves.

The tar sands are estimated to hold over 300 billion barrels or half of the world's reserve of 600 billion barrels of conventional crude.

The magazine says the Alberta Conservation Board is expected to favorably consider the necessary increase in its current 150,000 barrels a day ceiling for total synthetic crude production.

The sands have been held back by two basic factors. One is the technical difficulty of extracting oil from the sand — the pioneering Great Canadian Oil Sands has already lost $52 million on its operation, and is still losing money.

The other was the lack of demand for Canadian crude. Here the position is rapidly changing as it becomes apparent that oil from the Alaska north slope will not start running for two or three years.

Meanwhile prices are rising and reserves are dwindling on the north American continent to encourage other oil giants to take another good look at the tar sands.

In addition to Great Canadian Oil Sands, owned by the U.S. Sun Oil, a consortium known as Syncrude is planning a second tar sand oil extraction plant and is aiming to increase its daily production from 80,000 barrels a day to 120,000 barrels.

Syncrude's operation is to be at Mildred Lake, 15 miles away from the Great Canadian operation at Fort McMurray. It will also use a different method of separation.

Syncrude is well-heeled, having Imperial Oil, Gulf Oil, Atlantic Richfield and Cities Services as its patrons.

The third group interested in development of the tar sands is Amoco, which has received permission to reactivate its suspended experimental operations at Gregoire Lake, 25 miles south of the Great Canadian plant.

Shell also has interests in the tar sands but so far it is showing no active interest further than informing its shareholders it is accelerating its tar sands efforts."

A reader asks if it would be a good thing at this stage to (1) transfer funds into Japanese yen (2) to invest in Japanese shares or (3) to buy into one or more of the Canadian-managed mutuals that are based on Japanese share portfolios.

How do you answer that?

Three current reasons exist why Japanese investment is attracting attention particularly in British Columbia.

The first is that speculative action is placing the Japanese currency in a position that even the all-potent government of that country may find it difficult to prevent upvaluation.

The second is that Japan has become one of this province's biggest customers, as well as a provider of capital for various natural resource development.

The third is that some stocks on the Tokyo Stock Exchange have in recent months performed extremely well.

With the yen in strict government control it seems hardly likely that it will be pushed upward by purely speculative money market activity.

There must also be some question as to the extent the Japanese economy can grow on its export trade before meeting with restrictions compulsory or voluntary from its trading partners. A case in point is the Japanese agreement to hold the line on export of low cost textiles to the U.S. market.

Further the investment of money in foreign stocks always carries an element of risk which has nothing to do with the domestic economy, and which where estates are concerned can be troublesome and complicated in tax settlements.

On the other hand those who are accustomed to holding foreign currency or securities will take these problems in their stride, and who is to say that they might not be right?

But it does not look like a venture for the non-expert, the casual investor, or the widow with her mite.

Brain Bind

It is perhaps only natural that the professional computer service companies should claim. They can do the computer business for the average corporation at a lower over-all cost than those who own (or lease) and operate their own electronic data processing equipment.

Be that as it may, a considerable volume of opinion is that many firms have installed more expensive computer hardware than they require, and in addition are not able to use it on the multi-shift system that is really necessary to make it pay.

Besides computer costs, programing managers and technicians are expensive and in short supply. Many of them who qualified in the use of older equipment are not trained to get the most out of the new more effective machinery.

Also corporation with its own computer department is usually completely in the hands of the EDP manager. Who knows if he is strictly honest, and if he is actually making the very best use of the equipment for his firm's requirements. How much of the programming he sets out is vital or even of any economic use?

Aled Adams, a management consultant in Toronto recently put it this way.

The Canadian bill for computers in 1970 ran to $816 million of which $288 million was for rentals.

Only 20 per cent of the installations have made a real contribution to the user, says Adams.

For 40 per cent it has done no harm, but also no good.

For another 20 per cent they are paying more than they did before to do the same old thing.

Adams concludes that Canadian computer users lose about $300 million annually that they cannot clearly justify. "A most expensive but not a very exclusive club. Perhaps they should be called losers not users."

One of the local EDP professional firms which provides custom computer services to government and private enterprise customers, claims it is saving them from many of the traps of self-operation described by Adams.

Credit Cracks

I don't know where Bob Ellis, manager of the Credit Bureau of Victoria, picked it up, but his front page editorial in this week's issue of Credit Bureau News takes some delightful pokes at our so-called business efficiency experts.

This is his glossary of some over-used business terms:

"It is in process" — So wrapped in red tape that the situation is practically hopeless.

"We will look into it" — By the time the wheel makes a full turn, we assume you will have forgotten about it, too.

"A Program" — An assignment that can't be completed by a phone call.

"Expedite" — To confound confusion with commotion. (I like that one, its pure Victoria.)

"Channels" — The trails left by inter-office memos.

"Co-ordinator" — A guy with a desk between two expediters.

"Consultant or expert" — Any guy more than 50 miles from home.

"To activate" — To make carbons and add more names to the memo.

"To implement the program" — Hire more help to expand the office.

"Under consideration" — We're looking in the files for it.

"Under active consideration" — Never heard of it.

"Meeting" — A mass mulling of master minds.

"Conference" — A place where conversation is substituted for the dreariness of labor and loneliness of thought.

"Negotiate" — To seek a meeting of the minds without knocking the heads together.

"Re-orientation" — Getting used to working again.

"Reliable source" — The guy you just met.

"Informed source" — The guy who told the guy you just met.

"Unimpeachable source" — the guy who started the rumor originally.

"Clarification" — To fill the background with so many details that the foreground goes underground.

"We are making a survey" — We need more time to think of an answer.

"Note and initial" — Let's spread the responsibility for this.

"See me and let's discuss" — I assume you are as confused as I am.

"Let's get together on this" Come down to my office, I'm lonesome.

"Give someone the picture" A long, confused and inaccurate statement to a newcomer.

New Brew

In a last ditch attempt to beat the liquor advertising deadline — Sept. 1 — Mountain Brewery of Creston is introducing a new high quality beer this month and is backing it up with a full-fleged advertising campaign.

After that the beer like all others in the province will have to stand on its own merits. However Mountain Brewery is calling the beer "Blake's" after the company's new president H. W. Blakley so that he will henceforth be a "walking promotion" for the brand. The explanation is that of the PR firm handling the deal — not mine.

Site Improves

Desert Rats of the Second World War will remember the name Mersa Matrouh but the men of Alexander's and Montgomery's armies will hardly recognize its current description as a famous Egyptian vacation resort.

They will more likely remember it as an uninviting oasis watered by two brackish wells and perhaps one of the turning points in the great North African campaign.

Now even as a holiday resort Mersa Matrouh has been without a good drinking water until now. The Alexandria water authority which is responsible for MM's supply has bought a U.S. electrodialysis water treatment plant from Ionics Inc.

Now the visiting shahs and their harems can stay on the water wagon safely with a 65,000 gallons a day assured supply.

Bouquets, Brickbats

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bouquets for Finance Minister Benson's federal budget and tax-reform proposals just about balanced out the brickbats as business leaders, trade union officials, government economic experts and politicians spent the weekend wading through thick copies of both documents.

The private sector liked what many corporate executives interpreted as the defeat of Benson's earlier and highly controversial white paper on tax reform. And the industrialists politely swallowed the capital gains tax with reluctant resignation.

On the other hand, spokesmen for organized labor said the budget does a great deal for business and Liberal federal election chances, but little to cure an ailing economy characterized by an unemployment rate in excess of six per cent of the labor force.

Predictably, none of the opposition parties liked what they saw in Benson's budget, though some specific sections did earn faint praise from Progressive Conservative, NDP and Social Credit spokesmen.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield called for Benson's resignation. He said the finance minister should have chopped personal income taxes by six per cent across the board, instead of merely killing of the three-per-cent surtax effective July 1.

Budget Poll Balances

Benson's rejection of some of the "nuttier" white paper schemes "might restore some confidence" in the business community, said Stanfield, but the budget and new reforms contain no substantial fiscal incentives to stimulate the economy.

Echoing the sentiments of labor, NDP Leader David Lewis said the budget and new laws mean the Liberal government "is still treating the big corporations with kid gloves."

"In the end result the working man will pay at least as much tax as he does now, and probably more, because of new taxes on medicare payments and unemployment insurance benefits."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette summed up the government's fiscal message as:

"Let's help the rich stay rich and the poor stay poor."

"It' definitely not a budget that will stimulate the economy." Caouette told reporters. "Corporate profits will go up but this won't create any new jobs."

At the provincial level, most of the nation's premiers endorsed the wider tax exemptions in the budget but were sharply divided according to political stripe on such other matters as increased financing for provincial governments.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa ducked immediate comment, as did Ontario's Premier William Davis, who said he wanted to take a long, hard look at the budget before offering an opinion.

The toughest talk came from Premier Ed Schreyer. The Manitoba New Democrat said the budget contained no significant reforms and Mr. Benson virtually ignored the recommendations of the Carter commission on taxation for a complete overhaul.

Schreyer said Benson's decision to drop estate tax was "a great and almost shocking error" because it gives the heirs to wealth a better break than those who built up fortunes through "personal effort and shrewdness."

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, a harsh critic of Benson's earlier white paper, had praise for most of the budget and called it "all in all, a fairly reasonable package."

Alberta Premier Harry Strom said he was generally satisfied with the relief provided taxpayers and characterized it as an election budget.

However, he said he was somewhat disappointed that the federal government didn't take a more liberal approach to the financial situation of mining and natural resource industries — a theme echoed by his three western colleagues.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia took credit for Benson's decision to alter major proposals in his earlier white paper.

Not for Homeowners

Today Could Be V-Day Tomorrow

OTTAWA (CP) — Trembling homeowners, relax; V-Day is not for you.

But V-Day — Valuation Day — may be bad news to others who have property subject to the new capital gains tax announced Friday by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. The capital gains tax is new to Canada and would apply to income from sale of stock, antiques and other personal assets.

Benson told the Commons that a day for evaluating assets will be set some time before next Jan. 1. The actual date will be announced after it has passed.

Capital gains or losses from later sales of personal assets will be measured against Valuation Day figures. Gains will be taxable.

The finance minister said the government has decided to reject the tax white paper proposal that would have made homes subject to a capital gains tax.

Under the new plan, there will be no gains tax on a taxpayer's principal residence. An acre of surrounding land will also be exempted.

This could bring little joy to a farmer with considerably more than one acre of land so Benson announced an alternative especially for farmers.

Farmers will be able to choose between Benson's plan and the white paper suggestion which provided for exemption of profits of up to $1,000 annually. It also allowed actual improvements or a flat $150 per year.

The rule for taxable assets is that one-half of capital gains will be included in income and taxed at ordinary rates.

One-half of capital losses may be deducted from taxable capital gains.

Taxpayers may also deduct up to $1,000 of deductible capital losses from other income.

If a taxpayer plans to sell a painting or another item of personal property, it must be valued at more than $1,000 beiore it is taxable. It also must be something that increases in value.

The value of an asset may dip below its original cost by Valuation Day and rise again later.

Suppose an item was bought for $1,300, valued on V-Day at $1,100 and sold for $1,400. Would the taxpayer have to pay on the difference between $1,100 and $1,400?

No. He would only have to pay a gains tax on the difference between $1,300 and $1,400. The government would permit him to choose the original cost figure rather than the V-Day value.

But if the same taxpayer had a capital loss on the item, he would have to measure it against the lower of the original cost or the value of the asset on Valuation Day.

The assets of taxpayers leaving Canada will be taxed as if they were sold. The first $5,000 of capital gains would be exempt.

But this will not hit persons who may have to leave Canada for temporary duty elsewhere. They will be permitted to defer payment of gains taxes until the year the assets are actually sold.

A Choice?

A funeral is a highly personal event but families experiencing bereavement are today often confused about the choice of service that is available to them. People have been misled to believe that there are only two choices available to them—a high cost funeral of dignity, or a low cost service in which disposition is made in the quickest way.

Traditional funeral directors take into account the individuality of people and serve this individuality by making a variety of services available at a wide price range. We do not believe as do some of the new "societies" that everyone is alike. At Hayward's Funeral Chapel, we invite you to come in for a personalized consulation at no cost. There is no society membership fee required to obtain the type of service you wish.

Alaska Agreeable

New Otter Transfer Considered by B.C.

A third transplant of sea otters from Alaska to the B.C. coast may be in the offing for next summer.

Judd McKay of the provincial fish and wildlife branch said in an interview last week there is "no immediate urgency" for a further tranplant at this time, but the possibility is being considered.

Alaska officials are agreeable, he said.

If it happens, it will be the third such transfer of the animals in an attempt to re-establish a breeding colony off B.C. Twenty-nine were released off Bunsby Island in July, 1969, and an additional 14 the following year.

Since the start of the experiment, there have been 16 official sightings of the animals, he said With the exception of a large group sighted in the release area within a week of the last transplant, however, not more than two have been seen at one time.

"It is significant that no evidence of a colony being established has come to light and no evidence of young," McKay said.

The only known casualty to date has been a juvenile sea otter that was among the original group released, but the official said this did not rule out further deaths.

"It would be very unlikely that we would find a corpse," he said. "There is not that much travelled coastline here. It is a different situation from in Washington where there are roads by the coast."

McKay said fish and wildlife personnel are also considering the possibility that a breeding colony does not appear to have been established because the animals are swimming back to Alaska.

"They may have a homing instinct we don't know about," he said. "We may be hurting these animals by moving them."

Any plans for another transplant could possibly include some arrangements for tagging the animals to see whether or not they do return, he said. The difficulty with such a plan would be that sea otters have a very delicate thermal balance.

"Any disturbance, we feel, is lethal," he said. "We decided we would try to harass them as little as possible."

Sea otters are native to the entire north Pacific Coast, but were wiped out along the coasts of Washington, Oregon and B.C. in the last century by overhunting.

The transplant attempts have included releasing animals along the U.S. states' coasts as well as B.C.

The experiment there has been a success thus far, at least to the extent that both states believe a majority of the otters released along their coasts are still alive.

The B.C. release site, said McKay, is a more suitable area to serve as habitat for the animals than the American coastline.

Sally Ann's Court Representative

'Friendly Hand' Leaving

By BRUCE LOWTHER

"Brigadier Rankin is a practising Christian without making a lot of fuss about it — and I can't think of a more splendid disciple."

Those words were spoken Friday in Victoria Provincial Court by senior Judge William Ostler of Brigadier Marsland Rankin, who was marking his final day of about five years as Salvation Army representative in the court.

In wishing Rankin a long life, good health and happiness, the judge said "the officers, the staff and the habituees of the courtroom will certainly recognize the tremendous contribution that this humane and compassionate man has made."

Time and again, he added when the court was hard pressed to find a way to help accused persons, "this kindly man has arisen and extended a friendly hand to the derelict, the disadvantaged and the forlorn, no matter how unattractive they may be."

Prosecutor John Macintyre spoke for the bar in supporting the judge's remarks, which included the word "outstanding."

In a later interview, Rankin said: "He used that word about me but that's the word you'd have to use about that man.

"My motivation is reflected in the Scripture: 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me.' That to me has been the force that enabled me to warrant what the judge said."

A native of Glace Bay, N.S., George Marsland Rankin was the son of two Salvation Army oficers and he and his wife have about 84 years of service between them.

He was commissioned (ordained) in Toronto 36 years ago next Friday and his duties since his arrival in 1966 have included that of visiting Protestant chaplain at the William Head minimum security prison and Legal Aid representative in court.

Rankin

Rankin and his wife Sadie will leave next week for Toronto, where he will do similar work until he retires Nov. 7, his 65th birthday. They have two children, Mrs. Barbara Clarke of Oshawa and Robert, who recently graduated from UBC as a Bachelor of Education.

The brigadier, who will be succeeded by Brigadier Ivan Jackson of Calgary, said he will miss most his "congregation" at William Head — "There's a great interest in religion there."

His last formal duty in this area will be his sermon at the prison this morning.

Did he have any regrets? "Oh, no." Like never being a rich man? "I am rich."

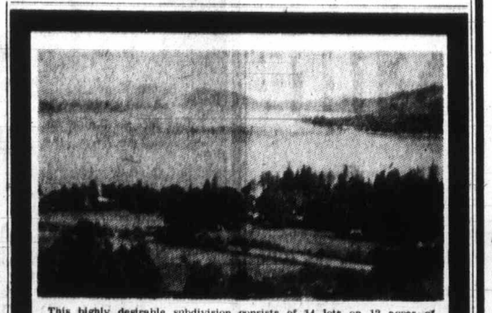
Top Honors Captured By Victoria Apprentices

Apprentices from Victoria's Local 1598, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, captured top honors in the annual provincial apprentices' competition, held Friday and Saturday in Vancouver.

Fourth-year apprentices Chris Cottier, 1516 Redfern and Keith Clark, 1909 Darwin, took first and second places, respectively, in the carpentry division while Tom Louden and Mike Bullock, 1237 Oscar, won first and third places in the millwork division.

Cottier and Louden will now represent the province at the international competition to be held in Detroit in August. Cottier's brother, Peter, was the B.C. representative to the international last year in Denver, Colo., where he placed fifth.

The competition includes a four-hour written test and eight hours of work on an actual project. Jim Sawyers, Local 1598 business agent, will be one of two Canadians selected as judges for the Detroit competition.



This highly desirable subdivision consists of 14 lots on 12 acres of slightly sloping land in the delightful scenic setting of the Ardmore district. Most lots have an open sea view on Saanich Inlet and have access to public roads. The size of the lots varies from .71 acres to 1.08 acres; the area is available for immediate building and has electricity, telephone and water. School bus stops at drive-way entrance. They are situated a short distance from Sidney shopping centre, international airport and ferries to mainland and Gulf Islands.

The distance to both the Glen Meadow Golf Club (18 holes) and the Ardmore Golf Club (9 holes) is less than a mile.

This is the first time that these lots have been offered for sale. They offer a splendid opportunity for building a country home in the exclusive rustic setting of Ardmore far away from the turmoil, pollution and unrest of modern city life. For those who like to acquire an ideal piece of land for later retirement, as well as capital protection against inflation, a five year, 10% p.a. financing plan is available for part payment of purchase price. Kennedy Road Romps In Near Record Time

TORONTO (CP) — Kennedy Road, a prohibitive favorite at 2 to 5, pulled away in the stretch Saturday to win the 112th running of the Queen's Plate.

The bay colt owned by Mrs. Art Stollery was pulling away from Fabe Count, a 30-to-1 shot. Great Gabe, who went to the post at odds of 50 to 1, was third.

The winning time of 2:03 was a tenth of a second off the race record of 2:02 set by Victoria Park in 1960.

Of the nine horses in the field, six went off with the odds in double figures.

It was the smallest field since 1964 when the immortal Northern Dancer won over a field of seven adversaries.

The victory was worth $54,388.75 to Kennedy Road's owners and $2.90, $2.70 and $2.70 to his backers.

Fabe Count's second-place finish paid owner Malcolm Smith $16,735 and $9.90 and $5.60 for each $2 bet on him to place and show.

Great Gabe picked up $8,367.50 for owner Saul Wagman. He paid $9 to show.

Fourth place was worth $4,183.75 to W. Preston Gilbride, who purchased Cool Moon about two months ago.

Kennedy Road, a raw-boned son of the race record-holder, was raced well by jockey Sandy Hawley, who has had trouble controlling the big bay in the past.

Off the pace until well into the back stretch, Kennedy Road came on to take the 1¼-mile classic by about three lengths.

Only Kennedy Road, Speedy Zephyr and Chatty Cavalier went to the post with odds below double figures. Chatty Cavalier finished sixth and Speedy Zephyr eighth.

Briartic was fifth, Lord Vancouver seventh and Winter Holiday, the greatest longshot at 80 to 1, ninth and last.

Bombers Add Another Trio

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League have added three newcomers to their training-camp roster.

Latest additions are Ed Mitchell, 23-year-old, 220-pound fullback, halfback Al Thomas and Canadian-lineman Jim Norris.

Mitchell, from University of Arizona, has played two seasons in the Continental League while Thomas is from the University of Maryland.

It's Brandon

Rudy Pilous, who coached Victoria Maple Leafs after winning Stanley Cup with Chicago Black Hawks, has been confirmed as executive general manager of Brandon Wheat Kings of Western Canada Hockey League. Pilous, with Denver Spurs of Western Hockey League last season, will work with Gerry Brisson, who remains as general manager and coach. Announcement ended speculation that Pilous might take job as manager-coach of Vancouver entry in WCHL.

Soccer Vets Pant Way To 2-2 Draw

Victoria and Vancouver team battled to a 2-2 tie before a crowd of about 100 at Royal Athletic Park Saturday in the first match of the annual two-game, total-goal soccer series for the Oldtimers' Trophy.

Victoria dominated play in the first half and led, 1-0, on a goal by centre-forward Ian Harris until just before half time, when left-winger Andy Keavener equalized for Vancouver.

Right-half John Craig put Vancouver into a 2-1 lead early in the second half as the visiting team took control but inside-left Charley Mills got the tying goal three minutes from the end.

South Africa Takes Series

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — France and South Africa played to a 8-8 tie in their second Rugby Union test Saturday. The visitors led 8-0 at half time.

Each team had one try, one conversion and one drop goal. The Springboks captured the two-game test series by winning a week ago, 22-9, at Bloemfontein. France won all seven provincial matches, however.

CP Pairing Takes Trophy

Ada Sylvester and Jill McLellan of the Canadian Pacific Lawn Bowling Club defeated Jessie Kinneard and Marie Sage of the Burnside club, 15-11, in the final of the Butchart Rose Bowl women's doubles competition.

Cec Sarles and Pearl Fevang scored a 16-8 win over Francine Linders and Muriel Bradley in an all-Lake Hill "B" section final.

Get the feeling of driving a Grand Prix car Automatically

At last there's a 3-speed automatic transmission that lets you feel you're still driving the car with your own two hands. It's now available on the new Fiat 124S Sedan.

Somehow, it makes the tough 1438 cc. rally proven engine seem just as lively as it would with a stickshift. And of course, there's still the four wheel disc brakes, and superb cornering and handling ability that you find in every Fiat.

So no longer does a car have to automatically lose pep when it becomes automatic.

Lack of Canadian Talent Big Problem for Lions

Jim Tang

SCOTTY BOWMAN, who had returned to his old organization before Montreal Canadiens had completed Stanley Cup play, is on quite a spot. Not only won't he have Jean Beliveau and John Ferguson in the lineup but he is quite aware that the three Montreal coaches before him — Toe Blake, Claude Ruel and Al MacNeil — all won the Stanley cup in their first season with Canadiens . . . and if Bowman hadn't agreed to go with Canadiens, the club would have gone all out to get Harry Sinden . . . mutuel play at Exhibition Park is reported to be down about eight per cent from last year. It's the first downward trend for some time but some of it can be blamed on weather which still has to catch up with the season . . . Saturday's lacrosse telecast was a bit on the disappointing side. The first period provided excellent action but it was a bit dull from there with Salmonbellies doing little more than was necessary to contain the uninspired Adanacs . . . Maury Wills has let it be known that he is going after a managerial job but it's likely that the first black manager in major league baseball will be Frank Robinson . . . Coby Lobbesoo has been out of hospital for some time now and, of course, is thinking mainly about a return to bowling . . . there are 400 public tennis courts in Sydney, Australia, a figure which isn't too far from the Canadian total . . . Michael Bonallack, champion in 1968, 1969 and 1970, had won 27 consecutive matches in the British Amateur golf championship when he was eliminated from the 1971 event . . . the provincial senior baseball championship will be held at Nelson on July 30 and 31 and Aug. 1 . . . last season was the most financially successful yet for the Victoria Curling Club, due largely to increased summer rentals . . . it's too bad that Whitey Severson decided to give up refereeing. The Western Lacrosse Association could use him — and a few more like him . . . the Sportsmen's Curling League will operate again next season and with much interest already evident those who played last season should get in touch with their skips sometime before mid September to make certain they're counted in . . .

JOAN LAWSON, medalist in the 1971 city championship, and Margaret Todd, the defeated finalist, are outstanding candidates for the B.C. team which will play in the senior women's inter-provincial team matches. It's a new event, and scheduled to be held in the Toronto area if preliminary information is correct . . . Mike Woodley has been assigned to San Diego Gulls of the Western Hockey League by Philadelphia Flyers, who also sent along some forward-line sock in George Swarbrick and Earl Heiskala . . . Tom Druce, fearing a claim and curious to find out just how good his young thoroughbred is, entered Shadows Dividend in an allowance race last week. The result was reasonably promising, Shadows Dividend finishing a moving fourth in a six-and-a-half furlongs which produced the fast time, for an off track, of 1:18 2-5 . . . Ike MacKay, who should be playing for Victoria Royals, is reported planning to line up with Vancouver Spartans after failing to come to an agreement with the Island Western Canada Soccer League club . . . reports reaching here say that when Ron Butlin resigned as president of the Western Canada Hockey League he beat dismissal by about 72 hours . . . and while there are some points to be settled, such as the demand by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association for jurisdiction over the B.C. teams, it is reasonably certain that Victoria Cougars, New Westminister Royals and the new Vancouver Nats will be members of the WCHL before the next season . . . if there are no pre-conceived ideas on Tom Wilkinson having a lock on the job it is entirely possible that a fellow called Bob Naponic could surprise in the quarterback sweepstakes being conducted by B.C. Lions. He's 24, around 200 pounds, and played college football at University of Illinois . . . a feature of the Canadian Football League all-star game this year will be half-time sprints featuring a candidate from each of the nine clubs. Jim Young of B.C. Lions, John Wydareny of Edmonton Eskimos, Ted Duchinsky of Saskatchewan Roughriders, Paul Brule of Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Hugh McKinnis of Calgary Stampeders will run in one 50-yard heat to decide the Western Conference champion for the final. The other finalists will come from a race between Garney Henley of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Bill Symons of Toronto Argonauts, Hugh Oldham of Ottawa Rough Riders and Merle Code of Montreal Alouettes.

ANDY HEBENTON, who'll be 42 in October, is reported to have already signed a playing contract for next season with Portland Buckaroos. It will be his 23rd season in professional hockey . . . another report from Portland says that Gord Fashoway is staying on as coach . . . Winnipeg Whips of the International Baseball League have, fittingly enough, an outfielder named Red Canada. The Whips also have some financial troubles. Attendance has averaged only about 1000 per game and it is costing the Winnipeg club about $160,000 a season to help defray the travelling expenses of the other clubs. The projected loss (to the parent Montreal Expos) for Winnipeg's first two seasons is $500,000 . . . and the Expos are also having trouble, particularly in Montreal, with Los Angeles Dodgers. In 15 appearances in Montreal the Dodgers have never scored fewer than five runs and have lost only three times . . . and then there are the Houston Astros, who have already played 14 games this season in which the score was 2-1. They've lost nine of them . . . Los Angeles football writer Bob Oates says that quarterback Roman Gabriel of the Los Angeles Rams has a contract which calls for $200,000 a year. If correct and figuring that the Rams will have the ball for 30 minutes a game, Gabriel will earn about $475 for each minute he's not sitting on the bench . . . presuming, of course, that he plays every minute on offence . . . to get the right to take the spot held by California Golden Seals in the first round of the 1971 NHL amateur draft, Montreal Canadiens gave up forward Ernie Hicke and their first-round choice in 1970. That means they got Guy LaFleur for Hicke, who scored 22 goals and had 25 assists for the Seals last season, and Barry Oddliefson, and until LaFleur proves himself as good as expected, no one can say that the Seals were rooked on that deal . . . there's a report from Vancouver that the interest rate on the loan made by Capozzi Investments to Medicor is 18 per cent instead of the 15 per cent reported. In any event, it will be surprising if Vancouver Canucks do not wind up with the Canadian ownership which was so desired . . .

A Cheerful Picture

Trainer Sid Watters, left, and Dr. Mark Gerard view x-ray picture of broken leg suffered by Hoist The Flag in a March 31 workout. Dr. Gerard stated that the broken cannon bone and long pastern are almost completely healed. Hoist The Flag who is looking on, was considered the leading three-year-old prospect in the U.S. and had been favored to win the Kentucky Derby.

Keys Plans for Ball-Control Game But Defensive Needs a Real Worry

VANCOUVER (Special) — Miracle-worker or not, Eagle Keys cannot part the waters, turn water to wine, or make seven first-string Canadians into the 11 he must have.

Right there hangs the problem that could haunt B.C. Lions in the coming football season.

BARELY SEVEN

There are 74 players in training camp and 34 of them are non-imports. But only the seven — Dave Easley, Trev Ekdahl, Greg Findlay, Dave Golinsky, Lach Heron, Bob Howes and Jim Young — are people Keys knows could be starters.

Even among them there are a couple of cases where it will be a matter of playing out of necessity.

That's why there'll be no trading Young for Dave Raimey, Mel Profit or anyone else unless a few Canadian starters are thrown in. In this camp, Canadians who can start are like unto gold.

Last year the Lions were hampered by the fact that their two kickers, Ted Gerela and Ken Phillips, were specialists who could play no other positions. To keep them, they had to release people like Jim Heighton and Ray Watrin, who are playing first-team elsewhere.

It's the same situation this year, worsened by the retirement of defensive-tackle Wayne Dennis, a starter who hasn't got over last year's abdominal muscle tear and has left camp.

The situation didn't take Keys and Jackie Parker by surprise. They've concentrated this year on bringing the import roster up to par with the rest of the Canadian Football League. They'll live with the Canadian problem until 1972, when half a dozen good ones graduate from U.S. colleges.

JIGSAW PUZZLE

They're happy enough with the import recruiting but hamstrung by the fact that 11 Canadians have to play somewhere. No matter which way they look it gets down to that. For example:

Keys would like to go with two, big, import tight ends, use Young as a running back for the outside stuff, and run Jim Evenson and either A. D. Whitfield or newcomer Josh Ashton of Tulsa. In effect, a ball-control offence.

But even if he used a Canadian flanker, that would mean seven imports on offence, and Keys has said again and again he feels the big problem will be defensive. It's more likely, particularly with the loss of Dennis, that he'll have to use seven imports on defence.

TWO IS ALL

In that defence, the only Canadians he knows for certain can play are Findlay at one corner-linebacker and Easley at safety. Others, like second-year end Gary Robinson, veteran-back Barrie Hansen and two Simon Fraser University rookies — end George Anderson and defensive-back Brian Donnelly — will simply have to do.

One key to the problem could be Lefty Hendrickson, the laughing man from Squamish, who has been at tight-end for two years and will be tried as a linebacker.

Hopefully, the Lions would wind up with Anderson and Robinson at the ends, Findlay and Hendrickson on the corners and Easley and Donnelly in the backfield.

That puts only six imports on defence, which would allow Keys to go with his two import tight ends. The prospect has been drooling, since he's got Jim White (six-foot four, 245) from Colorado State; Don Alley (six-two, 215) who did two years with Baltimore Colts, and Lloyd "Big Train" Edwards, who stands six-foot four and currently weighs in at 275. The one-time Detroit Lion will pare to 250 if he expects to stay.

Still, everything pivots on that thin line of Canadians. If Hendrickson can't play linebacker, there'll be no choice but to put him back at one end and play another import defensively. Unless, of course, there's a rookie around who becomes a lot better than his scouting report.

It's much, much too early and the team entirely too large to start placing rookie imports but there are a few indicators.

Tom Cassese, who ripped a knee in training camp last year and didn't play a game, is back running those beautifully-precise pass cuts again. If there is an import flanker, it will be Cassese or John Love, a speed merchant who had a try-out at mid-season and was told to come back.

In that case, Cassese would be a defensive back since Keys rates him an all-star either way.

Ashton, drafted eighth by Boston Patriots, looks as though he could give Whitfield a go at running back and there's a kid named Jim Holtfield who stuck two years with New York Giants as a defensive back who is going to take some beating.

Until the hitting starts, the linemen are just a bunch of fat guys standing around flexing muscles at each other. Keys claims there are a couple of good ones in there somewhere to pursue the likes of John Stucky, Garrett Hunsperger, Ken Sugarman and Max Huber, the four incumbents.

As for quarterbacks, that's a story still to be told. It should be better than the tale of the last few years.

Athletics Appear Set For Division Honors

Oakland Athletics, with the best record in the majors, are looking more and more like winners in the American League West.

The Athletics didn't have Vida Blue or Chuck Dobson on the mound Saturday but got combined two-hit pitching from John "Blue Moon" Odom and reliever Darold Knowles in a 2-0 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

It was Oakland's fourth straight win and increased their lead over runner-up Kansas City Royals to seven games.

Odom, making his sixth start since recovering from elbow surgery, allowed only an infield hit by John Briggs through five innings but left when Brewers loaded the bases with none out in the sixth inning.

Knowles came on to retire the next three batters on a strike out, short fly ball and groundout and then threw three more hitless innings.

Dave Duncan doubled in a run in the second inning and Reggie Jackson hit his 13th home run in the ninth to send outlucked Bill Parsons to his fifth straight loss despite a five-hitter.

ORIOLES STOPPED

Baltimore Orioles had their lead cut to four games in the Eastern Division when they lost to New York Yankees, 6-4, on Felipe Alou's two-out triple in the 11th inning and Detroit Tigers closed with a 5-3 win over Cleveland Indians.

Royals were stopped by California Angels, 7-4, controversial Alex Johnson breaking a 4-4 deadlock with his second home run of the season.

Giants Fight Off Hurrying Dodgers

San Francisco Giants appear to have ended their annual June slump and are holding off the fast-moving Los Angeles Dodgers in what has developed into a two-club race in the National League West.

After a sensational five-run rally in the ninth inning Friday night had given them a double-header sweep, the Giants made it three in a row over San Diego Padres, winning by 7-4 on Saturday.

That kept them five and a half games in front of the Dodgers, who got a one-hit pitching job from Don Sutton to take Houston Astros, 4-0.

It was the seventh win in eight games and 16th in the last 21 games for the resurgent Dodgers, who had seemed hopelessly out of competition three weeks back.

Willie Mays, producing the winning hit for the ninth time this season, singled in the 5-4 run for the Giants after his sixth-inning error had resulted in three unearned runs which tied the score.

PIRATES SLOWED

Montreal's ever-dangerous Expos slowed up Pittsburgh Pirates with a 14-hit attack which produced a 10-1 win and sliced a game off the Pittsburgh lead.

Moving in on the Eastern Division leaders were New York Mets, who fought off defeat twice to take Philadelphia Phillies, 6-5, when Donn Clendenon hit a two-out home run in the 15th inning.

Ken Singleton homered to tie the score at 5-5 in the 14th inning.

Winners Decided In Zone Doubles

Burnside and Victoria West bowlers will compete in the men's doubles events in the provincial lawn bowling championships which get under way Thursday in Vancouver.

Colin Fleck and John McMillan of Burnside downed Chuck Davies and Bert Bennett of Victoria, 22-15, Saturday in the zone finals held at the Burnside greens.

Jim McGregor and John Wright took the remaining berth by downing Hugh Renfrew and Bob Baird, 31-11, in an all-Vic. West final.

Also representing Victoria in the B.C. tournament are Percy Hawes and John Green, who will compete in the men's singles event.

Grexton Is 12th Has 195 Average

SEATTLE — Brian Grexton, who rolled 300 and 299 games last season, is finding out just how tough the competition can be at bowling's top level.

The young Victorian did right well in his first Professional Bowling Association tournament, averaging better than 195 with a 2345 pinfall for his first 12 games in the $35,000 Heidelberg Open tenpin tournament.

But it was good enough for no more than 12th place and almost 300 pins behind the total owned by Johnny Petraglia of Brooklyn.

Petraglia, at 2736, was 36 pins ahead of Jim Godman of Lorain, Ohio.

The final six games of the qualifying test will be played today and 24 of the field of 112 will carry on for match play leading to the $4,000 top prize.

O'Dell Makes It In Exciting Race

Rick O'Dell, with a crowd of 2982 in a constant uproar, won the super-stock main event Saturday night in the most exciting race at Western Speedway this season.

O'Dell, Ross Surgenor and Bob Collins staged a battle for the lead from the 26th to 33rd laps before O'Dell gained a little breathing space. It was just enough, Surgenor charging to within a half-car length at the finish.

O'Dell and Surgenor, who were running second and third, respectively, when they rubbed fenders on the 15th lap of the 35-lap race, survived the early trouble without losing their positions and overhauled Collins, who had the lead from the 10th to 30th laps.

Harvey St. Hilaire won his second straight stock-car main event and took over the points lead from young Larry Pollard with the victory.

Ray Bertwhistle was given the checkered flag after the 25-lap race but a check of the lap-count showed that Bertwhistle had lost a lap when he, Ron Fleet and Earl Pollard were involved in a spin-out on the second lap.

Ontario XV Upsets B.C.

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario defeated British Columbia, 27-17, to win the Canadian inter-provincial rugby championship Saturday.

It was the first time that Ontario has beaten B.C. in 10 year of tournament play for the Carling Bowl.

In the consolation final, Alberta downed Quebec, 14-10, while Ontario trounced Nova Scotia, 31-8, for the Eastern rugby crown and the McTier Cup.

Langley Victory For City Driver

LANGLEY — Dave Cooper of Victoria, taking the lead in the 14th lap of the 75-lap race, Saturday won the first annual O'Keefes super-stock race at the Langley Speedway.

Cooper, who won $900, was the only one of three Victoria drivers to finish.

Gary Kershaw, who had been favored to win, and backed up that rating by posting the fastest time during the trials, crashed on the seventh lap of the main event. His car was heavily damaged but he received only minor injuries.

Larry Walker, who is usually close in events here, was forced out on the 50th lap by engine trouble.

Young Amateur Stuns Field Cards 65 to Lead U.S. Open

ARDMORE, PA. (AP) — Jim Simons, a 21-year-old amateur from Butler, Pa., fired a breath-taking 65 and stormed into the third-round lead in the 71st U.S. Open golf championship Saturday.

The Wake Forest student, runner-up in the British Amateur championship two weeks ago, swept past some of the world's most acclaimed shot-makers as he posted his 54-hole total of 207, three under par on the treacherous Merion Golf Club course.

Only Jack Nicklaus, picked by most to win this most prestigious of all golf titles, could stay in sight of the tow-headed, broad-shouldered Simons.

TWO STROKES OFF

Nicklaus had a 68 for 209, one under par and two strokes back of the surprise leader who is bidding to become the first amateur to win this title in 38 years.

Simons, displaying steel nerves on the glass-slick greens of Merion, was four strokes off the pace and tied for 11th place when he started play in the bright, warm sunshine.

In front of him in the chase for the coveted crown were such international professional stars as Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Australian Bruce Devlin, Puerto Rican Chi Chi Rodriguez, George Archer, former PGA title-holder Bobby Nichols and former Masters champion Gay Brewer.

PALMER HABIT

His 65 was just one stroke over the record in the American national championship but put him in position to become the first amateur to win this title since Johnny Goodman turned the trick in 1933.

He was going for a 64 until he bogeyed the tough 17th, hitting a bunker with his approach shot.

"This was the first day I'd really had some birdie putts to fall," said Simons, who used only 29 strokes on the fast greens that combined with deep rough and the distinctive white-sand traps to make Merion one of the most testing courses on the tour.

NICHOLS THIRD

Behind Niclaus, in third place at 210, was Nichols who had a 69 despite a double-bogey five on the 13th.

Tied at 211, one over par, were Lee Trevino, Jim Colbert, Bob Erickson and Archer, a one-time ranch hand from Gilroy, Calif. Trevino had a 69, Erickson a 73, Archer a 70 and Colbert, tied with Erickson for the lead at the end of 36 holes took a 73.

PALMER FADES

Palmer didn't have a birdie, took a 73 and faded back in the pack at 214. Gary Player had a 72 for 219 and Masters title-holder Charles Coody went to a 75 for 221.

"I've been playing pretty well, but I just haven't been making many birdies," said Simons.

He got his share Saturday — seven of them.

Simons rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the second hole, made it from 14 feet on the sixth, then missed another one from eight feet on the seventh.

It was on the eighth that he started his big push, wedging to 14 inches for the first of three consecutive birdies. He laced an iron to six feet on the ninth and rolled in a 10-foot putt on the 10th.

He bogeyed the 12th from a trap, but rebounded with a six-foot putt for a deuce on the 13th. Simons also birdied the 16th to go six under par for the day, but bogeyed the 17th from the right bunker.

Wells Not Too Reluctant Battles for Playoff Win

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Wells of Seattle defeated Vancouver-veteran Bert Ticehurst on the third hole of a sudden-death playoff Saturday to become a reluctant British Columbia Amateur golf champion.

Wells, a 24-year-old unemployed aircraft worker, hit the spotlight Friday when he took a two-stroke lead over the field going into the final round and came out with the statement that he "hated golf."

He finished with a 77 for a 289 total of 72 holes, five over par on the Quilchena golf course. Ticehurst forced the playoff by carding a final-round 72.

After halving two holes, Wells won the playoff with a par four on the 310-yard third hole. Ticehurst took a bogey after hitting his pitch shot into a trap near the green.

Wells is the first American to win the B.C. Amateur title since Rod Funseth, now a touring professional, did it in 1956.

Scott Keenlyside, an 18-year-old junior from Langley, finished third, two strokes back at 291, with a closing-round 74. At 292 were Gordon Robinson of Richmond and Bob Mitchell of Vancouver.

Ted Gellert of Kelowna, who held the lead at the halfway point, and Jim Barnes of Bellevue, Wash., finished with 293s.

Vancouver Island's top finisher was Dave Mick of Victoria, who fired a 74 to end in a four-way tie with John Russell of Vancouver, Steve Cole of Seattle, and Graham MacIntyre of Vancouver with 294s.

Defending-champion Carl Schwantje of Victoria shot a 79 in the final round to finish with a 298 and promising Victoria junior, Bob Beauchemin, also had a 79 for a 301 total.

Ken Floyd of Victoria carded a 78 Saturday for a 301; Tom Maftechuk of Victoria had an 81 to finish with 304; and Nanaimo golfers, Ron Bell and Mike Mousseau, fired 82 and 84 respectively to finish together at 306.

Senior Tourney Gets 143 Golfers

Bob Dunn of Nanaimo, last year's winner, will be among the 143 golfers taking part in the annual Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association medal round at the Nanaimo Golf Club Thursday.

Golfers from the Mainland and Vancouver Island will participate in the event. The Islanders will also be defending the Tom Heatherfield Trophy for the team championship.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico defeated Bermuda, 3-0, Friday to win the North American zone competition of the Olympic qualifying soccer tournament.

The victory gave Mexico a 3-0 record with one game left to play in the three-country tournament.

It is against Canada in Vancouver in August. Canada bowed to Mexico, 2-0, in Mexio City, June 8 and won and tied against Bermuda.

After the match with Canada, Mexico will play the winner of the Central American zone in the North-Central American zone preliminary competition for the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich.

Success Comes for Jumper Leap May Take Him to Cali

By KEVAN HULL

Mike Mason of Vancouver Olympic Club had disappointment turn to smiles in a short span Saturday at Centennial Stadium during the opening day action of the B.C. Open track and field championships.

Mason, who missed by an inch on his first attempt in the men's long jump, passed the Pan-American Games standard by a half inch two tries later to almost assure himself a trip to Cali., Colombia later this summer.

The bearded performer, who was a member of the cross-Canada sports caravan last year, had three jumps better than 24 feet, including the winner at 24'8½".

Only one other athlete met Pan-Am standards during the meet, which was bypassed by many of the top athletes, either competing elsewhere or resting up for the Canadian team trials next weekend in Richmond.

Debbie Brill of Haney, competing for VOC, established a Vancouver Island record for the women's high jump with a leap of 5'10¼". She then missed in three close attempts at setting a new North American record of 6'⅛".

The expected battle between Miss Brill, who had not done particularly well in other meets on the Island, and Nanaimo's Brenda Staffanson did not materialize.

LEG PROBLEM

Miss Staffanson, who tied Miss Brill at 5'9¼" last week in Portland, is having thigh muscle trouble on her takeoff leg and dropped out at 5'2", finishing third behind Debbie's sister, Connie.

While only two made the games' standards, 12 other athletes had performances which qualified them for the Canadian team trials and another chance at the Pan-Am standards.

Certainly the strongest of those came in the 10,000 metres, where Lloyd Walker of VOC, a high school teacher at Mission, lapped all but second-place finisher Charlie Thorne of Victoria Evergreens.

Walker, 32, is a former member of the New Zealand national cross-country team, and says he now runs "just for fun." His time of 31:16.6 was within a minute and a half of the Games' standard.

"I'm only training about 60 miles a week now," said Walker, who placed fourth in the Canadian cross-country championships two years ago, just after his arrival from New Zealand. "If I was to take it seriously, I'd be doing about 120 or more, but it's nice to see my family once in a while."

TRIALS' CHANCE

Two Victoria competitors made trials' standards with winning performances, Lynda May taking the women's javelin at 147'6½" and Bev Cox taking the women's 400 metres in 55.7. Both compete for Evergreens.

Barbara Holdack of Vancouver Optimist Striders, second in the javelin at 136'10" and Noreen Liepens and Maureen Crowley, both VOC and second and third at 56.7 in the 400 metres, also were under the trials' standards.

Wendy Taylor of VOS matched the trials' standard with a 14.8-victory over Victoria's Jill Pelland in the 100-metre hurdles while both first-place Wilf Wedman and runner-up John Beers of VOC made the high jump mark at 6'8".

STILL ONE-TWO

Stephanie Berto and runner-up Patti Loverock again qualified for the trials with 11.7 performances in the 100 metres. Both are running for VOC.

Bill Greenough was the other competitor to make the standard. The VOC long jumper made it by a half inch, placing second to Mason at 23'½".

One other Vancouver Island competitor took a gold medal Saturday, Lorna McHattie of Victoria Track Club taking the women's discus at 118'9".

Skillings Clicks For Three Titles

Left-handed-stylist Roger Skillings carried off three titles as the weeklong Racquet Club of Victoria tennis championships ended Saturday.

In a relaxed, almost casual manner, Skillings used a twist serve and some sharp net play to dispose of Marty Taylor, 6-2, 8-6, in the final of the men's singles.

Then, only minutes later, he took the court with his brother, Pat, to defeat Taylor and Glen Bradshaw, 6-3, 6-3, in the men's doubles final. And he rounded out the day by partnering Ruth Trelawny to a 6-1, 7-5, win over Wally Doan and Vivien Davies for the mixed doubles crown.

SALLY GOES 1-1

Hard-hitting Sally Wood overcame Nancy Hill's steady baseline game to win the women's singles final, 6-1, 7-5 but Mrs. Wood had a setback in the women's doubles final when she and Wendy Cuppage were beaten, 6-3, 6-4, by Maureen Hibberson and Mrs. Trelawny.

Skillings, who was defending champion in the men's singles, completely dominated the first set with his serve and volley game.

However, double-faults at a vital point of the second set allowed Taylor to break service and race to a 5-3 lead.

CHANCE MISSED

The match seemed certain to go to three sets when Taylor reached set-point on his serve at 5-4. But he hit a volley just outside the line and then double-faulted himself to drop his serve and level the scores again.

That was to be Taylor's only chance as Skillings tightened his game up, sent over some big serves to take a 7-6 lead and then cracked his opponent's service with fast returns to finish off the set.

Penny May Sets Hurdles Record

TORONTO — Penny May of Victoria established a native Canadian record of 13.5 seconds inthe 100-metre hurdles Saturday during the national pentathlon championships.

Miss May, who also had a shotput effort of 42'4" and a high jump of 5'2½", is in second place in a close three-way race going into today's final events — the 200 metres and long jump.

Miss May, with a personal best of 2954 points after the first three events, is 65 points behind Debbie Vankiekebelt of Toronto, the Canadian record holder, and 53 points ahead of third-place Jenny Meldrum of Toronto.

All three leaders are in good shape to surpass the Pan-American Games' standard of 4500 points.

Veteran Dies

Gar Wood, Detroit millionaire whose name was synonymous with power-boat racing for two decades, died Saturday in a Miami hospital. Wood, 90, was being treated for a stomach ailment.

Knudson Returns to Form To Bag Ontario Open Title

TORONTO — George Knudson of Toronto, the first-round leader, rebounded Saturday to win the 54-hole Ontario Open golf championship with a six-under-par total of 207.

Knudson, who fell a stroke behind amateur Gary Cowan of Kitchener, a former champion, on Friday, closed with a three-under-par 68 to finish a stroke ahead of Jack Kay, a 50-year-old Toronto pro, and four strokes ahead of Cowan.

Knudson, who won $47,000 on the U.S. tour last year, picked up $3,000 in the victory.

Kay, who was a stroke off the pace each day, earned $2,250 with his closing 69.

Cowan, who made up five strokes on Knudson Friday, dropped out of the running with a 73 to finish a stroke ahead of professionals Ken Fulton of St. Julie de Vercheres, Que., Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., and Gerry Proulx of St. Eustache, Que., all at 212.

FULTON'S 65 BEST

Fulton had the day's best round with a 65 while Norman had a 69 and Proulx, 71, to each pick up $1,200.

Ben Kern of London was alone in seventh place at 213 with a 70 to earn $750 and Don Allman of Brantford, Ont., picked up $500 with a 69 for 214.

Garry Bowerman, a Canadian now playing out of Florida, (70), Stan Homenuik of Dauphin, Man., (73), and American John Jacobs (73) all finished at 215 to earn $450.

Stu Hamilton of Brampton, Ont., in a five-man group at 216, was the next amateur behind Cowan.

Al Balding of Toronto and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver each recovered somewhat from disastrous rounds Friday with 72s to finish in a large goup at 219 and earn $191.

Bob Cox, Jr., of Richmond, the 1970 CPGA champion, slipped to 78 and earned $106 for a 222 total, one more than Nick Weslock of Mississauga, Ont., an amateur who has won the open seven times.

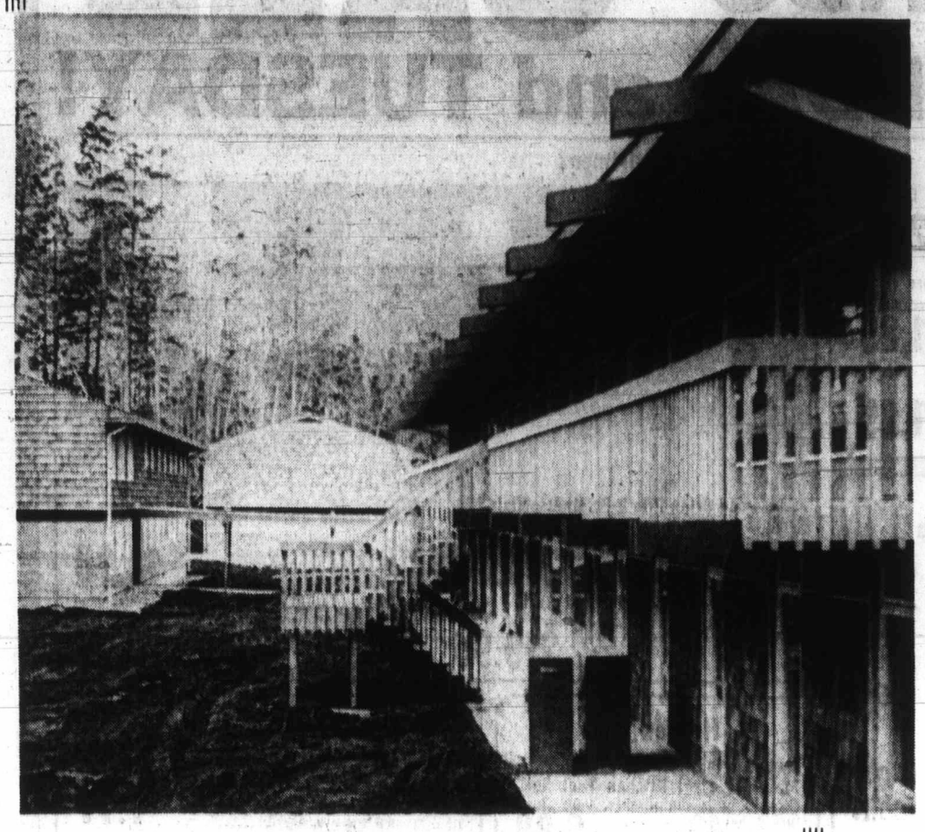
Indians Take Another Integration Stride



Million-dollar hostel at Tofino provides students with individual rooms

Last Residential School Closes for Good Today On Island's West Coast

By NANCY BROWN

Canada's last Indian residential school will close for good today — another step on the road toward complete integration of native Indians into the white man's society.

And it's costing the Indian affairs department close to $2 million to make the move.

But when the Christie Indian Residential School on Meares Island, four miles north of Tofino, closes its doors today, the Canadian Order of Oblate Fathers who have administered the school since 1938 will continue their responsibility to the students.

They will take over administration of the new boys' and girls' hostels being built about a mile and a half outside Tofino, while the children attend a new integrated elementary school at the end of Third Street.

For a while things will be somewhat makeshift.

The residences are finished and ready for the expected 100 boarders, but the school won't be ready for another six months or so and will have to open in September in any available halls in the West Coast community.

Thus will end a 71-year era on Vancouver Island's west coast, where the old wooden school has been a landmark since it opened May 29, 1900.

Since that time, first under the administration of the Benedictine Fathers, later under the Oblate Fathers, some 8,000 boys and girls from remote west coast Indian villages, have passed through the school.

The 1970-71 enrolment in the school was 132.

The children lived, ate, slept and studied during the years in the dormitories and classrooms at the foot of Lone Cone Mountain at Kakawis on Meares Island.

But all this will change in the fall.

The children will return from their villages to modern hostels at McKenzie's Beach, built at a cost of about $1 million by the Indian affairs department. Each boarder will have his own room — a far cry from Christie School's crowded dormitories.

They will leave the hostels each day by bus to attend the new 11-classroom public school being built by Alberni-Tofino school district with Indian affairs department money.

Work on the new school is somewhat behind schedule.

The mountain-side lot has meant that playing fields and building site had to be carved out of solid rock. Total estimated cost of the new school is $811,000, of which $490,000 will go to the building itself.

The school is planned to offer accommodation for community activities as well as educational events, and will take up to 300 students — about half of them Indians.

The change won't be without its sadness, however.

Many of the staff will be sorry to leave the isolated island and the old building, even though Tofino could hardly be described as a big city.

But the change will entail more than a physical move. It will alter the way of life for many of the students.

In the past Indian students helped with chores. They washed dishes, cleaned rooms, and helped with the laundry.

The new buildings are modern, with labor saving devices to cut down the chores for staff and pupils alike.

And not everyone favors the change.

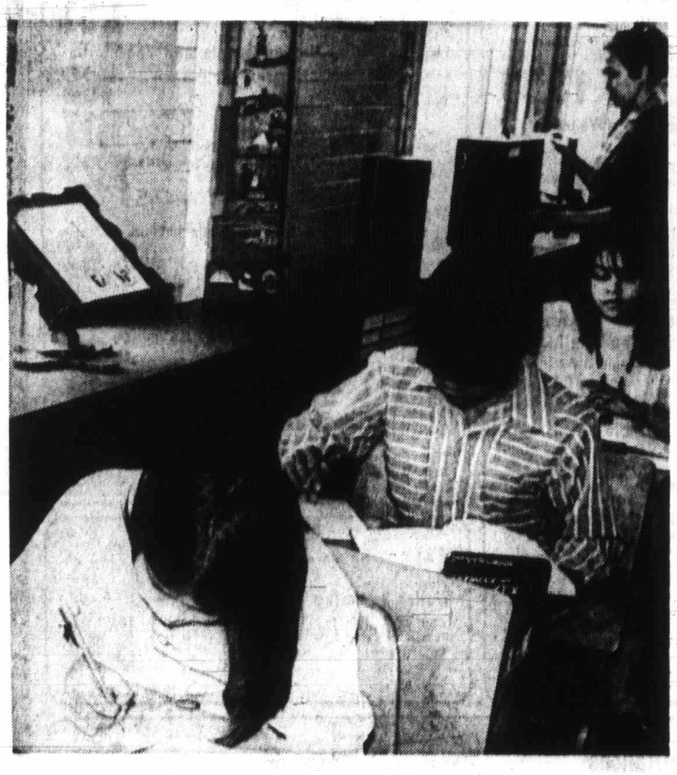
For instance, there's 84-year-old Edith Simon, the oldest living graduate of Christie School.

She believes the old school is better. It is not good for the youngsters to be spoiled by lack of work to do around the place, she says.

Although the end of an era has its sadness, the last three days of school have been celebrated with almost a carnival spirit by staff, children and parents.

There have been visitors — some important in rank, some important as school graduates. There have been ceremonies and plenty of talk.

Today it will end as Bishop Remi De Roo of Victoria celebrates High Mass in the little church before a congregation that will include Bishop James Mulvihill of Whitehorse (a former principal), Bishop Fergus O'Grady of Prince George, and Rev. John Hennessey, provincial at St. Paul's Province, Vancouver; representatives from the Indian affairs department, and from reserves and bands on the Island and mainland, including Chief Dan George of North Vancouver.



Students concentrate as era nears end

Most U.S. Resisters Simply Prefer Canada

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — A study released by an American church says the majority of the 30,000 American draft resisters and dodgers it estimates are in Canada would not return to the U.S. even if the opportunity was given them.

"While concern exists for the United States, the majority have come to Canada to make it their home," says the study released by the United Church of Christ.

"Perhaps hardest for parents and friends to understand is that their children have made the decision to leave permanently. Except for the fact that they will be unable to visit family and friends back home, few express regret over being unable to return to the United States."

The report says that under present circumstances, the deserters and resisters cannot go home again without facing prosecution and jail and that few are interested in any amnesty in the future because that would imply that they have committed a crime, which they deny.

Emphasizing the permanence of the Americans, the 113-page study is entitled They can't Go Home Again.

It was released Saturday in hard and soft cover books by Pilgrim Press, an imprint of the United Church Press.

United Church Press is an organ of the United Church of Christ, a two million-member Protestant denomination created by the merger of the congregational Christian, Evangelical and Reformed churches.

B.C. Plan Known Soon

Eating Habits Topic For Joint Survey

By JOHN MATTERS

Federal and provincial health authorities this week will unveil the B.C. portion of Nutrition Canada, which is a comprehensive study of the eating habits and health of 4,000 selected persons in this province.

The survey team will launch its B.C. study at Chetwynd, 200 miles north of Prince George, June 28. It arrives in this province after a holiday that followed an investigation in Alberta.

Months of planning have gone into Nutrition Canada, the B.C. segment of which will be directed by Dr. J. L. Gayton, a retired medical health officer who lives at 8698 East Saanich Road.

Half of the 4,000 British Columbians will be surveyed during the next two months. The remainder will be interviewed when the survey team returns to this province between January and April next year.

Vancouver Island visits will be during late August. The Nutrition Canada team will be in Victoria Aug. 26, 30 and 31 and in Sidney Aug. 27.

The survey of 20,000 Canadians, sponsored by the federal Food and Drug Directorate, is being made primarily to assess whether people are being properly fed but it will also correlate health and nutrition with such factors as economic status, age and sex.

Households from which subjects will be chosen are selected by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to ensure a well-balanced "mix" of persons attending the clinics.

After a DBS enumerator visits selected homes to explain the survey and record basic information about the family, the Nutrition Canada advance party will arrive.

That interview will provide more details of the survey and arrange for the family to visit the survey centre for consultation with dietitians, doctors and dentists.

Once information is collected about eating habits, particularly the choice of food and the quantities in which it is eaten, there will be examinations by dentists and doctors.

In addition to taking blood samples and body measurements, interviews will take place with each participant to search for disorders that are considered valid indicators of nutritional problems.

These include the frequency of infections, complications of pregnancy, diseases of the blood and kidney systems and absenteeism due to illness. Information will also be gathered on drug use and smoking habits.

The physical assessment phase of the interview will examine persons for evidence of some 30 physical signs, internationally accorded as being of nutritional significance, plus a general examination of health status.

One of the most sensitive indicators of nutritional deficiency is bone growth, particularly, height for age and stature attained at maturity. The survey wil take into account heredity and environmental factors when interpreting results.

Nutrition Canada comes at a time when nutritionists are uncertain about what people are eating and why they are eating it. They also are not clear about the effects of some dietary components on human health.

For example, during the past year U.S. nutrition authorities have mounted a campaign to inform people about an iron deficiency that they found was widespread. The result is that many food supplements now marketed in the U.S. are heavily fortified with iron.

Canadians, on the other hand, want to see the results of Nutrition Canada before they launch such a campaign.

Nutrition Canada also will be surveying Canadians at a time when such phenomena as organic offd is exceedingly as organic food is exceedingly popular. Organic food believers will be among those time, there will be a broad-based scientific study of its nutritional value.

What impact, if any, can be expected from Nutrition Canada, which will cost about $2 million?

First, and probably before all the results are in, there likely will be a most agressive campaign about the hazards of obesity. It could occur as early as this fall and may even be as strident as have been warnings about the dangers of tobacco smoking.

In recent years, there has been an unprecedented "boom" in the "health" and organic food industries and Nutrition Canada's results might invite those customers to consider cost-benefit factors of their patronage.

Another result will be some data on levels of pesticide contamination and which groups of the population are seriously at risk.

The products undoubtedly will be new food legislation that will more rigidly control food additives and contaminants and possibly restrict some of the new "convenience" foods.

Driver Dies As Truck Flips on Road

TOFINO — An Ontario man who recently moved to Tofino was killed Saturday afternoon when an old truck he was driving went out of control about 10 miles south of Tofino on Highway 4 and tipped over on its side.

Tofino RCMP reported 24-year-old Walter Clarence Bender was pronounced dead on arrival at Tofino Hospital as a result of injuries received when he was pinned under the truck.

"The driver lost control after coming out of a double curve and the truck rolled over in the ditch.

"It was an old milk-type truck with folding doors. The door on the driver's side fell open and the driver fell out," RCMP spokesmen said.

RCMP spokesmen said Bender was sole occupant of the truck.

They said the mishap occurred on a paved highway along Long Beach and the truck overturned in a shallow ditch.

Ucluelet coroner Myrtle Saxton, police said, will hold an inquiry into Bender's death.

Two persons were taken to Campbell River General Hospital Friday night with injuries received when a car driven by John Brustolin, 22 of Vernon Camp in the Beaver Cove area and a car driven by Charlotte Monaghan, 23, also of Vernon Camp, Gold River, were in collision, RCMP said.

They said the crash occurred on a private industrial gravel road at the entrance to Vernon Camp, about 30 miles north of Gold River.

Hospital authorities in Campbell River said Saturday night Mrs. Monaghan is in satisfactory condition with a broken left leg and Frank Lango, 24, of Vernon Camp, a passenger in Brustolin's car, was released from hospital early Saturday after being treated for facial injuries received in the collision.

Welfare Cash Stays Same

DUNCAN — Social assistance paid during May from the Duncan city office amounted to $17,677. It included 76 families with 177 dependents, 22 single men, 20 single women, two transients and two boarding home cases.

Ald. John Horner told council recently that the city's welfare payments during the last few months was "virtually the same."

B.C. Issues Tend To Confuse

By FAITH ANGUS

In a reference to this year's B.C. centennial, K. Bileski, of Winnipeg, mentions some of the province's outstanding philatelic contributions, other than the pre-Confederation stamps.

For more than 90 years, he states, B.C. has put out 11 different sets of Law stamps which apparently are confusing to collectors. The descriptive terms applied to them are not exactly helpful either:

The Engraved Justice, Oriental Justice, Ghost Justice, the Siwash Justice, the Hairy-Legged Justice, and the Expectant Justice. And the glamor girls; Miss Victoria Justice, Miss Vancouver Justice, Miss New Westminster Justice and Miss British Columbia Justice.

With the help of Dr. Joseph A. Pierce, of Victoria, Bileski is publishing a complete, price catalogue of these stamps within the next six months. Clear illustrations of every stamp will be shown, also enlargements of all the types.

The catalogue will feature data compiled for a period of over 40 years by Dr. Pearce, whom Bileski describes as the foremost authority in the world. An album to hold all of the varieties will also be published at the same time.

Poor Tires Face Rules

The B.C. cabinet has prohibited the use of vehicle tires in poor condition and listed defects which make tires unsatisfactory for highway use.

Attorney-General Peterson said Friday the new regulations approved by cabinet order mean police may now give motorists warning notices regarding tire defects, and force these defects to be removed at any time.

He said wheels and hub caps will also be more closely scrutinized by testing station examiners.

In a prepared statement the attorney-general's office said the outlawed tire defects can be easily recognized "by safety conscious drivers" and include breaks in tire cording, tread damage such as cracks or exposed tire ply cords, bumps or other deformities, and tires with less than one-sixteenth of an inch of tread remaining.

Recut or regroved tires are prohibited unless the tire was manufactured for this purpose and bears the word "regroovable."

Racing slicks and "cheater" slicks are now banned because they are safe only on dry pavement. And vehicles aren't allowed to carry both bias ply and radial tires because this combination makes steering dangerous, the statement said.

Firelighter Gadget Works

Gulf Resident Is Inventive

We ran into a handy gadget for outdoorsmen during our recent visit to Salt Spring Island. It is a firelighter, made and marketed by Marshall Sharp, ex-squadron leader and head of air force survival training, now a semi-retired Gulf Islander.

Marshall is an interesting person to meet. He is a gadget man and an inventor. He is the island's part-time meter reader and he devised a telescope system whereby he can stand on the roads and read the meters.

He is also an accomplished photographer and has his own sailboat, imported from Britain, complete with galley and what-have-you.

His firelighter makes it easy for anybody to light a fire without a match ... Indian style.

He makes his sparking "flints" out of old saw blades.

You pull the blade from the slot in the body of this tiny gadget. Note that one edge has squared off teeth, used to make tinder and strike the spark.

Absorbent cotton makes ideal tinder, but any inflammable material that can be scraped to make a fuzzy nest can be lighted. Try blotting paper, cardboard, cotton cloth and wood.

Scrape up enough tinder to cover a quarter, then hold the body so that the sparking metal is pointed into the nest of tinder.

With the same edge of the blade strike a shower of sparks into the tinder. A couple of scrapes may be needed to remove the protective coating on the "flint." When the tinder takes fire, light your paper or fuzz sticks.

It works ... even for us. You can get the firelighters in Victoria at Bosun's Locker, Jeune Bros. and some other places.

When we were at Courtenay we found something we have been looking for for a long time ... a five gallon leak-proof container with a big tap on it.

We wanted it for carrying water to our Gordon Beach cabin and to set up over the sink just like a proper tap. But it is also an ideal rig for campers or boat cruisers.

It is the latest invention of Rex Field and is marketed under the name of Big Blue by his firm, Action Industries, at under $10. Safe for everything from milk to acid is the claim made by Rex.

The world famous Panther Martin fish lures are now being sold in Canada, and this new development in fish lures has proven itself as a sure-fire fish grabber.

It's amazing sonic spinner "calls fish" even when they can't see it. We have yet to give them a try, but they look like they would catch fish and manufacturers claim the lure has proven itself with great success in many countries and under many climatic conditions.

It is designed to sound out fish, creating an underwater tonal condition that arouses fish to follow the sound, follow the lure and then lunge at it.

The internationally patented sonic sender has a double reverse concave, convex blade and when put in motion radiates a continuous pattern of hydrosonic waves. It attaches directly to shaft, does not require a swivel, and is always kept at a 40 degree angle in balanced position. Simple to cast and gives perfect motion even on an upstream cast.

From Mrs. C. Waters comes some camping tips.

The plastic bottles that Palmolive soap comes in, when washed and cleaned make perfect containers for ketchup and the like, as they store easily and are safe with the green cap pushed down.

The large plastic jars which Johnson's Future wax comes in make perfect ice bottles when filled with water and put in the freezer.

Here are some more tips for campers with recreational vehicles.

Before putting anything in the drawers, pull them out and rub wax on the runners and places where wood slides against wood.

Cut up pieces of old plastic curtains or tablecloths, and line the drawers and shelves so that dust which inevitably creeps in can be quickly wiped up.

Corrugated cardboard boxes, cut off about four inches from the bottom, placed in cupboards make good dividers to hold canned goods from rolling around.

Tuck in plenty of plastic sacks for all the trout you are going to catch.

You will need plastic buckets of different sizes to contain your litter sack; to catch drainage from your sink; to tote lunches, bait, clams, fish, seashells, berries, stones for rockhounders.

A small cutting board stops you from cutting up your counter.

In your home freezer try freezing ice in gallon plastic jugs. As it melts in your ice box you will have safe, cold water for drinking.

To keep a block of ice from slipping around the ice box place a dry towel under it.

YOU SHOULD HEAR WHAT THEY'RE SAYING ABOUT VEGA.

MOTOR TREND: "We nominate the Chevrolet Vega (for the 1971 Car of the Year Award) because not only is it a new car, but it represents a number of concepts fresh to the American auto industry." (A note: we weren't just nominated — we won. Vega is Motor Trend's Car of the Year.)
"For the money, no other American car can deliver more."
"The base Vega is a magnificent automobile in its own right without any options at all."

CAR LIFE: "The motoring press took an 850-mile trip in three Vegas and three competitors. The Vegas won. The most impressive part of the trip was the phenomenal cornering power of the three Vegas.

CAR and DRIVER: "Technically the Vega has the most impressive credentials of any American small car.."

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED: "The roadability and handling (of Vegas) on the GM sports-type car course was excellent, quick and sure. The vinyl-covered bucket seats were extremely comfortable. These cars are easy to get in and out due to their large doors."

ROAD TEST: "Chevy pulled out the stops on this one. Aluminum o.h.c. engines, four body styles, high-style options put it in a class by itself . . . The Vega is innovative without being complex."

Checkmate

Russian Gives Credit to Fischer

By RAY KERR

It is a poorly kept secret that the Soviet press has as much regard for Bobby Fischer as the Los Angeles grandmaster has for the Soviet press.

While Fischer, of example, was shattering Moscow's Mark Taimanov 6-0, reports in the Russian media were scant and without comment — quite a contrast to fanfares accompanying previous Soviet chess victories.

That's why it's refreshing to hear of a Russian who gives Fischer the kind of credit the 28-year-old U.S. grandmaster deserves.

I'm referring to world champion Boris Spassky, who said in Moscow last week Fischer has the best chance of challenging him for the crown.

The playoffs are at their semi-final stage now, with Fischer scheduled to meet Bent Larsen of Denmark and Soviet Union's Tigran Petrosian taking on countryman Viktor Korchnoi. The eventual winner goes on to meet Spassky.

Spassky, in an exclusive interview for Checkmate, described Larsen as a "battle-seasoned fighter whose sporting, fighting qualities are even superior to those of his opponent." But he said Fischer "has an advantage as a master of chess."

Spassky was quite candid about the eventual challenger, saying he was not averse to meeting Fischer but is rooting for a Soviet grandmaster, which is hardly surprising.

The world champ also mentioned he was impressed by Fischer's play in whitewashing Taimanov.

This playoff, he said, "seemed to surpass the other quarter-finals from the viewpoint of the art of chess."

It'll be great to have a guy like Spassky at the Canadian Open, scheduled for UBC Aug. 24 to Sept. 3.

Yes, he's definitely coming to Vancouver and he's definitely playing. So every Vancouver Island chess player who's ever dreamed of meeting the world champion should be at UBC for the tournament. In an open tournament, chances for lower-rated players to meet Spassky are better than average.

And for most of us, this will probably be the first and last chance to get a crack at the world champion. That's more than two billion other people on earth will ever get.

Clever Defence Goes to Pot

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota constitution provides that "any person may sell or peddle the products of the farm or garden occupied and cultivated by him without obtaining a licence therefore." The provision, a judge ruled Friday, does not apply to those who cultivate and peddle marijuana, as an enterprising defendant had suggested in his defence.

At least one school board finally seems to be realizing just how popular chess is among Greater Victoria students. Proof — Greater Victoria school board has included chess instruction on its Summer Happening curriculum.

The course will be a five-session affair from July 12 to July 21 at Blanshard elementary school. Instructor will be Cyril Large, who distinguished himself in organizing the recent C-FAX junior championship.

Further information is available at 592-1211 — ask for adult education.

Oldest Mummy Intact

CAIRO (UPI) — Archeologists have discovered a mummy nearly 5,000 years old that is the "most beautiful, most intact and most ancient" yet found by men, the influential newspaper Al Ahram reported Saturday. It said the find may cause ancient Egyptian history to be rewritten.

It said the unearthing of the mummy was "historically and scientifically a greater and more valuable discovery" than the Tutankhamen tomb unearthed by Lord Caernarvon in 1922.

Al Ahram said the mummy is that of a man called Niffer, which means "beautiful" in the ancient Egyptian language, and, like the Tutankhamen mummy, it was discovered in its original burial ground untouched by the thieves of subsequent generations.

Those thieves usualy pillaged the graves of ancient Egyptian notables, who had many precious articles buried with them for use in the after life.

"There is nothing unusual about discovering a pharonic mummy," Al Ahram said. "But to dig up a mummy whose age is almost 5,000 years, has never happened before.

"It will change a lot of the information held by archeologists and historians."

The newspaper did not say where the mummy was found. It said the discovery embodied historical truths "of the utmost importance."

Outside Aid To Whites Condemned

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP)—African foreign ministers Saturday condemned the U.S., Britain, France and West Germany for giving aid to white minority governments.

The ministers also ruled out any dialogue between their countries and South Africa and pledged increased aid to black guerrilla movements "until victory is achieved."

Red SST at Home

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union's TU-144 supersonic airliner landed in Moscow Saturday with neither crewmen nor designer showing concern over structural cracks that Western mechanics reported in Warsaw.

Pilot Eduard Yelyan and the other crewmen descended the ramp of the sleek Soviet jet and accepted kisses, flowers and handshakes from wives and co-workers on the ground, designer Alexei Tupolev among them. They had flown the plane back from Paris, where it was exhibited at the air show.

The craft stopped for two days in Warsaw, where some Polish aviation experts had viewed it. The general public was not allowed to approach as they had in Paris and Prague earlier.

Western aircraft mechanics in Warsaw said two half-inch cracks were visible on the mountings of the two port engines, one six feet long and the other about six inches.

Anti-Riot Tank in Jacksonville

Snipers, Bombers Active Again After Young Black Victim Buried

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Sniper fire and firebombing erupted again in this racially-tense seaport Saturday night following the funeral of a slain Negro youth whose death has triggered four nights of violence.

Scattered reports of police being fired on crackled over the police radio as a heavy shower which covered the area earlier in the night ended.

Patrolman Walt Kennedy called for help after five or six shots were fired at his cruiser in the heart of the black business district.

Fifteen police cars and the Florida Highway Patrol anti-riot tank rushed to the scene and searched a restaurant building where Kennedy thought the sniper was. No one was found.

There were two other reports of sniper fire and several of firebombings.

The city was calm during daylight hours Saturday, as an overflow crowd gathered at the tiny Spring Hill Baptist Church for the funeral of 15-year-old Donnie Ray Hall, fatally wounded by a white policeman last week. Patrolman Frank Fouraker has been indicted for manslaughter in the shooting, which touched off the wave of violence.

During the pre-dawn hours Saturday, 14 persons were flushed out of a two-storey house and arrested after a Florida Highway Patrol trooper was pinned down by sniper fire.

Torrential rains emptied streets in the Negro sections of the city Friday night, but the downpour quit shortly before midnight and trouble flared anew.

Small bands of blacks roamed the streets tossing Molotov cocktails.

"They didn't have time to do more than throw a bomb and run," one policeman said. "We were always right behind them."

Truck Rolls On Youths, Kills Two

HOPE (CP) — Two youths were killed Friday during a Skagit Valley fishing trip when a truck left the road above and crashed into them in its out-of-control course down the embankment.

RCMP identified the victims as Neil Marty, 17, and Al Little, 16, both of Surrey.

Police said the two were killed outright while they were fishing near Ross Lake when the camper truck struck a soft shoulder and left the road.

A third youth, 17-year-old John Hiebert of Surrey, escaped injury. He was standing only a few feet away from his companions.

The driver, whose name was not released, escaped injury.

Ferris Wheel

Happy Birthday

By DON COOK
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

VIENNA — Vienna's biggest, best known and most beloved city landmark is having a birthday. The ferris wheel in the Prater Amusement Park on the banks of the Danube is 75 years old this week.

For a city which lives much more on its past than the present or future, this is the occasion for a birthday party, including special fireworks from the Prater wheel at night, commemorative stamps, brass bands and carrier pigeons racing from the Prater to pigeon lofts miles away. Moreover, if the customers keep coming, somebody soon is going to be the lucky passenger number 15 million on the ferris wheel.

The wheel was built in 1896 by a British engineer, Walter Basset, who also built similar ones in London, Paris, Blackpool and Chicago. But the Prater is the only one surviving. It rises 209 feet from the ground, with the diameter of the wheel itself a full 197 feet across. During the Second World War when the bombing and fighting in Vienna was at its height, all of its cabins and operating mechanism were destroyed, but it was one of the first of the city's landmarks to be restored.

Craze Nearly Century Old

Even Hitler Eyed English 'Moat' Trip

By NINO LO BELLO

LONDON — Ever since the first man swam the English Channel in 1875, not only have hundreds of people attempted to span the celebrated stretch under their own locomotion, but dozens have tried to ferry themselves over the 20-odd miles of tantalizing brine in some of the most cockeyed ways imaginable.

For instance, The Great Ormani, a British showman, stripped himself to the waist, lay down on a bed of nails and had himself towed. Two students from Liverpool University — Keith McKenna and Donald Kidd, both 18 — crossed the Channel on a double bed that moved by a five-h orsepower outboard motor. Twenty-year-old Alan Witt tried it with a bathtub, also equipped with an outboard motor, but heavy seas nearly sank the tub.

Cycle Attempt

Not to be outdone, college students James Woods and Ronald Brooks peddled over on a bicycle-built-for-two (mounted on 16-foot floats). Several men have done it in kayaks or canoes, dozens have gone over on water skis, one athlete even tried it (unsuccessfully) holding onto a soccer ball and kicking his feet, and another wag actually started out his voyage sitting on a chamber pot (he stayed afloat for three-quarters of a mile).

The record shows there was one nut who eyed the Channel for several years and could not quite make up his mind. Fortunately for history, he never made the crossing. His name was Adolf Hitler.

Fame Sought

Although England and France recently reached an agreement at long last about a tunnel under the Channel to be constructed in the next 10 years, there is no doubt that the famed waters will continue to stir the spirit of adventure among people who will do anything to win a bet or get their names in the newspapers.

Crossing the Channel the hard way seems to provide a yearly opportunity in the art of showing off stamina cum stupidity cum stimulus. Naturally, those loons who do it for publicity have a specific aim — like stripteasers Kay Harris and Una Denton (clad in bikinis) who did the trick in five hours aboard a water-scooter while a press agent for the Windmill Theatre counted the press clippings.

Danger Too

It is a challenge that can be heartbreaking, too. Which means danger — as lifeguard Keith Slocombe found out. He tried to paddle his away across on a surfboard and after 15 hours had to be fished out by a rescue team dramatically. Undaunted, however, the next year he successfully paddled the pond on a plank of wood in nine hours.

Though several attempts have been made to swim the Channel underwater, it was finally done by frogman Fred Baldasare, but only after he had failed several times before. On his first try he had to give up when just six miles from Dover. He accomplished what many believed was the impossible deed by swimming inside a floating frame towed by a fishing boat that illuminated the underwater area with strong spotlights.

Chute Try

So strong is the challenge of the Channel that two characters even tried it with the aid of parachutes. Frenchmen Jean-Claude Dubois and Gil Delamore rigged up a speedboat that could be dragged by parachutes acting like kites. Dangling at the end of the two chutes, they made their successful crossing in October 1962.

Perhaps the most ridiculous stabs of all have been made by a bank clerk, Robert Platten. He made his first trip in six hours and 20 minutes — floating on a brass bedstead that stayed surfaced with the aid of empty fuel tanks and moved with the trusting power of an outboard motor. Then encouraged by that accomplishment, the 40-year-old bank clerk made a stab in a beer barrel that measured nine feet in length. Two miles off the French coast his motorized cyclinder struck a submerged object and bubbled out of sight. Platten recently made a West-East hop in a 15-foot bottle in eight hours and 20 minutes.

Charter Finally Leaves

SEATTLE (CP) — Club Internationals flight to Europe with about 60 Vancouver residents among its more than 130 passengers finally left here Friday — one day short of being a week late.

he Boeing 707 plane operated by the club was scheduled to leave last Saturday, but was delayed to Wednesday because it was not permitted to land in London as planned. Amsterdam was arranged as the destination instead.

Then, after passengers had arrived to embark, radio equipment on the plane developed problems that took until Thursday night to rectify.

President Vannetta Warren of Club International, which is based in Vancouver and Seattle, said passengers voted Thursday to wait for the flight to depart and as a result, the few passengers who decided not to go will not be given refunds.

Club International flights operate in a manner similar to charter flights but the club operates its own aircraft and does not have to abide by charter rules.

Travel Tips

Farm Rooms Ideal

SHANNON, Ireland — Farmhouse accommodations — bed and breakfast for the two of you, $3 to $5 — is the biggest thing in Ireland today. They've recruited farmhouses all over the country. And all become innkeepers. Some of them are elegant manor houses, almost castles.

The tourist people told me: "You go to the tourist office — or phone them — in any large town. Tell them what you want: Farmhouse rooms for the family: ponies for the children; bikes.

"We've a computer system we flash it on. You'll have a reservation in 60 seconds. We absolutely guarantee you can arrive in Ireland without reservations, tour the country and never spend a night without a comfortable room."

Farmhouse touring is so popular, the highway people have added it to the road-signs. Among the arrows pointing to towns, you find an arrow pointing to "Farmhouse Accommodations."

There's a book of listings. Pick it up at the tourist office when you get off at Shannon. But let them compute it ahead your first day.

". . . to buy Irish sweaters and skirts?"

The freeport as you leave Shannon is a shopping experience. It's grown into a great store, and I flew here on a sentimental journey: I stopped here 20 years ago, and the stock was a dozen Petersen pipes — that's all. Now the planes stop off, and you have 45 minutes to shop a department store.

How I beat the jet lag: I was sitting around wonderful Dromoland Castle here — it's now one of the world's GREAT hotels — and I said: "I KNOW I'm on the time zone change, and I'll wake up at 2:30 in the morning." So they said: "We put up picnic lunches with a thermos of coffee. We'll fix one for you."

I woke at 2:30 as scheduled — (It takes two days to get over the time change) — and got up and had my coffee and picnic lunch.

"Some place we can stay for a week or so in Ireland and be in the country . . ."

Ireland has a bunch of wonderful cottages — all in the green west country. Sleep eight if you like; about $90 a week. They are thatched village cottages. BUT — they have modern electric kitchens. You live in the village. Shop the village stores. (Milk is 6 cents a quart!) Have a drink in the village pub. Bikes rent for $3 a week, with full insurance if you crash.

For this information: write Irish-Rent-a-Cottage, Shannon Free Airport, Ireland. (I stayed in one of these two years ago. For a family with children, you can't beat it. Bikes and ponies every day.)

If you are an artist or writer and decide to stay a while, Ireland has forgiven you ALL taxes. (This is the most civilized attitude I ever heard of. I may move here myself.)

"You always rave about Ireland when you are there. Surely there's some things wong with it . . ."

Some feeling of isolation. Dublin is NOT New York or Chicago or San Francisco. Good restaurants hard to find — Dublin could use a half dozen more. No swinger country. Irish pubs seem more for serious drinking than like the clubby English pubs. You need an escape hatch every three months. Like London.

Cost of Living Tie-In

Pensioners Want No School Tax

QUESNEL (CP) — Delegates to the three-day annual British Columbia Old Age Pensioners Organization convention, which ended Friday, passed resolutions requesting the provincial government to exempt pensioners from paying school taxes and requesting all railway and bus companies in Canada to offer pensioners reduced rates "as quickly as possible."

Among other resolutions passed by 150 delegates was a call for the old age security pension to be annually raised and tied to the full cost of living index increase.

The convention also called for increases of the basic income tax exemptions to $2,000 for single pensioners over 65, and to $4,000 for married couples.

Other resolutions were passed to petition the federal government to "take immediate action to lower the cost of prescription medicine" and to ask the provincial government to "use its power to stabilize drug prices and to help pensioners obtain drugs at a nominal cost or have drugs included in the B.C. Medical Plan."

The delegates supported another resolution asking the provincial government to supply eyeglasses, dentures and hearing aids without cost to pensioners, and voted to urge the government to "take steps to alleviate the crowded hospital situation" in B.C.

Vincent Yates of Coquitlam was re-elected president for a two-year term.

Pirates Invade Esquimalt

By JIM BRAHAN

Piracy is running rampant in Esquimalt this weekend as the municipality celebrates its Centennial Buccaneer Days.

Gaily decked-out buccaneers ranging from tiny tots to senior citizens Saturday took over the Esquimalt Sports Centre, its grounds, and part of the parking area of Esquimalt Plaza.

Pirate garb was worn not only by the male population, . . . beneath many of the black eye patches and colorful headbands were pretty young girls.

One such freebooter wearing a striped T-shirt, blue jeans and a pencilled beard and moustache, declined to give her name but said:

"I forget I have the beard on until people start to laugh at me. It just feels like I have a dirty face, but it's good for a laugh."

Esquimalt's recreation director Harold Moist told the Colonist Saturday one of the main achievements of the celebrations is they give the entire community a chance to get together.

"This is something that all the various groups in the municipality from the youngsters in sports to the senior citizens can get behind and work together on.

"They all have to work together to make it a success," he added.

Moist said the buccaneers move today to Kinsman Gorge Park where at 1 p.m. canoe races and barrel races will be staged.

Moist said the buccaneer celebrations wind up the municipal sports week which started last Sunday with more than 1,000 boys aged 6 to 16 attending an interdenominational church service at Bullen Park.

From the resounding shrieks echoing across the plaza from the belted-in occupants on Midway rides which included a ferris wheel, tilt-a-whirl, and others guaranteed to churn up even the most hardened stomachs, Saturday appeared to be a day for the young folk.

However, Moist emphasized it was not all for the youngsters.

Even though the sports centre's rafters were being shaken by drums of the Pacific Maple Leaf Baton and Drum Corps during the band and drill team contest, he pointed out that across at Jubilee Hall, the Silver Threads and Golden Age clubs were holding a flower show.

Meanwhile, hundreds of pint-sized pirates bearing leaky ice cream cones, sticky candy floss or drippy corncobs on sticks were busily dodging among the crowd, trying to hold their loot away from elderly sightseers from neighboring municipalities.

One of the highlights of the festivities was the parade which started at 10:30 a.m. from the Boilermakers' Hall at Dominion Road and wound its way along Esquimalt Road to Admirals.

Moist said the parade had a total of 68 floats with most designed along buccaneer themes, while others placed their emphasis on Centennial 71.

Despite the crowded bingo tables and the lineups at other games of chance, the most popular appeared to be the beer garden.

For Those Who Travel Young

Calling All Hands: Kiosk Now in Place

The Victoria YM-YWCA has set up its information centre for transient young people on Douglas Street across from the Town and Country shopping centre.

By the end of the week a blacktop pad had been installed and Saturday the official information kiosk was in place.

It is an aluminum-framed, chocolate-brown, canvas-covered, fireproof, hexagonal structure, 30 feet high and 35 feet in diameter.

It looks like a giant teepee and on its sides it bears the words Youth and Canada, and Jeunesse, the French word for Youth.

The Y has been given a contract by the federal government's secretary of state department to operate the kiosk until Sept. 15.

Six staff members have been hired for the project. Three of them were at the site most of last week — Patty Kendall, a Cool-Aid volunteer; Owen Kavanagh, in charge of counselling for runaways at the Montreal YWCA, and Bob Plewes, who has done community youth work in two areas of the city for the Y.

The other three are Kathy Ryder, former YWCA worker; Brian Olley, who has had experience with children's day-care centres, and student Mandy McGrath.

During the week the centre was set up on the site using a truck and a table beside it, and about 15 transients were given information.

Plewes said he had informed Saanich police of the project and had received "very favorable reaction."

The police suggested establishing two hitchhiking depots, he said, "one near the Douglas Street turnoff to Saanich municipal hall, the other on Island Highway just past Harriet. They would be marked by signs, he said.

Plewes outlined the functions of the project:

- To inform travellers of regional hostel accommodations, such as Victoria Cool-Aid.
- To refer individuals to medical, legal and counselling services when required.
- To disseminate information as to location of hiking trails, water and food supplies, fire regulations and hints on good camping.
- To exert some control over the flow of transients away from overcrowded areas, such as Long Beach.
- To act as a placement centre, providing travellers with short-term casual employment.
- To inform travellers of recreational and entertainment activities in the Victoria area.
- To operate a shuttle service for hitchhikers from the kiosk to local accommodations and to high locations suitable for hitchhiking out of the city. The kiosk will be open daily from 6 a.m. to midnight.

The staff will be responsible for submitting weekly progress reports on the approximate number of people using the service, major traffic trends and public response to the program.

Raising the canvas kiosk was quite a struggle, Kavanagh said, but by Saturday afternoon it was in place and he and Miss Kendall and Olley were once more in business.

Two of their first customers were Dan Moscrip, 15, of 580 Agnes, and Bruce Boughey, 14, of 4084 Raymond, but the Saanich students just came to have a look.

Bunn Views Teachers' Jobs:

Lifelong Contracts Need Review Plan

By NANCY BROWN

The lifelong job security held by a public school teacher is the biggest stumbling block to improved education, says Greater Victoria school trustee Peter Bunn.

"This is the real gut issue in education today," he said Saturday.

"Should a person who takes on a job at say 22 or 23, then be set in it until retirement, regardless of his efficiency?"

Bunn is making his third attempt to get some changes made in the Public Schools Act to break the present lifelong contract held by teachers.

'Teacher Hounded'

A resolution asking that teacher contracts be renewable every five years was endorsed Saturday by 13 of the 14 Vancouver Island school boards, at a meeting of the Island branch of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, held in Victoria.

Only Saanich was opposed to the change.

Bunn pointed out that at present there is no machinery under which a teacher can be dismissed for inefficiency. There are, he said, no regulations regulating the dismissal procedure, unless a teacher is convicted of a criminal offence.

"I'm a parent, and I've suffered when I've seen my children locked in with a poor teacher," said Bunn. "I know the devastating effect this teacher can have on a classroom of children.

"In many other jobs, a poor or inattentive worker causes only inconvenience to the customer — and he's quickly dismissed. But a teacher can make or break 30 or 40 kids a year, "and nothing can be done."

Bunn said he was involved in one case where a teacher was, as he put it, "bounded from pillar to post" until she ultimately resigned.

"What an uncivilized way of doing things — to push a teacher around and hope eventually he'll step over the boundary into another school district, and take all his hangups to someone else's kids," commented Bunn.

He stressed that he doesn't believe many teachers would actually be fired.

"In the Greater Victoria school district I don't believe more than 5 per cent of our teachers need to be weeded out," he said.

"But if they're not weeded out there's no place for new teachers to go," he said.

However, Bunn pointed out, there is no need to have any poor teachers.

"There are plenty of replacements available," he said.

"This year we have 2,000 applications to fill 150 vacancies. We believe we were able to fill those vacancies with the cream of the crop."

He suggested that the five-year contracts, if they could be offered, could then give the board the option of placing a teacher on probation for a one-year period to see if there could be improvement.

"If at the end of five years a teacher was unsatisfactory, he could be told to take certain courses and upgrade his teaching — or else.

"At present all we can do is politely suggest that a teacher might like to resign, and if they don't take the hint that's that unless we transfer them around until they quit.

"At the same time, I firmly believe that there are many people — especially women — who might be good teachers most of the time, but who, at a certain time of life, shouldn't be in the classroom taking out their frustrations on students. We should be able to get them out of the schoolroom."

Bunn first started pressing for changes in the tenure for teachers in 1969, when the B.C. School Trustees Association endorsed his resolution, and sent it on to the provincial government. No action was taken.

A trustees' association committee has been set up to make further presentations to the provincial government.

But Bunn intends to have his resolution presented again to the annual meeting of the BCSTA.

"We have to keep hammering away until something is done," he said. "It's our only real hope of seeing real changes in educational philosophy.

"If this is again approved on the provincial level we can go to the minister again, and maybe something will happen this time."

Stolen Items Worth $800

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to pass on some information that could save a life. It is from a news service story by Patricia McCormack.

Sometimes a homemaker, faced with a stubborn stain in the sink, bathtub or elsewhere will combine two cleaning agents. The results might put her in the hospital or in the grave. Two separate incidents involving an ordinary bathroom-bowl cleaner and a dash of household bleach killed one woman and put another in hospital for several weeks. What happened was that a poisonous gas was liberated when the two cleaning agents were mixed.

A U.S. Navy medical newsletter told of 20 persons in separate incidents being overcome by gases released when women mixed chlorine bleach and ammonia. If the gas is inhaled, it can cause serious injury and even death. The following safety rules were suggested: Use chemical cleaners only as manufacturers direct on the label. Never mix chlorine bleach with bathroom-bowl cleaners, ammonia, lye, rust remover, vinegar or oven cleaner. In short, don't mix chlorine with any other cleaning agent. — A Fan In Eppelheim, W. Germany.

Dear Ep: Thanks for the tip. I had never heard of this before — and I'll bet I'm not the only one. It was good of you to write — expecially since it cost you 40 cents to mail the letter.

Dear Ann Landers: I should not be writing to you for two reasons. First, I do not believe you exist and second I have to get up early for an all-day sitting job and it's 1 a.m.

This kid Billy is O.K. but he is driving me nuts. He always calls when I am washing my hair or eating supper. I made the mistake to accepting a couple of dates with him and now he acts like he owns me.

Is there a polite way to split with a bossy, possessive boy who sort of pushes people around but not exactly? What I mean is they don't realize they are being pushed around until it's too late. Thank you. — Long Branch, N.J.

Dear L.B.: I have a feeling it's too late, but here's the advice anyway. Tell Billy the Kid to pick another target because you want to be a loose hanger and he's cramping your style.

Dear Ann Landers: My darling cousin died six months ago at the age of 38. Her husband has taken a housekeeper to help him raise their three small children. It is sad to see that their home is not kept up the way it used to be. Whenever I go over there I notice the difference.

What I am writing about is a highly personal matter. Yesterday I saw my dear cousin's husband happily chatting away with his son's teacher. They were standing outside the school and seemed very chummy. I don't know what they were talking about but they appeared intimate. I had to pass them to go into the school so I stopped to say "hello." I couldn't help but notice that he was not wearing his wedding ring which my cousin always loved to see on his finger. It was like a knife in my heart. His dear wife has been gone less than six months.

Should I tell him I feel he is doing her memory an injustice? — One Who Does Not Forget Easily.

Dear One: Maybe wearing that wedding ring was like a knife in his heart — so why don't you mind your own business? I think you need a hobby, Lady.

ERMA BOMBECK on Litter Issue:

Canada Pays Mums

A mother of 12 children has asked me to say something in the defence of women who had large families when it was considered fashionable.

She said she was accosted in the supermarket the other day as she tried to guide her three baskets of milk and cereal through the check-out line by an irate woman who said, "You and the Cuyahoga River ought to be ashamed of yourselves!"

As recently as 1950, B.P. (Before Pill) having many children was considered a symbol of love, happiness and even patriotism. Americans clutched to their hearts entire families: Life With Father (which set theatre records) Cheaper By The Dozen (the story of the Gilbreths) and Sound of Music (the Von Trapp Family). Who would have suspected that today the movies would be rated GP and the families rated X.

I know at least 15 families with eight children or more. I talked with a few of them to find out if public reaction had changed since ecology became a household word.

"Very definitely," said a former schoolmate of mine. "Our family is stared at and counted individually everywhere we go. Someday I'm going to turn to one of them and say, 'Cheer up. We planned on 24.'"

One of my Jewish friends says her favorite reaction is when people chance upon her brood, scrutinize them closely and finally say, "You don't look Catholic."

I have another fertile friend who, if she lived in Canada where they pay you to have children, would be the counterpart of Howard Hughes. "I quit sweating it long ago," she said, "I could care less what people think. My kids are a joy and a menace depending on what day of the week it is. I figure I have the quota of some crazy broad who is giving up children for liberation."

"It's a little late to re-cycle them," said a neighbor of mine. "At a meeting the other night a speaker said if we are to exist in this country we should only replace ourselves. Next thing I knew everyone in the room was staring at me. I just shrugged and said, 'So it takes six people to do the laundry I do in a day.'"

I am not saying ecology is a fad. It's a very real problem destined to be with us for a long time. I am only saying do not judge one another by the size of their family.

The mother with eight children may be just as concerned with environment as you.

And the mother with a single child may not be a believer in ecology at all . . . only convenient headaches.

Painting and Pottery

Artist's Loves Consume Time

Dorothy Wrotnowski

I you realy want to do something you'll find the time. That statement is supported by Stephanie Steel who is definitely in a position to say it.

Painting in watercolors is Stephanie's first love. She makes her living from the sale of the paintings so you know that she must devote quite some time to them.

Ceramics are also a facet of this artist's output. She sells these, too.

She gives one evening a week to teaching art at Pat Thompson's studio on Qu'Appelle Street, Victoria, and another evening to training dogs at the Harlequin Dog Training Club at Royal Oak.

Stephanie also writes poetry, and children's stories which she illustrates herself.

A sideline is her hobby of digging for old bottles and she has quite a collection. Her digging spot (secret) is the former site of an Oriental work crew so she finds both saki and opium bottles as well as oriental pottery.

Her collection also contains quite a number of old style perserving jars.

That goes for the artistic side. Now for the domestic. Stephanie looks after her house for two school-aged daughters, Teresa, 13, and Vanessa, 11 years. Her home at Deep Cove is part of the old Wain farm and has the two original homes built by the Wains. This keeps her busy mowing grass, looking after the fruit trees, flower and vegetable gardens.

Cooking also interests her and she enjoys making different kinds of bread.

But back to Stephanie's watercolors which I think are simply beautiful. Startling clear and uncluttered, they have the power of making you raise your eyebrows.

You can sense the Oriental influence in these paintings. Stephanie sees this herself and believes it comes from the brush drill learned while studying under Stephen Lowe — and also from the fact that she has been surrounded since childhood with Oriental treasures her maternal grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hinton, brought with them from Shanghai when they came here to live in 1918.

The simplicity of Oriental art appeals greatly to this artist. Her parents, the Eric Quaintons, till have many of the treasures that the Hintons brought to Victoria.

Stephanie's paternal grandparents, the late Dean Cecil and Mr. Quainton, were well-known here. The dean was at Christ Church Cathedral for many years. He came to this country as a young man form York, England.

Many of Stephanie's paintings are local seascapes, familiar to most people in this area. Two of these paintings, which were part of her recent exhibition at the Leaf Hill Gallerie in Bastion Square, are sea scenes. One of a clinker-built rowboat secured to a log on the beach at Witty's Lagoon and the other a scene near her parents' home at the head of Cowichan Bay — of a fish boat with log booms in the background.

There are still some of the artist's paintings hanging at the Leaf Hill Galleries.

More of her paintings are hanging in galleries in Montreal, Ottawa and Tacoma and she also exhibited in the Jury Show at the Victoria Art Gallery this year.

Pottery is the artist's second love. For quite a number of years horses were a major interest. Now she is just too busy but it was only a short year and a half ago that she sold her two horses.

Stephanie devotes her time on pottery mostly to slab ware or hand-coiled pottery. She says that she doesn't have much luck with a wheel. "My pots don't seem to want to be smooth" he says.

Last summer Stephanie attended classes in primitive pottery given by Hal Riegger of Oregon in an old abandoned mill at Ladysmith. "This was right up my alley," she says.

Both Teresa and Vanessa have inherited a love of art from their mother. Teresa works in design and Vanessa does a lot of Indian bead work.

All three are dog lovers. Stephanie owns a Blue Tick, (a hound trained for racoon hunting), Teresa has a little mongrel (mostly spaniel) and Vanessa has a Welsh Corgi.

Now you know what Stephanie means when she says that if you want to do something, you can make the time.

School Board To Review Guards Bid

School principals in Sooke school district will be able to requisition members of the corps of commissionaires under special conditions if the school board approves a motion to be debated at next Tuesday night's meeting.

A notice of motion for discussion has been placed on the agenda by trustee Allan Littler "that the board of school trustees believes that students in the secondary schools should finance the cost of commissionaires when they are considered necessary for school functions.

"However, if the principal considers that special circumstances exist, he may requisition for a commissionaire on the approval of the district superintendent of schools."

Dean Heights Students

Edinburgh Awards Won

Twenty students from Dean Heights school, Saanich were presented with Duke of Edinburgh awards by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson at a ceremony at Government House Friday afternoon.

Nine girls and two boys received the silver award, while five boys and four girls were given the bronze award.

Winner of the silver award were: Dianne Ferguson, Linda Kilner, Judy Napier, Madeline Rathbone, Patricia Rumney, Sylvia Sidwell, Deborah Thomas, Betty Wheatley, Mary White, Glen McCord and Howie Thomas.

Special School

Given the bronze award were Jacqueline MacGregor, Margaret Mabee, Emily Norby, Elaine Pearson, Mary Vaux, Ryan Arsenych, Dale Fisher, Ken Hunt and Jamie Napier.

The twenty students represent about one-third of the 60-member student body at Dean Heights, a special occupational school in Greater Victoria School District.

Principal Robert Tubman said in an interview the students had to complete requirements in four areas before receiving the awards.

Hike Taken

Boys who received the bronze medal he said, had fulfilled requirements in the field of community service, hiking, interests and hobbies and sports. They had taken St. John Ambulance first aid training for the service requirement, and had gone on an overnight hike in the Highland district.

For the sports section, they had met standards of physical fitness and individual games of skill, he said, and their hobbies had included guitar and animal care.

The girls had also taken first-aid training for their bronze award, Tubman said. They went on a day hike to Fort Rodd Hill, and also met certain standards in a section entitled Design for Living, which included grooming and homemaking skills. Their hobbies included knitting and rockhounding.

The boys who received silver awards, he said, had fulfilled their service requirement by cleaning up beaches along Colquitz Creek and at Beaver Lake. They had also erected and made playground equipment for a co-operative kindergarten.

They had gone on a three-day, 50-mile camping trip, bike-hiking to Salt Spring Island, and had also furthered their sports skills and hobbies.

The nine girls who won their silver awards had given their community service by helping out at the Silver Threads and also by doing housework for needy shut-ins, he said. In many of the cases where they helped, the mother was in hospital leaving the father alone with several children, he noted.

They also went on an overnight 16-mile hike to Pender Island, improved their homemaking skills, and either furthered their hobbies or developed new ones.

The program is entirely a voluntary one, the principal said, "but it is the highlight of our school."

Each year about 40 per cent of the students entered the program, he said, but not all stayed in to complete their requirements. More girls than boys seem to be involved, he said, probably because girls of that age (14 through 17) more enjoy very organized activity.

The Commonwealth-wide program is an excellent one, he felt, because it gives students "a challenge to yourself ... a standard to measure up to."

Some of the students, he said, hope to try for their gold award, but in many cases this will be difficult because those who received their silver will finish school this year.

The school gives the students as much encouragement as possible to complete their awards, Tubman said, and helps them develop the necessary skills.

During his visit to Victoria in the fall of 1969, Prince Philip spent an hour visiting the school and spoke individually with many of the students.

DISPLAYING BUTTONS emblematic of Duke of Edinburgh silver award are Sylvia Sidwell, 16, of 840 Reed, and Howie Thomas, 17, of 409 Edward.—(Barry Casson)

Italian Referendum Set

Divorce Foes Act

ROME (UPI) — Promoters of a referendum to repeal Italy's six-month old civil divorce law deposited 1,370,134 signatures with a Rome court Saturday calling for the measure.

The signatures were authenticated by public notaries as required by law.

A referendum can be held in Italy upon production of half a million notarized signatures. No referendum has been held since one in 1946 which abolished the monarchy.

Presentation of the signatures and their approval by the court will leave the way open for the referendum to be held around next April.

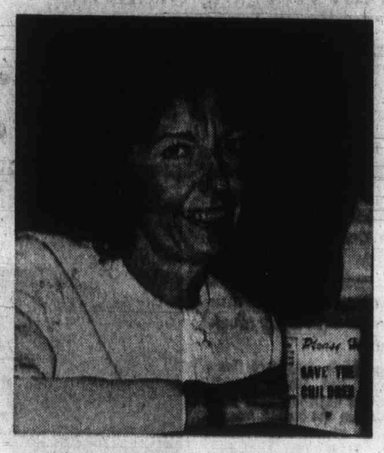
Left wing newspapers have reported the government already has budgeted money to hold the referendum.

Pro-divorce groups accused the Vatican of tacitly supporting the referendum and thereby interefering in Italy's internal affairs. The Vatican denied this, but the news that the signatures had been deposited was first reported today in the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

Four bishops in central Italy have been sued by divorce supporters because of backing they gave to the repeal movement.

Parliament approved divorce Dec. 3 while Pope Paul VI was in Australia, despite months of strenuous Vatican and Papal opposition.

Last week, the Vatican announced it was making it quicker to obtain a declaration of marriage annulment in church courts.



Cheque Swells Fund

Cheque for $100,000 was presented to B.C. Save the Children Fund Friday night by Mrs. Grace McCarthy, minister without portfolio, on behalf of provincial government for aid to Pakistani refugees in India. Mrs. McCarthy is shown in photo with cheque. Mrs. W. W. McGill, fund's B.C. vice-president, received cheque at benefit dinner at Taj Mahal dining lounge. About $2,500 has been collected at booth in McGill & Orme pharmacy, Fort and Broad.—(Barry Casson)

Salvation Army Team Leaving

The Smiths, who have commanded the Esquimalt Corps of the Army for the past four years, will become assistant correctional officers for the Vancouver area.

They have held many positions in church work throughout Canada.

Smith's new duties will involve police court and legal aid work. The couple will be succeeded in Victoria by Captain and Mrs. Fred Russell who are expected to arrive next week from Washington State.

49 Countries At Congress

WEIGHT WATCHERS
ACTUALLY SAVE MONEY WHILE YOU LOSE WEIGHT IF YOU ACT NOW YOU CAN!
Since 1963, while the price of everything else has gone up and up, Weight Watchers has managed to keep the cost of losing weight down. We had a simple idea: we wanted everyone who wanted to lose weight and keep it off to be able to come to Weight Watchers. So we charged a weekly fee of $2.00.
We've held the line as long as we can.
Beginning July 4, 1971, the weekly fee for Weight Watchers classes will be one dollar more. Our enrollment fee will remain $7. (Includes registration and first class fee.)
But if you join us before July 4, you'll be eligible for our 1970 rates for as long as you wish to stay on the program. Even with this modest cost increase, we think you'll agree that Weight Watchers is the outstanding value in weight control.
Through the years, Weight Watchers has grown. Over 2 million men, women and teenagers have been through the Weight Watchers program. We've added many new features designed to make Weight Watchers a place for all your weight control needs—a true weight control organization. There are many classes for men, women and teenagers—conveniently located throughout this area.
Weight Watchers has always been, and always will be a place of dignity and understanding. Every lecturer has actually been on the program and knows what it means to lose weight.

North Vancouver Shootout

Suspect Charged

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Leroy Barber, 37, of no fixed address, Saturday was charged with armed robbery and attempted murder following a $35,000 bank holdup and gun battle that left one man dead and an RCMP constable wounded Friday.

Barber was remanded to Monday in a brief court appearance.

RCMP said an autopsy showed the man who was killed died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. His name was being withheld.

The hour-long gun battle took place about 200 yards into thick forest from the Deep Cove residential district of North Vancouver.

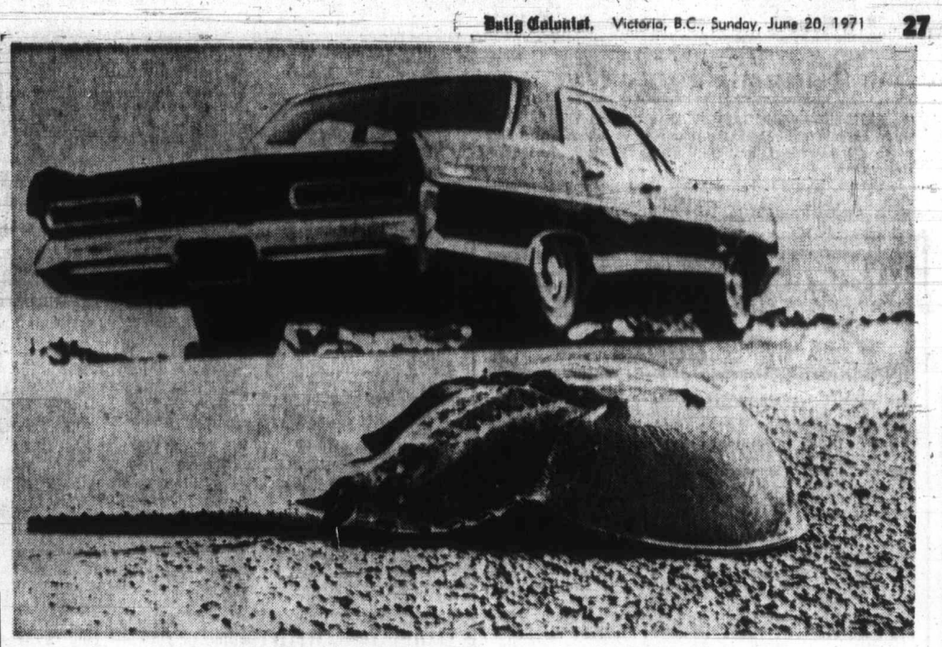
The exchange of fire followed a raid on a shopping centre branch of the Royal Bank of Canada by two men armed with rifles and handguns and wearing stocking masks.

Constable Glen Madsen, 30, of North Vancouver, was shot in the arm. He was in good condition in hospital.

One police tracking dog was killed and another wounded before the surviving suspect surrendered to about 50 RCMP officers who sealed off the area and moved in with the two dogs.

A shopping bag containing all the money was recovered at the scene.

The men had forced about 15 customers to lie down on the floor of the bank and ordered the bank manager to open the vault. Several passers-by were also ordered into the bank and down on the floor.



Crab Had Horseshoes on This Trip

French-Canadian Children Different, Scientists Find

TORONTO (CP) — Three scientists who conducted a study of growth and development of French-Canadian children aged six to 16 in Quebec said Thursday the children have physical characteristics different from other groups of children.

Dr. Arto Demirjian, Dr. Milos Jenicek and M. B. Dubuc said the study in which they participated over the last five years showed that French-Canadian children are shorter and have a different proportion of height to weight than United States children of the same age.

The scientists said that while the children are much closer to English-Canadian children in physical characteristics, there is a different growth pattern up to age 15.

After that, said the researchers, French- and English-Canadians are the same.

The three scientists presented their findings at the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Bilogical Societies.

The study, carried out at the Centre de Recherche sur la Croissance at the University of Montreal, was begun on the premise that every population should have its own height and weight standards.

French-Canadian children today are taller but weigh the same, and thus are thinner than their counterparts of 20 years ago, the study showed.

This differnece is not as marked in English Canada, says the report, and the research team is investigating.

Slide Fence Wasn't Repaired

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — A coroner's inquest here was told a slide warning fence that wasn't operating when a Canadian National Railways' freight train was derailed in the Fraser Canyon Feb. 15 could have been repaired before the train wreck.

A CNR conductor said "the major portion of the fence was clear of snow. There wasn't enough snow there to prevent the CNR repairing the fence."

Kenneth Burnside was testifying at the inquest into the death of Donald Barry, 33, of Kamloops, one of three men killed when the train smashed into a rock slide, about six miles east of Boston Bar.

A tugboat crew found Barry's body floating under a log boom near this Fraser Valley municipality April 30. The bodies of two other train crew members, Victor Penner, 42, and Donald Dougan, 35, both of Kamloops, are still missing.

69 Red Boats Seen Off Coast

SEATTLE (CP) — The United States Coast Guard reported Thursday it has spotted 69 Soviet fishing vessels between Heceta Head off the Oregon coast to La Perouse banks in the vicinity of Vancouver, B.C.

A coast guard spokesman said 36 ships were operating off the Washington coast with the majority north of Destruction Island.

Young People Out

EPHRATA, Wash. (AP) — An estimated 150 riot gear-equipped law enforcement officers drove about 700 young persons from Sun Lakes State Park Saturday and out of Grant County.

Earlier, access to the park had been closed to the public after the youths — migrants from the cancelled Sunrise '71 Rock Festival — swarmed into the park.

Stage Whispers

Storm Due Saturday

By BERT BINNY

The upcoming week covers the lull before the artistic storm of summer, due to break wide open Saturday next.

Come to think of it the amount of last minute preparation must be quite prodigius with just about every department of theatre and concert up to their eyes in final touches.

As a case in point, a lovely chorine in London's highly successful (4,354 performances) Black and White Minstrel Show strapped a redometer to a shapely leg.

She found that, after an evening of two performances, she had walked, run, hopped, tapped, waltzed, jazzed, high-kicked and otherwise propelled herself over a distance of six-and-a-half miles. And this was a performance — not a rehearsal where routines are repeated time and time again.

And Gilbert and Sullivan rehearsed the Pirates of Penzance with three or four New York companies simultaneously in 1881.

So now, scene painters, stage carpenters, sound men, lighting experts, costumers, musicians, choreographers and stage directors are all full of business and there are rehearsals scheduled in one or more spots every night throughout next week.

The stage director, incidentally, has, like the willowy lady in the TV commercial, "come a long way."

Formerly, it was the custom of authors to direct their own plays and some, like Moliere (1622-73) also undertook the leading part.

Later there were actor-managers but the first director in the modern sense of the word was George, Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, (1826-1914). There is no suggestion that the expression "Let George do it," arose from this historical fact.

Only two years before the duke made his first entrance in Germany, all actors were legally "rogues and vagabonds" in Britain. The law thus unkindly designating them was repealed in 1824.

That success attend all the effort now being put forth in Victoria is everybody's wish but it is scarcely a foregone conclusion. Strange things do happen.

Opening night of the Intimate Revue at the Duchess Theatre in London provided a chapter of accidents. Everything that could go wrong, did. Seven scenes had to be scrapped in order to get the finale on before midnight.

No one is exempt from theatrical misfortune — not even dear, old Shakespeare.

At opening night of an 1888 Shakespeare production, the fire curtain at London's Shaftesbury Theatre descended, jammed and defied all efforts to raise it. It never did rise that night or ever again on that performance. As You Like It, from the audience viewpoint, must have seemed like an infelicitous title for the evening's entertainment.

First out of rehearsal and into production is Jerry Gosley's Smile Show.

The 19th annual edition opens at Oak Bay auditorium, 2101 Cadboro Bay Road, June 26 and runs for nine weeks; every weekday at 8:15 p.m.

Included are new sketches and songs by Jerry Gosley, Bebe Eversfield, Peter Williams, Chet Lambertson and Roland Hunter who is a well-known Vancouver actor and TV performer.

Bebe Eversfield directs the show with Peter Williams in charge of the music.

Janie Woods who provided such memorable performances as Hilaret in Lock Up Your Daughters and as Lili in Carnival —both recent Bastion Theatre productions — appears with the Smile Show for the first time. Back again from earlier editions are Dorothy Hosie, Bill Dyson, Mark Smith, Dana Still, John Heath and, of course, Jerry Gosley — in person. The dancers include Cind Connoly, Dawn-Alena Poulsen, Terri Shingles and Linda Geddes.

Thesets are again designed by Anton Gosley assisted by his brother, Tim, Grant Shepherd and Tom Hosie.

British Censor:

Sexy Films on Wane

LONDON (AP) — British film censor John Trevelyan has a message for movie fans: If the current violence in pictures makes you wince, shut your eyes and grip the seat hard.

It is going to get a lot worse.

That's Trevelyan's opinion after watching as many as two movies a day for 12 years.

"The production companies are going more and more for gore and brutality now that sex is waning as a box-office draw," he says.

"Cinema trends are cyclical, switching from sex, to violence, to horror. We are getting into the violent phase now."

Trevelyan, 67, is retiring as secretary of the British Board of Film Censors.

"It's a tight-rope job — and I've had enough," he observes.

He is joining London-based Tigon Films as a production consultant.

His successor, Stephen Murphy, a transplant from television, is on record as deploring violence as much as Trevelyan.

The retiring censor's philosophy during a liberal regime has been simple: look after the kids and the adults will look after themselves.

He told a reporter: "I don't think kids should be sheltered too much. But there must be limits. What might be suitable or acceptable to adults might be corrupting for children.

"Anyone who sits in a cinema and positively enjoys seeing violence being done to other people and gets a kick out of it — that person is sick.

"It is probable that if we go on getting violence on the screen day after day, week after week, people will say it is part of everyday life which they have to accept.

"I detest violence in films far more than sex. The movies we have gone after during my time as censor have been the ones which might have encouraged children to take drugs or depicted perversions or sexual sadism."

He liked Easy Rider despite the drug trips: "It had a concern for people. You can't force a man to love his neighbor but you can try to persuade him to tolerate him."

The violence in the much-imitated Bonnie and Clyde did not upset him either: "The shootings at the end had a poetic quality."

He also championed Andy Warhol's Flesh. He believes Warhol's work in movies has genuine artistic merit.

Fabric Collages

Tago Mago Tripyth Sabiston Show Item

By BILL THOMAS

One of the most exciting things on view at the moment is the Carole Sabiston show at the Print Gallery on Wharf Street.

She is showing 19 fabric collages, using a variety of natural materials.

"I like to work from natural products," said Mrs. Sabiston, "and I spend a great deal of time collecting silk, wool, linens and a variety of natural fibres."

She also has a habit of picking up anything interesting she finds on beach walks to incorporate in her attractive works. She picked up a brilliant collage. "I think this could be a bone from the wing or leg of a bird, but I don't know."

Mrs. Sabiston is an art teacher at Oak Bay high school and fully competent in ceramics, silk screen work, painting and drawing. She was trained at both University of British Columbia and the University of Victoria.

She is emphatic that her art of fabric collages has progressed from what was earlier termed stitchery and backs up her contention by the fact that she has had shows at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery and regularly exhibits at the Shaw-Rimington Gallery in Toronto.

Mrs. Sabiston likes to give her work titles. "It's really fun," she said, holding up Red Squared and pointing to Tago Mago Tripyth and Banner for an Unannounced Hero.

Her work has earned her a good many commissions. Her show at the gallery here sold out and she has just been given commissions for a hotel in Toronto and the new hotel at Ontario's London Airport. "This will be eight feet by 12 feet," she said.

The commission came through a former Victoria resident Alan Edwards, who is now an interior design consultant. He saw her work and was delighted with her skill with fabric and fibres.

"Still, despite the fact that I could be busy at this full time," said Mrs. Sabiston, "I like to teach. It keeps me in contact with young people."

She started her art career as a painter and gradually moved more and more into collages. Last year she spent in Spain working at her art.

If public acceptance is any guideline Mrs. Sabiston is most proficient at her art. She has sold more than 200 fabric collages and can hardly keep up with the demand.

There is no doubt they are interesting for they have a vibrant color quality and a startling three-dimensional effect. They are the kind of art people can live with and grow to appreciate more as time goes along.

This probably accounts for the popularity of her work. Mrs. Sabiston experiments with unusual combinations of material that are at once fascinating and at the same time satisfying.

The 19 works assembled for the Print Gallery show range in price from $20 to $200 and there are certain to be buyers. She will spend the entire summer finishing her commissions for London and Toronto and then start planning for her next Toronto show. The Wharf Street exhibition will continue to July 3. It is certainly worth a visit.

Some people don't go to the symphony because they don't like the program, some don't go because they don't like the soloist, some stay home because of the lousy bus service but at the American symphony conductors meeting Laszlo Gati heard some new reasons.

Many American orchestras are feeling the pinch because patrons are plain scared to go out at night. Orchestra managers told Gati music lovers don't feel like risking a mugging or robbery to get a dose of Beethoven. We have our troubles, but so far these aren't on the list.

The people with the biggest musical responsibility right now aren't musicians but organizers. The nominating committee for the Victoria Symphony Society has a tough job. The annual meeting is June 28.

The way things stand they will have a tough job convincing the calibre of people they want that it's worth getting into the battle. It really is worth working for. It has to be kept alive and alive is the operative word. How it can be accomplished is beyond me but as Mr. Micawber said, something is bound to turn up.

Canadian Prison Film Box Office Success

NEW YORK (CP) — Lester Persky, co-producer of Fortune and Men's Eyes, a made-in-Canada film about prison life, says the new movie has been a box-office hit at its New York opening this week.

"The first-day gross Wednesday at the two Trans-Lux theatres was $9,967," said Persky.

"That was just $150 under the Trans-Lux record for a premiere, set by What's New Pussycat?"

He said big lineups continued after opening day and that a decision already has been made by MGM, the film's distributor, to extend the run at the two Trans-Lux theatres here until fall.

Persky, of Toronto, is co-producer with Lewis M. Allen.

The Week in Records

Death of Rock Disputed

By KING LEE

The Death of Rock, circa 1971, has reared its ugly head and has been put down by Clive Davis, president of Columbia Records.

The circling vultures all pointed to the deaths of Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix, the break-up of the Beatles and the news that Bill Graham was closing both Fillmore East and Fillmore West.

Davis answered by saying that the "group syndrome" may be fading, but in its place is the emergence of some dynamic performers like James Taylor, Carole King, Laura Nyro and Elton John. He called them the next "Poet Laureates of our times."

Who were the previous Poet Laureates of rock music?

Davis said Bob Dylan, Paul Simon and McCartney-Lennon qualified for the title.

Ever since Bill Haley and the Comets gave birth to rock music in 1954 the talk of its death was incessant. It will probably start up again as soon as the current crop starts slipping.

And the vultures keep circling.

Hit LPs: Aqualung by Jethro Tull is described as a pro-God, anti-church expression. Side 1 deals with earthly wretchedness, personified in slimy old Aqualung and Side 2 turns to attacking traditional western concepts of God and religion.

Procol Harum's Broken Barricades album mixes some powerful, driving numbers with some soft ballads and the mixture turns out pretty well. Memorial Drive and Poor Mohammed belong in the first group while Song For a Dreamer and Broken Barricades fits in with the second category.

The Rascals incorporate flutes, saxes, horns and harps in the latest album, Peaceful World, giving it a more elaborate sound than what is usually produced by this blues group.

Sex in Store For Ex-Chaplain

PORTSMOUTH, England (Reuter) — John Storr, a former air force chaplain, has decided to invest $7,000 in a sex supermarket. The 57-year-old clergyman said the shop will be run by others—"I wouldn't be seen there"—and that the products "can be a great benefit to married people with sex problems." He added: "We live in a permissive age."

Sniffing Tells

BLACK LILY (C.H., Victoria) — From the excellent sketch you sent me of the plant you know by the name of Black Lily, I am reasonably sure it is Dracunculus vulgaris, the Dragon Arum. You can confirm this tentative identification by sniffing the flower — it should emit the fragrance of a beefsteak which has seen better days. The pollinating insect for this flower is a carrion fly, attracted by this offensive odor of rotting meat.

The plant is a close relative of the Calla, the Jack-in-the-Pulpit and the Skunk Cabbage.

HYDRANGEA TROUBLES (D.G., Victoria) — I think a form of mildew is responsible for the petals of your hydrangea turning brown. Your bush may have become overcrowded and congested, with a lack of free air circulation through its branches, and it would probably be helpful to thin out some of the branches and shoots, particularly those growing inward, toward or across the centre of the bush. This will open into the centre for light and air to enter.

Pick off and burn the most seriously affected leaves and blooms, and dust the rest lightly with garden sulphur.

NUTLESS WALNUT (J.S., Wellington) — The reason why all the nuts drop off your tree when they reach the size of small marbles is because the female blossoms were not pollinated. In some years and on some trees, the male catkins appear too early to pollinate the female flowers. This may right itself as the tree grows older, although some walnut trees never do overcome the habit of producing their male and female blossoms at a too-widely separated interval.

For this reason, it is always best to plant more than one tree, so there will be some overlapping of the blossom periods.

REGAL LILY (M. McG., Nanaimo) — You are to be congratulated on achieving 11 blooms on one single Regal lily. I can't say whether this would constitute a record, but it is certainly a much better performance than usual.

PERENNIAL ONION (F.C., Colwood) — The perennial or Welsh onion is quite easy to grow and does well in our climate. You can sow the seeds in the open garden any time from early spring to mid-August, sowing in shallow drills and in firm soil. Thin to six inches apart as soon as the seedlings are big enough to handle.

These plants make clumps, rather like chives, only somewhat more vigorous and with larger shoots which may be torn away and eaten as green onions. They are evergreen, and if you keep them weeded and prevent them from flowering, you can have a supply of mild green onions the year round from a few clumps.

They are increased quite easily by lifting and splitting the clumps in the spring.

MOULDY STRAWBERRIES (R.J., Duncan) — I can't say, without seeing the patient, whether your strawberries are infected with grey mould or with mildew. In either case, though, I'm afraid it is too late to do anything about this year's crop, but at least you can prevent a recurrence in future years.

As soon as cropping is finished, clip all the foliage off, rake it up and burn it. As soon as new leaves appear, spray with a mixture of Captan and wettable sulphur, 2 tablespoonfuls of Captan and 4 of sulphur per gallon of water. Next spring use the same spray, starting in April and treating the plants every 14 days until the fruit starts to form.

Art Buchwald
$200 Understanding

WASHINGTON — The $200 student round-trip air fare to Europe has caused a sensation in travel circles. What started out as a very gloomy time for the airline may turn out to be the most exciting summer the aviation business has had in years.

It isn't generally known how the $200 fare came about. Originally the scheduled airlines charged a young person over $450 to fly round-trip from New York to London or Paris.

With the economy in the doldrums this was too much for most parents to afford and it looked as if 1971 would be an off-year for all travel.

Finally as summer approached, a meeting was arranged in New York between the major airline companies and a representative group of parents.

It opened with some rancor. A parent said, "The airlines are taking advantage of a hopeless situation. They know they have us in a bind. We can't afford to spend $450 to send our kids to Europe and at the same time if we keep them at home this summer we'll all go nuts."

An airline executive defended the high fares. "The reason we have to charge so much is that we find fewer and fewer parents are going abroad. If we can't make a profit on volume, we have to make it on a high markup."

"You know very well why we can't go abroad," a father said. "How can we take a vacation and leave our teenagers at home? We can't even go away for a weekend without the roof falling in."

A second parent said, "The airlines owe it to us to get our children out of our hair."

"But," an airline executive protested, "we are having severe financial difficulties as it is. We can not afford to reduce our fares."

"Perhaps," interjected another official, "we might see our way clear to give young people a 10 per cent reduction."

"I put it to you," a father said, "if we can't send our kids to Europe, then we can't go on our own and if we can't go, you're going to be flying empty planes for the next five years."

"You figure out a way of getting the kids out of the house and then we'll start talking to you about going to Europe ourselves."

The airline executives asked for a two-hour adjournment. They came back and said, "This is our final offer. We will give your children a 30 per cent discount on round trip fares to Europe on a standby basis."

"It won't wash," a parent said angrily. "If they're on a standby basis we have no assurance they'll get on the plane. When we take them to the airport we don't want to see them again until September."

"That's right," a mother said, "we've had them all year. Let Europe worry about them for a while."

The executives asked for another adjournment. Then when the meeting recommenced a spokesman said, "We have consulted with our sales department and while it will be a great sacrifice we think we can fly your children to Europe and back for around $200."

"It' about time," one of the parents said.

"Then you accept?" the spokesman said.

"I don't believe there is a parent who wouldn't spend $200 to get rid of a teenager," a mother said.

"Gentlemen," a father added, "by making it possible for our children to go abroad this summer, you have not only saved the airlines. You have also saved the country."

Portnoy 'Cleaned'

Would you believe Warner Bros.' version of Portnoy's Complaint might well end up with a family rating? If you read the Philip Roth book, you won't find that easy to believe. With his little-boy-innocent looks, I was tempted to ask Richard Benjamin what a nice boy like him was doing in a movie like that. But he insisted director-producer-screen writer Ernest Lehman is handling the film adaptation in the best of taste. "In fact," Dick related, "before I signed for the lead, Ernie told me, 'Not only wouldn't I make THAT kind of film, I wouldn't even go to see THAT kind of film!' "

So if Portnoy won't stress all "THAT," then what? "It's going to deal with the emotional pain men and women are capable of inflicting upon one another, of a man who never allows himself to love a woman completely because he'd have to give up that big love affair with Mom." Oh, yes, Portnoy's mother hangup still remains a dominant theme, but with humor inserted to soften the impact a bit.

By the time you read this, Bob Hope might have stopped all that pacing. He and Dolores have been awaiting the arrival of another grandchild. Their son Tony and his wife, Judy, are expecting their second this month.

Dan Blocker has lost 27 pounds since returning to Bonanza work in April by "just not eating." And Don Mitchell, of NBC's Ironside, was worried that his visit home to Houston would spell disaster to his newly slim silhouette. His mother's one of those mothers who doesn't recognize diets.

INSTANT REPLAY: "You can't do anything good for TV and get away with it." That was Richard Boone speaking six months ago. And he went on from there, naming Madison Avenue as the bad guys, lashing out: "You can't lick the rating system. It's geared to mass-product advertising. And all it does is indicate how many consumers with no taste for quality entertainment are watching you. The networks support that system, they control it, in fact! I'll never do another series again." Guess what Richard Boone is doing now? He's in Hollywood, in final talks with Universal concerning the movie for TV he'll shoot this fall, and which is scheduled as an NBC TV pilot! The project is tenatively titled, Heck, but I imagine they'll change that. Maybe to Aw Shucks, Folks!

Make of it what you will, and Glenn Ford will, undoubtedly make something of it: Frank Sinatra jetted to Carefree, Ariz., for a visit with Hope Lange. She's been toiling there before the CBS Dick Van Dyke Show cameras.

Rex Harrison rented Richard and Elizabeth Burton's yacht to take his Elizabeth Harris on an Atlantic cruise. And now Sexy Rex is talking about buying his own luxury vessel with his 50 per cent share of BBC's U.S. sale of his video version of Chekov's Platanov.

In Hollywood Carol Burnett and Julie Andrews are huddling and hoofing it up, preparing for their upcoming CBS special which tapes on July 1 at New York's Lincoln Centre.

Otto Preminger and Dyan Cannon have been trying to resolve their Such Good Friends differences these past few weeks. Otto is determined the Dyan will bare her all in that flicker, and Dyan insists she's not that type of girl. She told me there was no strip scene in the original script, and she doesn't think it's cricket of Otto to add one now. Preminger might be interested to know that United Artists has ordered Jim Coburn's The Honkers rescripted to insure it receives a family rating. That studio — and others — is discovering that the Restricted classification keeps folks away from theatres, instead of luring them inside. Evidently we've finally had our fill of peeking inside bedroom windows via the movie camera. And doesn't that help reaffirm your faith in the public's taste.

Province Eases Ban on Falcons

The provincial fish and wildlife branch has altered an earlier order forbidding the taking of falcons this year on coastal B.C. to assist a program designed to encourage captive reproduction studies.

Under the change, a maximum of six young falcons may be taken from northern Vancouver Island by the fish and wildlife branch if the breeding success has been favorable.

The birds taken will be allocated to resident falconers for trained flying and for reproduction studies.

A press release from the branch said the program of captive reproduction studies needs support as a conservation measure.

Fast Trucks Worry Parents

Gravel trucks "barrelling" through a residential area are worrying the parents of children, according to residents.

"It seems we're just going to have to sit and wait for something serious to happen to one of the children before anyone listens to us," complained Martin Talman del'Armee, 536 Ackland, Colwood.

He told the Colonist Saturday that the trucks in question turn off Metchosin Road at Wishart, then are driven up Ackland to Galloway to a gravel pit.

"They just barrel around the corners — and those trucks can't stop on a dime," he said.

"The parents out here are upset and distraught about this," he said.

According to del'Armee the RCMP have received complaints and have sent a car to the area.

"When the car gets there the word apparently gets around because the trucks are all driven cautiously until the police car goes away and then its back to the same old thing again," he said.

Colwood RCMP confirmed Saturday night they have received complaints from neighborhood residents about gravel trucks exceeding the speed limit in the area. A spokesman said drivers have been issued warnings and "we intend strict enforcement in that area."

WANTED: 1 TRANSMISSION for '61 Triumph. Grant, 382-0729.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

You are more likely to hold a hand containing two four-card suits than any other type of hand.

When you happen to have 17 h.c.p. or more it is seldom difficult to decide which of these two suits to bid first. If playing the Big Club there is no problem, and even if not, you have more freedom of manoeuvre with a strong hand than with a weak one.

1. ♠ A 10 9 5 ♡ Q 10 8 ◇ A K 9 6 ♣ 7 3
2. ♠ Q J 6 4 ♡ 5 2 ◇ A J 8 4 ♣ K Q 10
3. ♠ A Q 1 6 ♡ 7 2 ◇ A Q 9 4 ♣ Q 10 3
4. ♠ 10 8 7 4 ♡ Q 5 3 2 ◇ A K 10 ♣ A 2

But with 16 points or fewer it is very important to choose the right suit to bid originally. For any misjudgment is apt to cost heavily later in the auction.

Which suit should South open in each of these hands?

1. One spade. When two four-card suits are not adjacent, the question of whether to open with the higher or lower ranking suit is a matter for individual judgment. It depends on the hand.

In this instance, if you were to open this hand with a bid of one diamond, it would become impossible to find a satisfactory move if your partner happened to respond two clubs. Whatever you bid next would mislead your partner.

On the other hand, by opening one spade you can raise a response of two hearts to three hearts and can bid two diamonds over a response of two clubs.

2. One diamond. Over one heart from partner you can rebid one spade, and if partner bids two clubs instead you can raise to three. To open one spade might turn out badly, for you would have no sound rebid if partner responded two hearts.

3. One spade. This hand is different from the previous hands because it is appreciably stronger. Therefore if you open one spade and your partner bids two hearts, you can describe your hand perfectly by bidding two notrump. While if your partner bids two clubs over your one spade, you can bid two diamonds. Whatever happens, you are in no difficulty.

It is true that if you elect to open one diamond, you will not be in any great trouble. But you may not find it so easy to describe your point-count and your distribution very accurately.

4. One Diamond. This is an unusual situation, for South holds two weak four-card majors, neither of which is an attractive vehicle for an opening bid. With 13 h.c.p. however, it would be wrong to pass and therefore it is permissible to open the strong three-card diamond combination. In the unlikely event that partner raises diamonds, there will be no need to panic, for partner will surely be unbalanced, with four-card diamond support and a singleton somewhere.

Actually, the worst that can happen is that partner responds with a bid of two clubs, in which case you will have to bid two notrump, admittedly a point or two light.

Glad You Asked

Q: About that great French actress, Sarah Bernhardt — how did she manage (in the days before plastic surgery) to look so young? And did she actually sleep in a coffin? — Joanne N., Buffalo.

A: Yes. Quite frequently. "To get used to death," she explained. The aging Divine Sarah looked ten years younger when she went on-stage by a contrivance she improvised. Resembling clothespins, they painfully pulled her septuagenarian folds and wrinkles to the back of her neck.

Q: Wasn't Carol Burnett's mother an alcoholic? — C. Randolph, Chicago.

A: Yes. So was her father. "I've been criticized for talking about my parents as alcoholics . . . but I saw enough to know that drinking is an illness and nothing to be ashamed of," Carol told Paula Edwin in The New Companion. "I'll never forget my mother saying to me, 'Comedy is tragedy plus time.' She may not have thought it up herself, but I think it's a valid observation."

Q: I like Doris Day's down-to-earthiness so much. I wonder if there's anything to a girl friend's claim that the actress had polio at one time, and that is why she took up dancing. True or false? — Peggy T., Columbus, Ohio.

A: Untrue. Miss Day's original ambition was to be a dancer. But this was thwarted when an auto accident injured one of her legs. So she became a top singing star and actress.

Q: Why doesn't the personal physician of Howard Hughes once and for all clear up the mystery — and publicly answer all the questions about the billionaire's physical and mental health? — Elbert M., Shreveport, La.

A: Because the doctor himself has filed suit against Hughes — for $1.8 million. Dr. Robert Buckley of Los Angeles claims he was "fired without cause" on Dec. 31, 1970. Says he was contracted in 1968 to be Hughes' personal physician until 1988 (at an annual fee of $50,000 per year).

Q: With Johnny Carson taking so much time off, how does his second banana, Ed McMahon, feel about maybe slipping into the top job? — Len Levy, Philadelphia.

A: "Naturally," McMahon admits, "at times you think of that moment. I have replaced him many, many times. But I wouldn't want to have the worry of that show that Johnny has — always grooming himself to be better." (Personal note: No question about Ed's sincerity — the show has already made him a millionaire.)

Q: Didn't those actors made up like apes for "Escape From the Planet of Apes" cause a riot when they roamed the streets of Beverly Hills for special scenes? — hannah R., Norfolk, Va.

A: They barely drew a glance from passersby—who took them for out-of-town hippies.

Q: How come Frank Sinatra rated a special "humanitarian award" at the last Oscars? What did he ever do for anybody but himself? — Gerald M., St. Louis.

A: Sinatra's performed countless "good" deeds for many people. But the singer prefers his helping-hand missions to go unsung. Even pays press agents to keep such activities out of the paper. Like the recent benefit Frank staged for comedian Frank Fontaine, which raised some $20,000 to ease Fontaine's financial fix. Felled by a heart attack, the former Gleason comedian is in such debt to U.S. Internal Revenue that in lieu of cash they even seized his suburban Boston home.

Q: I've heard that Britain's House of Lords is studying a report on pornography and obscenity similar to the white House report. What are their findings? — L.L.L., Nashville.

A: None yet. But there is pressure to clean up movies, the theatre, TV, books and magazines to prevent the issue from becoming a political soccer ball. Spearheading the movement to debate the impact of pornography in the dignified House of Lords is Lord Longford. His research included visiting a "sex supermarket," strip joints in the Soho section of London, and viewing X-rated films as well as live shows such as "Oh, Calcutta."

CANADIAN FLAG is lowered for last time during farewell ceremonies at commemorative stone in Korbecke, West Germany.

'Kleine Kanada' Closes

Canadians Say Farewell To German Hometown

By MAJOR WILLIAM RAE

SOEST, West Germany — Ceremonies held last weekend in and around this picturesque old walled city marked the final departure of Canadian servicemen from Northwest Germany where they had served for the past 19 years.

The marked not only the end of a significant military era but the close of a little-known chapter in Canada's history. Nearly 100,000 Canadians and their dependents had served here over the past two decades, "Hometown" for most of them over these years, was as likely as not, a small town or village with timbered houses and cobbled streets nestled in the rolling farmlands of the Westphalian Plain.

As Canadians probed and prowled the winding narrow streets and ancient squares with their eyes and cameras they discovered a diverse, colorful new world steeped in history and rich in architectural styles spanning more than a thousand years. Its people although reserved were friendly and industrious and above all intensely interested in their Canadian neighbors with whom else community and individual relationships grew over the years.

More than 10,000 children were born to Canadian families in this "Kleine Kanada." Many children whose parents returned for two or three tours of duty, lived and for the most part grew up in Germany. Over 1,000 servicemen brought home German brides, and even a few Canadian girls reversed the flow and married German husbands. But where there is life there is death — so it was with the Canadian Brigade. Close to 500 died while serving here and will remain forever in Germany.

The main ceremonies, the unveiling at Korbecke of a red granite stone sculptured in the shape of a maple leaf and the dedication of a memorial at the Stadt Werl cemetery were carried out by members of the closeout force who had remained in the area to wind up the hand over properties occupied by the Canadians.

This force, headed by Lt.-Col. D. I. Morgan, RCOC, of Ottawa, Ont., had a task of no small magnitude. The Canadian comunity had grown over the years to some 16,000 and had acquired 10 garrisons, churches, schools, ice arenas, supermarkets and hundreds of married quarters.

The bulk of the servicemen and dependents who had served in the Canadian Brigade had departed last fall. About half returned to Canada and the rest to a new location in Lahr, southwest Germany, in keeping with revised defence policies that called for a 50 per cent reduction in Canada's contribution to NATO and co-location of its ground and air forces in one area.

At the unveiling of the commemorative stone Burgermeister Beike of Korbecke praised in his speech the close ties and deep friendship that had grown over the years between Canadians and the local populace.

"You volunteered to serve the cause of peace in the world," he said, and "peace was maintained as a result of your presence. For this we owe you our special gratitude."

In the Canadian section of the city of Werl cemetery dedication services of a memorial erected to the memory of 447 Canadians buried there were performed by Protestant and Catholic padres.

Accepting from Lt.-Col. Morgan a memorial register containing the names of the dead for keeping within the Stadt Ratthaus, Burgermeister Frau Doctor Rohrer pledged:

"On behalf of the citizens of Werl and myself, please convey to the mothers and fathers, the wives and husbands and the sons and daughters of those buried here, our sacred promise to care for these graves along with those of our own dead for all time."

The ceremonies were attended by Maj.-Gen. D. C. Laubman of Edmonton, Commander Canadian Forces Europe and Brig.-Gen. J. C. Gardner of Regina, the last commander of the Canadian Brigade, who travelled specially from Ottawa to take part in the farewell ceremonies.

'Prose-Poem Psychodrama'

Victoria Staging Set For Commended Play

Windigo, a widely-praised play starring 12 Indian prisoners from Matsqui Correctional Institute, will be presented for the first time in Victoria Friday and Saturday at the Provincial Museum.

The play, described as "a prose-poem psychodrama," was written by Cam Hubert of Nanaimo. It will be presented in covert with poetry readings by native poets and a film, Ballad of Crowfoot, by Willie Dunn.

Norm Fife, himself a Matsqui inmate and performer in Windigo, said the cast represents the United Native Club of the prison. They are given short duration passes out of Matsqui in order to present the play across the province.

Although no one in the cast is a professional actor, the production "attacks the mind, the heart and the senses with a savage intensity," according to Vancouver theatre critic Christopher Dafoe.

Following the performance, the audience is encouraged to question the inmates and discuss implications of the play.

Victor school principal E. W. Sullivan estimated that half of the school enrolment of 65 will participate. The program will run from July 12 to Aug. 20.

Park Idea 'Utter Nonsense'

'Economic' Realities B.C.'s First Concern

B.C.'s Deputy Minister of Recreation and Conservation Lloyd Brooks said Saturday a federally proposed marine park in the Strait of Georgia is "utter nonsense."

Responding to questions from the audience at the conclusion of a day-long seminar sponsored by the Capital Region branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada, Brooks said he did not favor the park idea.

"We're talking about over 6,000 square miles in the heart of our (the province's) commercial activity," Brooks said, stressing that "economic reality" is his first concern.

Brooks said he did not like the word "park," and would prefer to approach the entire subject under the label "water management area," which would include many uses and activities throughout the strait.

The underwater marine park was proposed by federal Minister of Fisheries Jack Davis last September and has been praised by oceanographers, ecologists and the public. A clear idea of just what a "marine park" would mean, however, has not really emerged pending current federal studies of the proposal.

In his prepared remarks Saturday, Brooks said the B.C. government is "interested," but so far has not been invited to participate in either policy or scientific studies of the park proposal being conducted by the federal government.

He said jurisdiction over interfidal water is a provincial one and no park can be created without the co-operation of both governments. "This implies a closely integrated approach ... if we are to come up with a water management plan essential for such a park," Brooks said.

The seminar, held at the University of Victoria, attracted about 40 people. Panelists included Brooks, Howard Paish, technical consultant for the proposed park; Robert McHaffie, marine engineer; Dr. R. Slavin of Washington state and Ludlow Kramer, secretary of state for Washington state.

The Washington representatives discussed environmental measures being taken there and the need for increased co-operation and co-ordination between communities on the Pacific rim.

Rightists, Jews Shout and Fight

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fighting broke out Saturday between delegates to a right wing convention and Jewish Defence League pickets. A bystander was beaten, seven JDL members arrested and the convention evicted from its auditorium.

A small bomb caused minor damage to the auditorium before the fighting.

The convention, in the Embassy Auditorium, was held by the National States Rights party, with about 100 delegates attending.

The militant JDL, saying leaders of the American Nazi party and the Ku Klux Klan were also attending, picketed the auditorium.

Planaria Kinill, manager of the auditorium, said "the pickets marched up and down, shouting 'never again,' and members of the states rights party came out and taunted them, and they called each other name — 'Jew' and 'Nazi.'

Fighting broke out between the two groups. Police said a passerby, Charles Price, said he got into an argument with JDL pickets, and they attacked him with "clubs and sharp objects and kicked him," inflicting "bad head cuts and bruises."

Price did not have to be taken to hospital, police said.

Police arrested seven JDL members, a JDL spokesman said. Police said four were charged with assault with a deadly weapon and three with interfering with police. One of those arrested was Jan Okin, western region co-ordinator for JDL, a spokesman for the league said.

The auditorium evicted the states rights convention.

"We have cancelled their convention here," said Mrs. Kinill.

"I can't afford to have another bomb here. We have 250 persons in apartments for senior citizens next door.

Schooner Sinks –22 Dead

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — A Grenadian schooner with 27 persons aboard caught fire and sank 15 miles north of Trinidad, the Trinidad coast guard reported Saturday. Five survivors in a lifeboat were rescued.

The coast guard said a search was conducted all day Saturday for the 22 missing persons, including some women and the captain of the vessel, the City of St. George. It reportedly carried two other lifeboats, but survivors said one of them may not have got away from the ship.

The 125-ton motor-driven schooner left Trinidad for Granada at 10 p.m. Friday with 15 passengers, a crew of 12 and a cargo of cement and gas-filled cylinders.

Two Drown In Mishap

SICAMOUS (CP) — Two men drowned Saturday when a car containing four persons left the highway and plunged into 25-foot-deep water in Mara Lake near Sicamous.

Police identified the men as Leonard Thomas Raymsford, 50, of West Vancouver and Harold Fieldings Thompson, 46, of Hudson' Hope. Two survivors were reported in fair condition in hospital.

Quebec Party Picks Loubier

QUECEC (CP) — Gabriel Loubier, 37, a lawyer from Quebec City, was chosen leader of the Union Nationale Party Saturday in a close third-ballot win over Marcel Masse.

Loubier had 607 votes while Masse, who trailed closely throughout, had 584. He succeeds Jean-Jacques Bertrand, who announced his retirement after the Liberals won the Quebec election of 1970.

During his acceptance speech, Loubier spoke briefly in English, a break with party tradition. He asked English-speaking Quebecers to join the UN because the party "hopes that Quebec can be allowed to live with its traditions and aspirations."

Masse, disgruntled at his close loss, blamed former education minister Guy Cardinal, who threw his support to Loubier minutes before the third ballot.

Masse refused to say whether he would support the new leader, and some of his adherents said they would join the separatist Parti Quebecois on Monday.

He and Loubier were the only strong finishers at the convention. Mario Beaulieu was eliminated after the second ballot when he got only 99 votes to Loubier's 568 and Masse's 544.

Pierre Sevigny, former cabinet minister in the government of Conservative John Diefenbaker, lost out after garnering 26 votes on the first ballot. Unknown Andre Leveille received no votes.

The three men who made it to the second ballot are all strong Quebec nationalists whose Quebec-first views were expressed when they were cabinet ministers in various Union Nationale governments in Quebec.

Last of Nonuplets Dies in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The last of nine children born a week ago to Mrs. Leonard Brodrick died Saturday night, hospital officials announced. Cause of death of the child—a boy—was not given.

Mrs. Brodrick, a 29-year-old former nurse, gave birth last Sunday to the world's first recorded nonuplets.

Cantankerous Press Upheld

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge Saturday upheld the New York Times' right to publish secret U.S. documents on the Vietnam war obtained without permission from the Pentagon, but continued to restrain the newspaper from doing so until a higher court can rule on the case.

The decision by U.S. district judge Murray I. Gurfein said the free flow of information was guaranteed by the constitution "so that the public will be informed about the government and its actions." Those in authority, he said, must suffer a "cantankerous press" whose existence helps preserve freedom of expression and the right of the people to know.

The U.S. Department of Justice, which last Tuesday won a temporary order prohibiting the Times from further disclosures of the study on how the United States got involved in Indochina, appealed Gurfein's decision to the Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, whose three judges will hear the case at noon Monday.

That means the soonest the Times would be able to continue publication of the controversial study would be in Tuesday morning newspapers, provided an appeals decision went its way. It was expected, however, that the case would end up in the U.S. Supreme Court, along with a

$2.5 Million Confiscated —All Phoney

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police and secret service agents seized $2.5 million in counterfeit currency Saturday, bringing the amount of phoney money confiscated in Los Angeles this year to nearly $10 million — half the U.S. total.

Los Angeles city police said they found $16,000 worth of bogus $20 bills in a car stopped Saturday morning for a routine traffic violation. The bills were printed in threes on uncut sheets.

They arrested two Los Angeles men, Alvin Smith, 50, and Joe R. Gindratt, 34.

The secret service said the rest of the money and the printing plates were recovered in a raid on Gindratt's home.

Furnace-Like Desert Wind Mideast Bane

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

JERUSALEM — This is the season of the Hamsin, the furnace-like desert wind which blows across the Middle East. It can cause such pronounced physiological effects on its victims that judges sometimes regard them as mitigating circumstances in criminal cases.

The air becomes hot, dry and parched when the Hamsin blows. Beer and soft-drink sales zoom. Children and their parents become snappish and seek relief in siestas. Dogs pant, even in the shade, and the trees murmur wearily. Nature's cooling systems are overtaxed with heat.

Known here as the Hamsin, the hot winds have various names in other countries. In Tunisia, they are called the Chili; in Morocco, the Chergui; in Tripolitania, the Ghibli. And many desert dwellers call them the Simoon, or the Sirocco.

Researchers at Jerusalem's Hebrew University are now seeking ways to relieve and protect the estimated 20 to 30 per cent of Israel's residents who are adversely affected by the scorching winds.

As the Hamsin develops and the heat increases, the researchers have noted, the following physiological effects may occur.

Persons keenly sensitive to the Hamsin become irritable, and some complain of insomnia, headaches, nausea, tension, shortness of breath and disturbances of their vision.

In others, the researchers have found, the Hamsin causes lowered blood pressure, lethargy, an inability to concentrate and a diminution of the sugar content in the blood generating a craving for sweets.

Still others manifest increased thyroid glandular activity.

The Hamsin comes at summer's beginning and end, blowing either from the west or the east.

When spewned in the west, in North Africa's Moroccan, Algerian and Tripolitanian deserts, the Hamsin swoops across Egypt, the eastern Mediterranean and Israel, and finally drifts away to the east.

The eastern Hamsin comes up out of the Iraqi, Syrian and Arabian deserts, blows west across Israel, then continues westward over the Mediterranean.

While the Hamsin from the east is generally an unburdened windstorm, the Hamsin from the west is usually laden with sand or dust. It sometimes darkens the sky and reduces visibility to less than a quarter mile. Driven by the wind, the grit infiltrates even the most tightly closed doors and windows, leaving a film of soft yellow sand-dust on the floors and furniture in every building.

Despite its sometimes drastic effects, the Hamsin is rarely a violent wind by the time it reaches Israel and seldom blows more than two days. It is more a persisting sigh than a shout, lacking the savage velocity of a typhoon or hurricane.

Meteorologist Michael Levi describes it as "a first cousin to other hot and dry winds, such as the Foehn of the northern Alps, the Chinook blowing down the Rocky Mountains, and the Santa Ana of California."

Research here and abroad on hot windstorms has indicated some of them cause environmental changes. At the onset of the wind and heat, for example, the number of positively charged electical particles in the atmosphere increase noticeably.

"Some biologists think the unnerving influence of these hot spells is connected not only with heat and moisture conditions, but also with changes in the electrical field of the earth's atmosphere," Levi says.

Hebrew University has established an outpatient clinic for Hamsin sufferers who are treated with — among other remedies — negatively charged air and thyroid-depressing drugs.

Boy, 14, Charged in Death Of Saanich Woman, 58

By HUBERT BEYER

A 14-year-old boy has been charged with a delinquency in connection with the death of a 58-year-old Saanich woman who was stabbed in her apartment early Saturday morning.

Saanich police said the youth is expected to appear in Greater Victoria Juvenile Court Monday.

The victim is Miss Mary Karpenic of suite 131, Hampton Court, a senior citizen housing development at the corner of Seaton and Hampton.

Police said she was the sole occupant of the main floor suite. Access to the apartment was through the bedroom window.

Several neighbors said they heard Miss Karpenic scream at about 5:30 a.m. One woman, living right across from the victim, also heard the screams and notified police.

Wilf Daniels, 86, who also lives in the development, said he heard the screams, but didn't pay any attention to them.

"They were loud all right, but I thought it was grandchildren visiting one of our tenants; so I didn't leave my room," Daniels said.

Those who weren't awakened by the woman's screams, found their surroundings a beehive of activity later in the morning.

Police cars were swarming all over the area; officers in uniform and plainclothes were busy questioning neighbors.

Members of the Saanich police department's identification branch combed the surroundings for clues that might lead to an arrest.

They carried a scorched cement block to a police car. The block was found at the bottom of the window through which the intruder climbed into the suite. There was a similar block missing from an outdoor barbecue or incinerator on a nearby property.

They took photographs of the window which appeared to be smeared with grime on the outside.

They measured footprints. There were deep impressions in the soft, wet lawn and were made up a slope to the road.

At one point, a police officer carried a pair of shoes to a waiting cruiser; the shoes had been found nearby.

Elton Nichol and his wife Lillie live at 160 Hampton, next to the Hampton Court and in view of the woman's apartment, but said they didn't hear anything.

"Funny thing, too," Nichol said. "I often get up that time of morning to take a walk, but I didn't this morning."

Charity Walkers Found on Moors In Rain and Mist

RAVENSCAR, England (AP) — Police and troops found hundreds of charity walkers exhausted and lost on the rainswept Yorkshire Moors Saturday during a 30-mile trek to raise money for the United Nations Children's Fund UNICEF.

At one stage, more than 100 young hikers were reported missing on the bleak and trackless moorlands. Many were found suffering from exposure and huddled in groups in the torrential rain and mist.

By late afternoon all the charity walkers but one had been tracked down and taken to local village halls for treatment. None was reported in serious condition.

The walkers set off Friday night to trek over the moors from Osmotherley to Ravenscar, each sponsored at various prices for every mile covered. All the proceeds were to go to UNICEF.

To people on southern Vancouver Island a fish trap is an elaborate operation like the ones that used to be on the Sooke shores. It is big business. The fish trap I am writing about is many, many miles away—way down under on the tropical Queensland, Australia, coast. It is rustic, primitive, and appealingly simple, and it is very small business. But it has a fascination that endears it to me as the Sooke fishtrap never did.

THE FISH TRAP

It is almost like the difference in the emotional impact between a funnel and a sail — or between an artificial pool and a natural swimming hole. In a way, the fishtrap with its poles of black wattle, stringybark and tea tree is symbolic of the pioneering way of life that for virtually all the world's population is now just a story written by their grandfathers.

This fishtrap goes straight back to the time when a man could find himself stranded on a strange shore faced with the need to extract some tucker from the sea. A lot of people now stranded in sterile suburbs would be happier if they could change places with him.

I cannot really talk about this fishtrap and my personal involvement without first introducing Bill, who owns it. Bill, like the trap, is an anachronism. He walks around like an animated museum piece — pure 19th century Aussie — a man who has never called anyone "sir" and never will. He is a loner — quite self-sufficient and supremely content with his way of life. His one real worry is that "progress" in one of its many insidious forms will come along to change it.

Being a retired Barrier Reef fisherman and a man constantly on the alert for a change in the wind, he has things pretty well battened down. His retreat is tucked snugly into a remote bay with an inaccessible mountain covered with dense rainforest behind him and a creek, which in the wet season becomes a wild cataract, between him and the gravel road to Cairns, 30 miles away. Bill's route to the city is over the water — a mere 14 minutes in his fast runabout. His beach is so studded with great rugged rocks that only those of us who know the channel dare to come close.

I have referred to "his" retreat, but really I should say "ours" because just over a year ago we joined him in this secluded natural park between the river, the mountain, and the sea. No doubt Bill suffered a few anxious moments when our house was up for sale because new neighbors are always an unknown threat.

The previous record wasn't too good. One occupant of the house had been an alcoholic and he left hundreds of bottles to prove it. Another had kept a kennel of barking dogs. On such deceptively trivial detail does the quality of an environment depend. If Bill had had the money he would have bought our house just to keep it vacant. I'm sure he must have wondered what madness was afoot when we installed such newfangled gimmicks as a garburator and automatic washing machine and, then of all the stupidities, proceeded to tear out the front wall and put in sliding glass doors facing the sea where the storms come from.

It took a few months to demonstrate to his satisfaction that we shared his loathing for all things dirty and noisy and also his appreciation of privacy and close contact with the natural scene. It was then that we joined forces to operate the fish trap.

Bill stepped completely out of character the other day by going to town and spending 40 good Australian dollars on clothes — the price of almost a hundredweight of barramudi or red bream just for a few pairs of shorts and couple of singlets. My wife's comment when I told her about this was very pertinent.

It referred back to an incident when we had to do a repair job on the trap while there was an infestation of stinging jellyfish in the area. Bill had decided it would be safer to wear his long trousers while diving. He went to his little cottage to dig them out from wherever he stores the items he seldom needs. Then he returned looking a bit sheepish. "Have to take a chance," he muttered, "the white ants have et 'em." Sheila's comment on the new apparel was simply "the white ants will eat them."

Bill's usual working attire is something that would look shabby on a scarecrow — a tattered pair of shorts with half the seat ripped away — an old grey shirt with no sleeves — and a truly ancient felt hat with a shredded brim and big gaping holes in the crown. He also wears a sort of sporran. This is a canvas bag tied around his middle and hanging down in front, into which he puts the prawns that he catches in his cast net. He used to put them in the pockets of his shorts in the days when the shorts had pockets. Bill's decrepit attire is in sharp contrast to his fishing gear which he keeps in first class order. His nets he fashions himself with meticulous care. No cast net for sale at any price would suit him. His one other sacred possession is his violin.

Needless to say the impulsive purchase of fine clothing hasn't made a scrap of difference to Bill's way of life or his appearance. After my first exclamations of disbelief I haven't mentioned the new clothes. He wanted them. He bought them. Heaven knows why — I am quite sure he doesn't!

I suspect the reason is rooted in a subconscious need in him for a tie with civilization. His new clothes probably give him an illusion of belonging to the human race. He knows he is equipped to face the world if he has to. In a way, he redundant wardrobe is like the millions of dollars worth of unused fishing gear that is stored in the closets of the world's cities.

If a man owns a rod and reel he may some day go fishing — although both he and his family know very well that he will always be much too busy; if he owns a boat he may some day go sailing although both he and his neighbors know that the boat will go on resting on its trailer in his back yard.

Like Bill's link with civilization, the unopened tackle box is a link with the great outdoors. I can see that a lot of businessmen might need that. But Bill needs his link with civilization as much as the needs another hole in his hat. He, and this goes for me too, has found what he wants and he isn't about to dress himself up and walk away from it.

Before we arrived like refugees from another planet to become Bill's only neighbors, his fishtrap had fallen into disuse. A heavy sea from the northwest had torn the corroded wire and snapped some of the poles weakened beyond recall by the marine borers. The old windlass still stood above the winding platform but no one was about to risk his neck by climbing up there to turn it. The cage below the windlass was just a rusted relic. All that remained of value was the licence — one of the last left on this coastline.

Because of fish board policy no new licences are being issued for fish traps. Any licence that is relinquished is cancelled for good. There are none left now on the north side of Cairns Inlet and only Bill's and one other on the south. Bill's retirement plans didn't include rebuilding the trap.

Our state of affluence was not as precarious as that of the locals. Having come from the fabulous American continent it was assumed by Cairns residents that we were wealthy Americans. In fact we were a couple of disillusioned Canadians with a very doubtful future. But our willingness to pay for new wire netting exceeded Bill's so we entered into a verbal partnership for the purpose of rebuilding and operating the trap.

We were to pay the costs and assist with the work. In return we would get all the fish we could eat, plus half the proceeds of sales. So we bought $80 worth of supplies (a hundred Canadian) and we sharpened our axes and started cutting poles.

It was fascinating seeing the trap take shape. Primitive in design — primitive in its use of native woods — primitive in the technique of setting the poles into the coral beneath the mud and sand on the sea bed — the trap takes its place among the simple things that work.

The fishtrap is just an arrowhead arrangement with the shaft running out from the shore. The fish are guided by this shaft into the two wings of the arrow which leads to a circular receiver and eventually into the cage. No doubt generations of trial and error have marked its evolution. Distances, juxtaposition to currents, angles, etc., are vitally important and Bill knows what works and what doesn't. He has a story to illustrate every point — "... the old bloke who was in your place years ago had a trap out front —never caught more'n' an odd meal." "Why not?" "The build of the trap." "What about the build? Where did he go wrong?" "See this space between here and here? He made it too narrow. The fish wouldn't go in. Simply turned and swam off. Never caught more'n' a bit of tucker."

I have to bow to Bill's knowledge because our trap has certainly produced more than tucker. Even if it hadn't, the tucker would still have made the cash outlay a good investment. We eat only the choice fish. But, being born experimenters, we keep trying new ones for flavour and ease of handling. We don't lack variety. In the first month of operating the trap we caught 33 different species of fish plus crayfish and crab. In the six or seven months since then numerous other varieties have been added — we have given up keeping count. The fish most highly prized (and priced) by the Fish Board is the barramundi, and very nice it is too. We get lots of them, but most go to

JUMPING For Joy

By CYNTHIA BLAIR

There's a bus operator in Victoria who jumps for joy most weekends—usually from 12,000 feet! Sometimes he jumps in the lunch hour, too, like the time he took part in September's sky - diving demonstration at the University of Victoria.

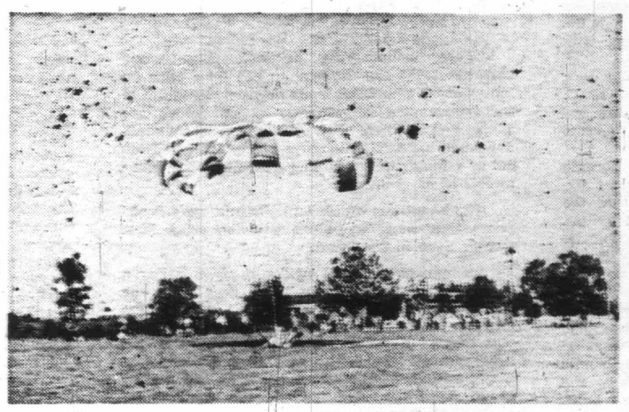
Al Eimer, president of the Victoria Skydiving Club, has jumped 227 times at public demonstrations and private weekend flips in the past three years. He first tried skydiving "for the adventure," explains it as "a kind of acrobatic parachuting."

A skydiver learns to manoeuvre his body as he would in water diving, while hurtling through the air in a free fall of up to 200 miles an hour. "He reaches terminal velocity about 10 seconds after leaving the plane," says Al, "and continues at 200 feet per second until he opens his 'chute."

Maturity, good physical condition and average sense of balance are essential to the skydiver. Interestingly enough, a good head for heights seems to be immaterial. "People say they couldn't do it because they get dizzy standing on a chair," Al smiled, "but it's just not the same thing — you don't relate to it the same way!"

On his first few jumps, the novice wears a static line attached to his 'chute. This automatically opens the canopy three seconds after leaving the plane and undoubtedly gives a comforting security-blanket feeling.

Like a lot of experienced skydivers, Al has two parachutes: a sport 'chute, and a para-commander or super-canopy type, designed for high-accuracy target drops. The sport parachute is made of nylon and dacron and differs from the regular type in that it has one or more panels removed from back and side. Skydivers control direction by pulling on the steering toggles attached to top of the 'chute, thus changing the shape of the holes in the canopy and the direction of onrushing air. The neophyte — more concerned with just getting quietly from A to B — makes his first 75 jumps with a 28-foot modified type.



PERFECT LANDING for Roger Foley.

"Cost of equipment can range from $100 to $1,000," Al commented, pointing out that a sport parachute alone will cost between $60 and $400, while other essentials include special helmet, jumpsuit, boots, altimeter and stopwatch.

Most parajump clubs in Canada are affiliated with the Canada Sport Parachute Association. This is the only parajump club in Canada which can obtain life and PL-PD insurance for members at reasonable rates! Members may use facilities of other clubs and enter regular competitions. Each year Canada sends a team to the world championships, last year held in Yugoslavia.

Membership in the Victoria club is $24 a year and price of each jump is about $3.50, depending on how many go up together and length of time in the air. "We don't have to pay pilots' fees," Al adds, explaining that "there are always plenty around willing to donate their time to keep their flying hours in."

Skydivers will tell you that, per capita, more people meet with accidents driving cars than jumping out of airplanes! Safety regulations are stringently enforced but, nevertheless, the sport is not without its rueful moments. Past-president Roger Foley made news with his 1969 attempt to break a record of 158 jumps in one day and, with only 52 to go, was foiled by a broken ankle. Al himself tells of the time he accidentally landed on a stationary car at Sooke ("Luckily the only thing damaged was my pride!") and of the specially weighted boots his wife — also an enthusiastic but lightly-built skydiver — must wear to prevent herself from drifting sideways!

When retired navy man Fred Massie and his wife moved into their newly purchased home on Heron Street in Oak Bay a month or so ago, they realized that a piece of British Columbia was included with the deed. But along with the real estate deal came a bonus. For the Massies are now the proud owners of what used to be one of the most famous haunted houses in North America.

HAUNTED HOUSE NEVER LONELY

Story by RON BAIRD

Considered by historians the oldest, still-standing dwelling west of the Great Lakes, the attractive cottage set in a small orchard was built in 1850 by retired Hudson's Bay Company trader John Tod, a prominent figure in provincial history a century ago.

Fred Massie admits he's a bit foggy on the history of his house, but plans to bone up on it at the provincial archives one of these days. "I like old things, and the purchase was for that reason," he says. "You could call it my contribution to B.C.'s centennial year."

The Massies bought the house from Mrs. T. C. Evans, whose husband — a retired Canadian army officer, now deceased — had bequeathed it to the Canadian Historical Association, of which he was a member. But the association decided against buying it, and so the house went on the open market in February.

Fred Massie feels that many Canadians don't know enough about the history of their own country, so when he saw that the old Tod house was for sale, it seemed only natural that anyone with an interest in the past would snap it up. But some prospective buyers, in looking it over, immediately began thinking up ways to chop and change the house, and Mrs. Evans didn't much approve of these structural ideas. She was happy when Fred Massie observed that "a man would be a fool to change it — particularly that magnificent fireplace (in the living room)."

Mrs. Massie was entranced when she saw her new home. "Sure, it has crooked floors, but when you walk into the house it's like stepping into another world," she says.

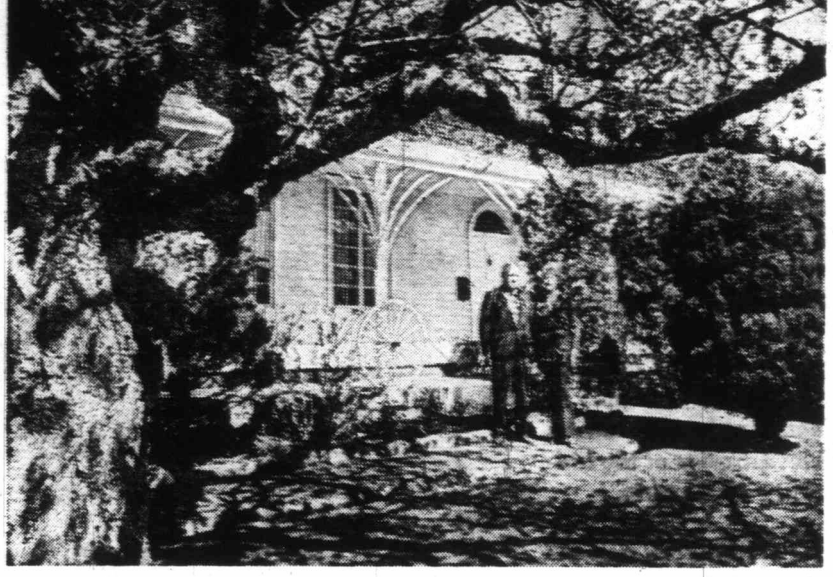
There will be a bit of exploring ahead for the new owners. An attic runs the length of the house, but the only way one can get to it is from the outside by a ladder. What it contains the Massies have yet to discover.

If there are any "spooks" left, Mrs. Massie has delegated her cat, as a majority of one, to act as emissary to the nether world. "He can do the talking," she adds. The spectral conversation may be limited nowadays, but 25 years ago the Heron Street house was literally jumping with ghosts.

In 1944, they drove one owner out the door forever. After she sold the house, Mrs. E. C. Turner remarked: "I've lived there 15 years and loved the place, but I wouldn't go back." Ghosts dogged her every footstep, she reported.

When Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Evans of Toronto moved in that year, they were skeptical of the haunting stories. "I'm a materialist," said the colonel at the time. "I don't believe in ghosts. However, one day I got a phone call warning me the house was haunted, but I didn't pay it any attention. After a while though, I began to think the caller was right."

The house is a low, rambling, two-storey dwelling set back from the road. The doorways are low to the point where it is necessary to stoop when entering some of the rooms. Large beams support the ceilings, and although much of the house is unchanged from the day it was built, subsequent owners have added modern improvements. Gleaming porcelain kitchen fixtures, modern plumbing and other improvements have transformed the kitchen into the 20th-century, but the main historical features are still intact.



NEW OWNERS OF THE JOHN TOD HOME on Heron Street are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Massie. They moved in last month. Massie is retired from the Canadian navy.

These include the original, huge stone fireplaces. Off the kitchen an old door with its 19th-century iron latch leads down cellar stairs to the basement. The windows of the house are unchanged, and are slightly askew, held by hand-fashioned nails. The floors in places tend to lurch off in a tangent. Everything about the Tod home attests to its great age.

The hauntings which kept Victoria agog for 20 years first came to public attention when Mrs. Turner lived in the house.

"Sometimes I would awake at night feeling a 'presence' in the bedroom," she recalled. "The door would slowly open, although I couldn't see anyone. I was convinced, though, that something was there." Her cat was another witness to the supernatural. "At night," said Mrs. Turner, "she would suddenly growl; arch her back and the fur would stand up. I feel sure she saw something I couldn't. When I walked along the passage leading to the stairs, I felt someone was following me. It became, in the end, very tiresome."

One of the strangest occurrences came in 1945 during the Evans' tenure. They had invited two airmen from the RCAF station at Patricia Bay to spend a weekend, and put them up in the guest room. Although aware of the tales of ghosts, the servicemen laughed them off. Their first night began in a conventional enough way, but ended in a different manner.

As one of the airmen recalled later: "I suddenly awoke in the middle of the night. I can't really describe what woke me, although it sounded like the rattling of chains. Over in a corner of the room stood an Indian woman, her hands held out toward me in such a manner that she seemed to be pleading with me to help her. On her arms and legs were what looked like fetters. She kept looking at me, her hands outstretched, and she was saying something I couldn't catch. As suddenly as she had appeared, she vanished."

That was enough for the troops — the two guests fled the house long before the Evans' were up, and made their apologies later while explaining what took them off in such a rush.

In the late 1940s all manner of strange events occurred. By this time, Col. Evans had begun to take a keen interest in the strange goings-on. He had little choice. Every time a new ghost story got around, he was inundated by hordes of eager newspaper reporters.

The colonel seemed the least likely prospect to be mixing with the supernatural world. A tall, erect, no-nonsense soldier, he nevertheless admitted that ghosts, or no ghosts, what went on in his home certainly was not being duplicated anywhere else in Oak Bay — or the entire city, for that matter.

On occasion, he would invite newspapermen to sit in the kitchen and wait for the spooks to do their stuff. Generally, it didn't take long.

The cellar door would quietly open — untouched by human hands. Then close itself, and start to repeat the process once more. China cups and a porcelain cookie jar would swing wildly on their hooks, attached to the china cabinet. An old rocker moved gently back and forth, as though the whimsical ghost had tired of its fun and was resting until it had thought up another trick.

One explanation for these activities might have been the fact that a street-car line running out to the Uplands passed near to the house, and the rumblings of the big car shook the foundations of the house. But no one was interested in a logical reason, when a ghost story was more interesting. And, in any event, other incidents described by Col. Evans certainly could not have been attributed to the shaky B.C. Electric transit system.

Hats would be madly flung from a hat-rack in the hall .. windows would dash from their frames to fall on the ground below . . . and, on a Christmas morning, the playful ghost outdid itself in ingenuity The Evans' found all their cards and Christmas decorations in a neat pile in the middle of the living room floor.

Mrs. Evans later remarked, with resignation: "One is never lonely in this house with these invisible personages around."

By this time, spiritual mediums from all over the world were offering advice to the Evans'. One letter from Oakville, Ont., was addressed simply: 'Col. Evans, The Haunted House, Victoria.' The post office knew exactly where it was destined.

Wrote one medium: "It's an indication that in the past someone was terribly unhappy in the house and has now returned to try and find the happiness they missed." Another suggested a pen and paper be left out so the spirit could transmit a written message. The Evans' tried that but the paper remained blank.

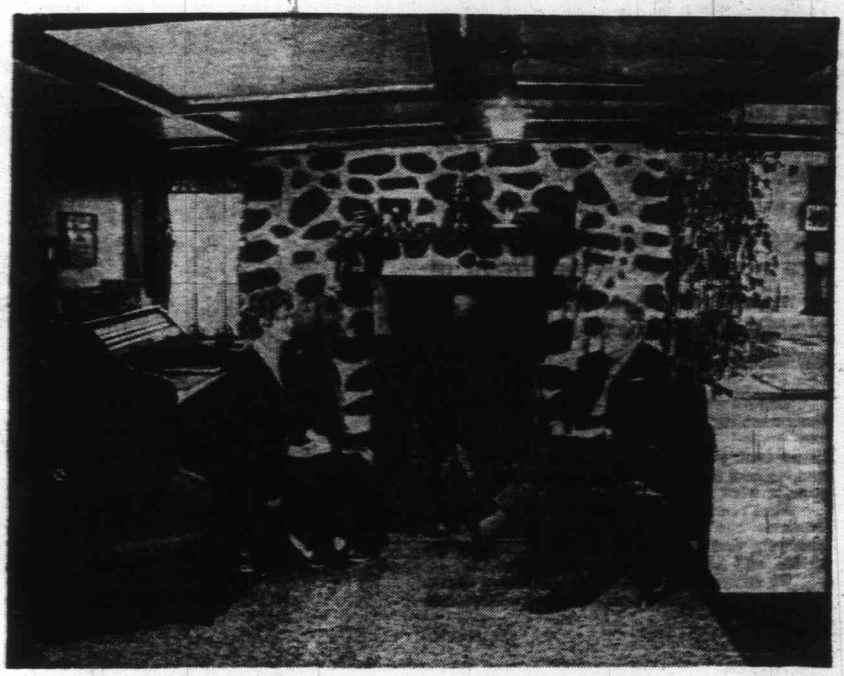
Then, one day in 1952, the hauntings stopped.

Col. Evans had decided to install an oil furnace and while the workmen were excavating a hole outside to place the storage tank, they discovered a headless skeleton.

The bones disintegrated at the touch, and it was believed that the body might have been buried in quick-lime.

If the hauntings were extraordinary, so was the man who built the house on Heron Street.

A bullet-hole in the front door stands as a grim reminder that trader John Tod was a man whose rise to prominence in B.C. had been touched by violence. But if the bullet had not missed its mark, the history of the province might have been the poorer.



MASSES SIT IN NOOK off kitchen, beside original stone fireplace. House was built by retired Hudson's Bay Company trader John Tod, 120 years ago.

Born in Water Leven, Scotland, in 1790, Tod began his career as a Glasgow warehouse clerk. Tiring of that dull, sedentary life, he joined the Hudson's Bay Company and, in 1813, armed with his father's blessing, a few pounds, and three books — The Bible, the poems of Robert Burns, and Buchan's Medicine — he set forth for Canada and a life that was to reward him both financially and spiritually.

In Canada, he prospered. Strong and fearless, with a gentle, Scottish humor, Tod gained the fear and respect of both whites and Indians, and a superstition rose about him that he could neither be outwitted nor killed. The Indians called him 'Great Tod' and they had good reason to respect the man, of whom his mother once said: "He was an unconventional boy and different from the others."

While chief trader at Fort Kamloops, he received word that a band of natives were about to attack and burn the fort, and kill its inhabitants. Riding out to meet them, Tod shouted out the dread word: "Smallpox."

"The smallpox has come to Kamloops," he told the Indians. "I know you are my friends, and I cannot see you die like ants." The band of warriors paled, forgot their guns and their intention of taking the fort. All they could think of were their villages piled high with smallpox dead.

They shouted: "Save us, Great Tod."

The trader dismounted from his horse and called for his medicine kit. Taking a rusty knife, which he used to cut plugs of tobacco, he began to vaccinate the Indians in such a manner that market. For flavor we prefer the Mangrove jack and the yellow-spot cod and the golden-red bream. Then there is the favorite of the Australian aborigines — the mi mi — and it is one of our favorites too. The mi mi is a very small fish and I would have assumed of only local interest, but Madame Prunier refers to it in her classical book on fish cookery.

The flesh of many of these tropical fish is firm and very similar in appearance to the northern halibut — but in my opinion none of them have quite the flavor of the Pacific salmon or the brilliant colour of the coho when cooked. They certainly don't lack colour while they're swimming.

We have had some spectacular catches, like the cageful of yellow trevally — 39 of them with the smallest weighting 10 pounds — and the barracuda that was more than five feet long. He was too big for the cage and we found him wedged diagonally and very dead. He became fertilizer for one of our papaw trees, and that is also the fate of the numerous nuisance fish we catch — the toadfish that not even a crocodile will eat — the stingrays — the catfish — the great tropical sea eels. The mesh of the cage is large enough to allow small fish to pass through, so anything that we catch is either edible, saleable, or goof for the garden.

The really exotic specimens are so fascinating we just look at them, then let them go. Some of the fish are brilliantly colored. Some, like the butterfly cod and bat fish, have fins like plumes, that move in the water with incredible rhythm and beauty.

Some are just plain ugly. The toadfish is in this category, but he has such amusing habits that he is intriguing in spite of his looks. When trapped he inflates himself until he is as round and tight as a beach ball. Some enterprising artisans have devised a technique for making lamps out of them The ugliest fish in the sea (and one of the most dangerous) is the stonefish. And the prettiest? Well, it's hard to choose from the brilliant array — but the parrot fish with its rainbow colours and its blue teeth has to be a strong contender.

A cople of weeks ago we had our first real storm. We were on the edge of Cyclone Fiona, and again the seas were heavy from the northwest. We got our boats out onto dry land — our recently acquired aluminium (a l u m i n u m to you) speedboat — Bill's fibreglass runabout — and a varied assortment of rowboats. But we couldn't take the trap out of the water. We just had to stand on the beach and watch the huge waves pounding it mercilessly. "She'll never take it," said Bill sadly — and she didn't.

When the water flattened we made an inspection, and the destruction was pretty extensive. Bill was as dejected as his stoicism would permit. "We're going to miss her," he said simply. "Not bloody likely," I added, trying to sound like a fair dinkum Aussie. "All we need is a few more rolls of netting and some poles." Bill's eyes brightened, "Good on yer, mate," he said. "I'll sharpen me axe."

In the few days the trap was out of commission we ate beef, chicken, sausages, and lamb chops, but somehow they didn't taste the way they used to. Now we are back in business — crab salad — barramundi steak—delicious$ and there's a load of red bream ready for the fish board.

Almost as colorful as the fish is the fishtrap terminology. The trap isn't emptied — it is robbed. One gets to use this term quite casually, and forgets the impact it must have on the uninitiated. For intance, the other day we had to refuse an invitation to have dinner in town. I explained that I had to get home to rob the fishtrap before the tide got too high. Our host looked a bit startled.

Sometimes I find myself wondering if all this is real. There is a Brigadoon quality to life on this peaceful sunlit coast. I still can't take coconut palms, frangipani, orchids, and hibiscus blooms, and endless sunshine and this tremendous fishing, for granted. I half expect it all to fade away. Sometimes I have bad dreams in which I find myself back where the chill southwester blows the smell of sewage in from Strait of Juan de Fuca Strait.

And then, like Bill, I wonder how long this exotic existence can last. Can the water and the air stay clean? Can the inevitable subdivider be kept at bay? Will we some day have another fight on our hands, as we had at Portage Inlet, to preserve the quality of our chosen environment? I know that I prefer the peaceful, simple life and I have absolutely no wish to fight again for hopeless causes.

But if some scoundrel comes along with a proposal to install one of those disgusting sewer outfalls — be he politician, engineer, or health officer — within smelling distance of our fish-trap — he will find himself faced with two very determined and very suntanned adversaries. Both Bill and I have a lean and hungry look in spite of all the seafood. We should be formidable enough to scare off the most fanatical sewer lovers.

Spring arrived at our retirement hideaway on Quennell Lake between bursts of sunny weather and intermittent rain storms. The air had a freshness and clarity about it, and the chorus of the frogs began. Everywhere nature seemed to be coming to life again and we were no longer living in a wilderness of evergreens, but simply part of a whole new waking creation.

There were birds of all description, joyous in their warbling. Creeping things, too, came out of the ground, and insects hummed. It was a never ending source of delight to discover new and budding flowers, both wild and cultivate, and wonder what they might be.

First came the snowdrops; then violets, crocuses and primroses; daffodils, tulips and narcissi; and forget-me-knots, trillium, honeysuckle and lupin in the woods.

We struggled to contain the blackberry vines, which were everywhere, and trimmed a few trees before their foliage should obscure the lake view. But mostly, the new leafy world just came into being, and with it some much-treasured dogwood trees, a large lilac bush, and an arbor of climbing roses.

We decided to put in a vegetable garden, and to re-use last year's plot with top soil and peat moss added, and to try the new seaweed alginure as fertilizer. We were fortunate in obtaining a load of river-bottom top soil, and also in finding a young man who operates a roto-tiller and he dug the plot for us at a very nominal fee.

There still remained the hoeing, mixing of the soil, and planting, all of which consumed a considerable amount of time, for we were rank amateurs. Clad in our shorts, with the sun beating down upon us, we experienced a rare sense of well-being; and when the physical exertion called for a recess in activity, it was still a joy to rest on one's implement and breathe deeply, — oxygen cocktail, we have heard this called — and wonder at the myriads of tiny roots embedded in the soil, and admire the small blue butterflies which seemed to be attracted to this spot as well as we.

One evening about mid-May we had all but finished the planting, and decided to work through into the evening in an effort to complete it. It was about 9:30 when, with the help of the floodlight from the front porch we had just covered the last row of seeds, we became aware of a loud slap-splash noise from the lake.

Only a beaver's tail, we thought, could produce this particular sound. Then, as we stood quietly and watched, we saw two beavers, dark against the still silvery surface of the lake—swirling in circles around each other. Now and then a loud splash of a tail broke the silence and shattered the smooth water into criss-cross wavelets. Playing tag or love-making? We wondered.

Since that night we have many times seen a beaver swimming at dusk, but somehow the sight was particularly rewarding then; and we hoped that one of those we saw might be the lone beaver of our winter-time acquaintance, but of course we would never know.

Despite our avowed policy of withdrawal from the world of fuss and muss, we have become only partial hermits. Even on the quietest of days, life is never dull, for here there can be commotion with a difference.

Who can deny the novelty, for instance, of being asked to babysit for a pet raccoon? And when said raccoon arrives, witnessing the head-on embrace of young pup and young raccoon, and thereafter watching spellbound while the two young animals wrestled and played away the afternoon.

Or how many people can boast, these days, of a phone call which desperately states something like: "My geese and ducks have wondered the swamp in, and are making for themselves the open lake out." So, not knowing the first thing about geese and ducks, one nevertheless jumps in the car and arrives, at least in time to lend a little moral support to the figure already wading into the swamp in hip boots, and to say "shoo, shoo" from the lake opening while said birds are enticed back on to terra firma.

Then there was the time that Cassie, the female raccoon, decided to leave home, and have a few nights out on the countryside. The Greens were frantic, and we joined the search party, but to no avail. The refinements of civilization finally won out with Cassie, however, and she wound up, tired but satisfied, asleep in the back seat of the Wiseman's Volkswagen. "Get that wild animal out of my car!" reportedly said George, as he dropped Cassie off on his way to work that morning.

Nothing daunted, the Wiseman's own cattle another morning eased though an open gate, travelled down the road, and were discovered looking in the Wiseman's kitchen window. Discovered, that is, by George on the inside looking out, and Anna swears that each steer nudged the other one to move over so he could have a look inside too!

Or the morning we awoke to the sound of dogs barking and a general clatter of no particular origin. We opened the door just in time to see Margaret Green arriving, riding bareback on her charger down our driveway while Rick, who had arrived simultaneously in his truck at our fence via the loop in their own driveway, was coming towards us with a bottle of wine in one hand and tools of some sort in the other.

We don't quite remember the occasion for the visit, but it was a beautiful beginning to a beautiful day; and Sheba, (who had just discovered she could bark), also pups Butch and Brandy in the trunk, enjoyed it all tremendously, too.

No, life has not been dull on Our Road!

Now, in the midst of that first most perfect summer, our lives seemed very full indeed. Working in the garden, out in the canoe, swimming from our rock, walking in the moonlight with Sheba and the four cats — the hours seemed to drift into days and time both stood still and passed by with a rush.

Visitors from that other life had come to call, and we had spent many enjoyable afternoons reminiscing and philosophising with them. The highway of lake was busy now with vacationers boating and fishing and water-skiing as they passed in front of us on their way to and from the Zuiderzee Campsite down the lake apiece. The scenery was still that of bluey-green serenity, with the summer water lilies seeming to form a necklace of lighter greeny-yellow around the island across the channel.

One of the highlights of our life here was when the horses from next door came to call and would whinney at us from over the fence for some of the long grass cuttings which we just might happen to have. Another was on those odd occasions when we had seen a deer, or wild raccoon, or an unusual bird. We had a camera now and a new hobby in attempting color shots of the living world around us.

We had bought a hummingbird feeder and hung it on the front porch directly in front of the window where we ate, and had watched fascinated as these tiny birds hovered and whirred and drank. While on the eaves in the carport two swallows had adopted a last year's nest for their home and produced three young ones. We hesitated to use the back door for fear of disturbing them. Then one day the old nest fell down, a forlorn debris of shattered clay, and the birds were nowhere to be seen. The following day they had reappeared. The young ones, barely at the flying stage, were in close formation on the clothesline, while the parent birds noisily fussed around in a most disturbed way.

Taking a chance, we partially filled an empty honey carton with the fragment of the spilled nest, and nailed this us on the nest-site. To our amazement and, we might add, our gratification, the parent birds inspected and passed on our nest. Then one by one the little ones were vociferously persuaded to make the hazardous journey from line to nest. Routine nest-keeping resumed.

Our vegetable garden had prospered, and it was a real joy to be able to eat right from our own garden. Peas we had had, and beet greens and swiss chard, green onions and radishes, and now the corn was nearly ripe. Then there were beans, carrots, beets, turnips, parsnips, onions and leeks to come. The tomatoes were ripening too, and next year the strawberry plants would yield. As to fruit, the raspberry canes, unpruned, were still giving a tremendous yield of berries, and we had found the small wild blackberries to be delicious. Now the large domestic blackberries were coming ripe, and we found we had several good patches of these. What a treat it was to get up in the morning and head out into the sunshine and pick a bowl of these luscious big blackberries for breakfast!

There were so many other berries that no one seemed to pay too much attention to the salal berries, of which there were so many. Spiked by curiosity with regard to these, we had phoned the public library to enquire, and discovered that not only did the Indians use salal berries, dried, as cakes, but also ate them raw and used to make syrup out of them. The library was unable to tell us just how and when to prepare these, but did give us a recipe for all wild berry jams, which another year we were determined to try out.

The library also quoted from another book which stated that salal berries contain beneficial food value, and recommended them as a source of food to any who are lost in the woods.

Meantime, summer was gradually drawing to a close. On Our Road Margaret and Rick had just finished building a new indoor-outdoor super-duper pen for their two raccoons, and complained only that Tamara (the year-old filly) had taken to going into their kitchen. Anna and George were working on gallons of blackberry wine for, they said, it would be a long winter ahead. (And indeed it was! The winter of the deep, deep snow and many other happenings.)

We, the writers, pause here as we reminisce, to look out across the channel of lake and island to the mountains and sky beyond, and breathe a sigh of contentment; and ponder:

We wish that all people could live as we do, at least for a time in their lives. But then, of course, it is far from everyone who would want to. For those who would, but have not yet made the break, there are other lakes, other woods, still available in this land of plenty. But with today's population explosion, how long will they last? Too soon these will be bought up by moneyed interests, commercialized, or sub-divided into city-size lots. What hope then for the citizen of tomorrow to find a Walden Pond of his own?

On the other hand, what right have we — or anyone else, for that matter — to shut ourselves off in a paradise of nature while so much suffering is going on in the world today, and humanity itself seems bent on rushing headlong towards destruction? Are we honestly seeking the Reality of Being or simply hiding from the reality of seeing? We often ask ourselves these questions.

It is with the young people of today that we especially sympathize, for it seems that they are carrying the banner for all of us in these times of changing perception. We are not referring to the rowdy fringe element — all groups attract extremes — but to those sincere young people whom we feel are searching for a better world. Are they not, in effect, by their refusal to conform to present-day standards and traditions, trying to convey much the same message as did Thoreau (also a non-conformist) back at Walden Pond: that the real needs of life are simple, and that in our haste to secure the material trappings of civilization, we have lost sight of the true values such as time to appreciate the beauties of nature, the search for Truth, compassion and justice for all; and have substituted sham values in a material world of hypocritica lmake-believe.

"Simplify, simplify, simplify!" railed David Henry Thorneau more than 100 years ago. In living this way he would probably have said that we are trying to have our salal and ea tit too. and in this of course he would be perfectly right. But in these days and in these times it is not easy to go all the way as Thorneau did.

Looking ahead, however, we may just do that yet; as prices go up and our income stays down, at least we should never starve here. Shelter and clothing (who cares about styles!) we have, and water, for the rest of our lives, and the food we will or can produce. We don't eat meat (and haven't, since reading the humane slaughter literature some years back) and certainly have felt no ill effects from the lack of it. Other luxuries to which we are still clinging can go, too, if they have to. But our wooded five acres of seclusion we will retain.

MURIEL WILSON'S Thought for Food

MAN-PLEASING FO
FOR FATHER'S DA

Adam started it . . . but it wasn't until a few million years later, in 1910 to be exact, that the spotlight of public attention was focused on fatherhood. It was a Mrs. Dodd of Spokane, Wash., who decided it was high time that Dad should have some recognition. Her own father, a man who had successfully raised six motherless children, was the inspiration for the citizens of Spokane to proclaim a special day for all fathers.

From this modest beginning, Father's Day is now such an important occasion that millions of families will spend over a billion dollars on books, bowling balls, neckties and vintage spirits for Dad, in this country alone. Well! Dad deserves our homage . . . he is the one who develops ulcers and an overworked heart in the pursuit of dollars to support his family.

With the scientists promising test tube babies, there is a possiblity of the roll of father being eliminated. This would be a pity and a great loss to the world, for with all their faults a Father is a useful and important part of a family . . . every home should have one.

Although women concede that fathers are indispensable we are forever throwing verbal brickbats at them. We love to exaggerate their foibles and eccentricities. I've done it myself . . . sharpened my pencil to point out their shortcomings. Today I have sheathed my claws. I will be kind and treat them gently . . . I hereby declare it nothing but a myth that Father is a fuddy-duddy who'd probably be wearing his shoes on the wrong feet if he didn't have a charming and ontelligent wife to guide him. Bosh, all bosh. I'm really all for shining up a halo and placing it on the head of that ever lovin' man.

Today we are going to be concerned with the care and feeding of fathers. We are going to talk about man-pleasing food.

Fathers and outdoor cooking go hand in hand so our first recipe is for a great barbecue sauce that is suitable for chicken, steak and chops. It is easy and fool-proof with the greatest flavor because it is made with fresh tomatoes, a touch of fresh lemon, a cupful of crisp onion and the savor of garlic to add excitement to the flavor of this sauce. Fresh vegetables have an inimitable taste and texture all their own that says you cared to take the small amount of time to make something superb instead of just so-so.

FRESH TOMATO BARBECUE SAUCE . . . 4 pounds fresh tomatoes peeled and chopped, 1 cup chopped fresh onions, 2 cloves of garlic minced, 1 cup brown sugar packed, ¼ cup butter or margarine, 1 cup chili sauce, ¼ cup Worcestershire sauce, ¼ cup fresh lemon juice, 2 tsp. salt and 1 tsp. dry mustard.

Combine all the ingredients in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for about 1½ hours (uncovered) or until thickened. Makes about 1 quart. Use with meats and poultry.

To barbecue steaks and chops . . . choose well marbled sirloin, club, T-bone or porterhouse steak cut 1 to 2½ inches thick, and 1-inch loin lamb chops. Remove meat, especially thick steaks, from the refrigerator at least an hour before cooking so they will be near room temperature.

Trim off excess fat so drippings will not catch fire and score edges of steaks and chops so they will not curl during cooking. Rub fat drippings over grill or brush lightly with oil to to keep the meat from sticking. Place steak (or chops) on grill set 3 inches from briquets that have reached the light gray ash stage or a red glow at night, and broil until well browned on first side. Turn with tongs (to prevent loss of juices from meat pierced with a fork) and cook on other side until desired doneness.

To check for doneness, make a small cut in the meat near the bone. Season with salt and pepper. Serve with Fresh Tomato Barbecue Sauce.

CHICKEN . . . Place broiler fryer halves or quarters skin side up on grate set about 6 inches from coals. Sprinkle with salt and brush with Fresh Tomato Barbecue Sauce. Cook until tender, turning and brushing with sauce occasionally. Allow about one to one and a quarter hours total cooking time depending on weight of chicken. To test for doneness, the leg should twist easily out of the thigh joint and pieces should feel tender when probed with a fork.

Chicken has flavor fit for a king, and it's packed with nutrition every adult (and child) needs. An average 3-ounce serving of chicken has 23 grams of quality protein. And if Father is concerned about his weight, chicken will be as welcome as a brand new putter. Chicken has few calories than any of the leading meats, according to the National Broiler Council.

Chicken is lower in saturated fats, so important if Father is watching his choles- . . . this time it's foil roasted with begetables, terol. Here is another way to cook . . . this time it's foil roasted with vegetables, low calorie and delicious. A Father's Day special.

"HIS HIGHNESS CHICKEN . . . One whole broiler-fryer chicken, Ac'cent, salt and pepper, heavy duty aluminum foil, paprika, 1 pound unpared small zucchi cut into ½-inch slices, 4 carrots cut in half lengthwise, 2 potatoes cut in half and chopped parsley. Sprinkle the cavity of the chicken with Ac'cent, salt and papper. Hook wing tip into back to hold neck skin. Tie legs together. Place chicken across center of 24-inch piece of foil. RECIPE FOR A HAPPY MARRIAGE . . . take a man and a woman and add a family. Mix in a large quantity of consideration, thoughtfulness and tenderness. Stir well. Add unmeasured trust and confidence. Mix with loving hands. Add friends and a few hobbies. Flavor with a bright fireside and loving kisses. Bake well and serve a slice a day for all of your lives.

Do you praise him enough . . . usually the answer is no. Men have an insatiable need to be praised, patted and admired. You don't even need to be subtle about it. Just come right out and tell him he's the most wonderful, intelligent and handsomest man you know and he'll modestly admit it. Keep reminding him that you think he is remarkable, captivate him with soul-satisfying food and you'll keep that man happy even in captivity.

DEAR HELOISE:

Our den has a very long wall on one side, and I was at a loss to decorate it. My pictures were all too small and I really needed something extra special there.

Then, while on an outing at the lake, I spied a magnificent cedar root half submerged in the water.

My husband cut it loose for me and the two of us managed to get it home and let it dry thoroughly outdoors. Then I spray-painted it gold.

We mounted it on the wall with the use of small nails and nylon fishing cord (which is transparent). The roots flowed across the wall for several feet, filling up that long bare space just beautifully!

Then, to add a bit of extra interest, I placed several gold-sprayed pine cones at various spots on the root trunk (although it's just as attractive without the cones).

Have had ever so many compliments on the unusual effect, and thought some of your readers might find this idea of interest.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

TAKE A LETTER

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever have the problem when you want to write a letter, that the stationery and envelopes are one place and the pens and pencils are in another? Then you can't find the stamps?

I had this problem until I figured out how to keep them all in one place and handy for me.

I took a small (old) train case and put my stationery in the bottom. I found a cigar box that just fit in the case and put my pens and pencils and stamps in this.

On each side of the cigar box I fitted my thank-you notes and extra envelopes.

Much easier than looking all over the house for these items.

TOASTMASTER'S TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

Today was one of those kinds of days when it seemed the kids didn't like anything I fixed for them to eat. In mid-afternoon when they were begging for cookies, I had an idea:

Why not use the cookie cutters for their toast for supper?

You've never seen such angels when I announced that they were having "toast-cookies" for supper.

I put the scraps left over from cutting the "cookies" on a plate with the toast-cookies, and what fun they had guessing which scraps went with which cookies, and also figuring out what the scraps were—a triangle, key, etc.

Best of all, no arguments about eating and no scraps left over, either!

This has been such a hit that I'm going to use it for their sandwiches, too.

KITCHEN SPECIAL

DEAR HELOISE:

The walls in my kitchen are plasterboard, painted with enamel paint. All of my neighbors' walls, and others readers' too, I presume, have the same kind.

When it comes time to wash the walls, I close the kitchen windows and doors, and fill three big pots and the teakettle with water, heat and let the water steam for an hour or so.

This steams the walls, making them about four times easier to wash.

When ready to do the scrubbing down, I open the kitchen doors and let the steam out. This task must be done quickly, while the soil on the walls is softened and loosened.

I get the job done in less than half the time. Not only that, but it does a thorough job, too.

I have found that the best time to do this is on a weekend, when my husband is home.

M. J.

And let's hope he's got a rag in his hand!

I tried this in my bathroom with the shower running HOT and my walls are beautiful now. Thanks to you . . .

KITTY'S KATNIP

DEAR HELOISE:

My cat loves the little catnip toys you buy at the store, so one day I decided to try to make her one.

I took a scrap of felt and doubled it. Then I cut out a cat and fish figure and put a little catnip inside each figure.

These would make darling gifts for your friends' kitties.

I like knit pajamas with tight wrists and ankles, but I have a very hard time finding them in the stores.

When I was glancing through a store catalogue the other day, I spotted a picture of some thermal underwear such as lady skiers wear.

I decided that would be just the thing to use as pajamas. I bought some and really enjoy them. They're two-piece, all-cotton, white and machine-washable.

THREAD OF TRUTH

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a hint for that seemingly universal problem of keeping spools of thread from unwinding and tangling.

Slip a small rubber band around the spool, just being sure the end of the thread is caught snugly underneath.

You can do anything you want with that spool and the thread will never unwind.

It has surely solved a snarly problem for me.

The Days After Confederation

By JAMES K. NESBITT

The union of the Crown Colony of British Columbia with Canada signed and sealed on July 20, 1871, the new Canadian province got along to working out the practical details. It was no easy task; it was most difficult to shuck off the colonial days, to which everyone had become accustomed, and which many missed very much, looking upon London as home, but Ottawa as foreign territory.

For instance, it was some years before people called Lieutenant-Governor Trutch "Your Honor." He was addressed "Your Excellency," because that's what the colonial governors had been called.

The first provincial secretary of British Columbia under the new setup was Hon. A. Rocke Robertson. It was quite a time before people stopped referring to him as the colonial secretary. Habits, as is well known, are difficult to break.

The first big job the new province faced was an election, which came in the autumn of 1871.

The first lieutenant-governor, Joseph William Trutch, acting on instructions of the prime minister of Canada, Sir John A. Macdonald, chose an Irish barrister, John Foster McCreight, as first premier.

At the election McCreight was endorsed by the people.

Then were made preparations for the first session of the PROVINCIAL Legislature, as distinct from the colonial legislatures of the past.

The biggest difference was that all members of the PROVINCIAL Legislature were elected by the people, whereas the colonial legislatures, while they had elected representatives, also had legislators appointed by the royal governors — and these appointees were given more power by the governors than they gave to those who were elected by the people.

It was this state of affairs that caused discontent in this Crown Colony; there were those who said it was not democratic, and these protests led to union with Canada.

The first PROVINCIAL session opened in February of 1872. The Victoria Standard noted: "The first Parliament of the Province of British Columbia under Responsible Government, and since confederation with the Dominion, was called together . . .

"Charles Good, clerk of the House, son-in-law of retired Governor Sir James Douglas, read the names of the members, after which His Lordship, the Chief Justice (Begbie), came forward and administered the following oath:

" 'I do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, her heirs and successors, according to law — so help me God.' "

Then came some unexpected confusion: "The oath, being about to be administered to Mr. John Robson, the Chief Justice drew from his pocket a protest served upon him by Mr. J. W. Carey, and which read as follows:

"I beg, most respectfully, as a candidate at the last election in the electoral district of Nanaimo, to object and protest against the oaths being administered to and taken by Mr. John Robson, who has been improperly certified by the returning officer as having the largest number of votes; the returns so made by such returning officer being, as I am advised, and verily believe, invalid and contrary to law.'

"The Chief Justice then remarked that he should treat the protest as if it had not been delivered. It was a matter, he said, for the Supreme Court to investigate; should a member desire to acquire his rights he must do more than present a petition."

That was the end of this matter; Carey, having had his moment of glory, having enjoyed throwing his monkey wrench into the opening-day proceedings, chose to forget his protest.

Lieutenant-Governor Trutch, in the legislative chamber in the 'bird-cage' destroyed by fire in 1957, found the Legislative Assembly had no speaker, and so His Honor said he would return next day, and if there was a Speaker then, the Speech from the Throne would be read.

Thereupon Simeon Duck moved, and John Robson seconded, that Dr. James Trimble "do take the Speaker's chair."

The Colonist approved:

"The honor is well deserved.

"Dr. Trimble, during 14 years' residence in this city, has been, more or less, prominently identified with almost every important movement.

"The House has made a good choice.

"Dr. Trimble, who has been three years

SIR JOHN YOUNG, LORD LISGAR
. . . as Governor-General of Canada in 1871, he watched the birth of British Columbia as a province of Canada, but stayed out of the picture, permitting Sir John A. Macdonald and Joseph William Trutch to set up the first provincial government of the new province. Of Canada's 20 governors-general, only the first two, Viscount Monck and Lord Lisgar never came to British Columbia.

mayor of Victoria (1868-69-70), possesses in a high degree those particular qualities of head and heart so very necessary for the position in which he has been placed by a unanimous vote of his fellow members — that calm, even temper, and never-failing good nature, so essential in 'Mr. Speaker.' "

Being advised the House now had a Speaker, Lieutenant-Governor Trutch returned next day and read the Speech from the Throne:

"It is with a very high sense of the honor conferred on me, in having been deputed on behalf of Her Most Gracious Majesty, to open this first purely Representative Parliament convened in this far-off portion of her Dominions; that, in Her Majesty's name I tender cordial greeting to you, the chosen representatives of her loyal people of British Columbia.

"I congratulate you upon our happily becoming one of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, that grand confederation of British territories in North America, whose constitution is impressed with all the stability of a monarchy, combined with the freedom, elasticity and progressive energy of republican institutions.

"In this union the future prosperity and advancement of this great country, our adopted home (Trutch was an Englishman), are securely established.

"As a British colony, isolated on this continent, our prospects were clouded, and the idea of a railway through British territory, to connect us with our fellow countrymen in Canada, was but a dream.

"As a province of the Dominion our anticipations are bright and confident."

The Standrd was delighted with the first PROVINCIAL Speech from the Throne:

"The governor's speech — so far as it goes — is a fair, common sense production, just as the people expected from a government responsible to them for its acts.

"It is in striking contrast to the tone, as well as in the matter, of similar documents made under the new happily-defunct regimes of the Seymours and Musgraves (colonial governors), couched, as they were, in the language of conscious independence, whereas, in fact, there was no independence here.

"Public opinion is no longer to be ignored, or treated with that dignified contempt to which it had become so well accustomed in the past under colonial rule."

The first PROVINCIAL session was not long going before many of the members were making demands for more pay.

They said they could not adequately afford to be members of the Legislature. Strange it is that, as candidates some months before, none of them had mentioned pay. They all said they were anxious to serve their new province and their fellow countrymen.

Once elected they decided the pay was terrible.

This is still going on. It was ever thus, is now, and forever will be, and we, the people, can do nothing about it except accept, in some rage and fury, or throw 'em all out at the next election.

Then a new bunch will come in, and, in time-honored fashion, they will raise their pay from out of the public coffers.

This pay business for MLAs came up at the first 1872 session when the estimates showed the four cabinet ministers were receiving $3,500 a year, and that $7,800 was divided up among the rest of the House.

The back-benchers were insulted! They must have more, though there were a few who said a pay raise at that time would be nothing but a steal, a robbing of the taxpayers. They were looked upon as traitors by the majority.

The Standard reported the touchy proceedings:

"Mr. Armstrong moved, and Mr. Hughes seconded, that a member should get $8 per day for 30 days, instead of $5; and for a session over 30 days, a total of $500.

"The hon. the Premier, Mr. McCreight said he did not think it quite fair that a member should get $240 for 30 days, and if the session lasted 31 days, $500.

"Mr. Armstrong said it is done in Ottawa, and works successfully there, and so why should it not work here?

"Mr. Robertson said he feels it to be a delicate question. Were we on the eve of a general election, he said, he would support the motion, but as that would not take place for four years, it looks like voting money into our own pockets.

"Mr. Smithe said he had pledged himself to his constituents to economize, and he would not be doing so by voting to increase his own pay.

"Mr. Beavan said that hon. members talk about the delicacy of putting money into their own pockets, but what is wrong with that. Why, he said, that was what every man in the colony (he should have said province), is trying to do.

"Mr. C. Booth said he did not see any objection to the resolution. Let the House pass the resolution. 'Let us see if those members who have delicacy of feeling on this subject refuse to take the money.' This remark was greeted with roars of laughter, some flushed cheeks, and some sheepish looks."

Well, you guessed it — a majority of the members voted to increase their own pay — the first pay increase for B.C.'s MLAs.

The Colonist frowned: "It is not such a difficult matter for people to protect themselves against raids from without — but, it is the internal customers who are the most difficult to deal with, inasmuch as they are within easy reach of the object they desire to obtain, and the better prepared to take by surprise those who may be interested in defeating their schemes for plunder.

"Had the citizens of Victoria been apprised that a body of 25 individuals had conspired, on a given day, to make a raid upon the treasury office in James Bay, with a view of plundering, there would not have been the slightest difficulty in defeating the attempt, had they been fool-hardy enough to make it — and 10 chances to one every man of them would have been caught.

"Experience teaches the lesson that there is at least one method of making a raid upon the public treasury in which the police are powerless to interfere, and the public can only look on in helpless amazement.

"That is by legalizing what was illegal, and by a resolution of the Assembly transforming what would otherwise be a felony into a legitimate, if not commendable act.

"This measure makes the elected representatives in British Columbia the best paid legislative body on this continent, if not in the world.

"If the province were rolling in wealth, her resources well developed, and her districts well provided with good, substantial roads, such a dip into the provincial cash box would, perhaps, be of small moment; but the province is poor, and for every dollar she possesses she has a hundred ways to dispose of it for the benefit of the whole country, and the welfare of the people, not just for those who have been elected, and can help themselves to all they want.

"After these people had called for retrenchment in the recent election campaign, they are now in a position to prove the sincerity of their protestations — but a sudden change has come o'er the spirit of their dreams — their eyes, having rested upon the money bags in the provincial treasury, conscience at once succumbed to cupidity, and the people's money, which should be spent on works of public utility is transferred to the pockets of hon. members."

However, elected representatives, even in 1872, were quite hard-boiled and paid no attention to protests in the public prints.

Members of that history-making first PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE were:—

Victoria city—John Foster McCreight, Simeon Duck, Robert Beaven, James Trimble.

Victoria district — Amor de Cosmos, Arthur Bunster.

Esquimalt — A. Rocke Robertson, Henry Cogan.

Cowichan — William Smithe, J. P. Booth.

Nanaimo — John Robson.

Comox — John Ash.

Westminster city — Henry Holbrook.

New Westminster district — Josiah Charles Hughes, William James Armstrong.

Yale — Robert Smith, James Robinson, Charles Augustus Semlin.

Lillooet — Andrew T. Jamieson, Thomas Basil Humphreys.

Cariboo — George Anthony Walkem, Joseph Hunter, Cornelius Booth.

Kootenay — John Andrew Mara, Charles Todd.

(In that first PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE were six future premiers of British Columbia — de Cosmos, Beaven, Smithe, Robson, Semlin, Walkem.

That first session last two months — to April.

A second 1872 session was called in December. Premier McCreight was having his troubles. There was internal bickering and sparring for position among members of the Legislative Assembly. McCreight seems to have been disliked, and soon grow unhappy in the Premier's chair.

On the sidelines was de Cosmos, kicking up his usual fuss about everything, irritated because he had not been chosen first premier.

San Juan Island, so plainly visible from Greater Victoria's eastern shore, was very much in the news in 1872.

It had, for years, been occupied by British and American troops, while the Emperor of Gemany decided who owned it — Great Britain or the United States.

British Columbians dearly wanted that island, and they figured they had an 'in' — for was not the Emperor of Germany the son-in-law of Queen Victoria?

There was great shock, therefore, in British Columbia, when the Emperorer ruled in favor of the United States. Victorians were indignant. The very idea! Had the Emperor of Germany and the president of the United States engaged themselves in some kind of secret deal? It certainly looked that way! Disgraceful! A wicked shame to be so defrauded!

Retired Governor Sir James Douglas mourned in a letter to his youngest daughter Martha, then at school in England:

"We have just heard that the San Juan question has been decided against England, and we have lost the Island.

"I cannot help thinking that our case has not been fully or clearly represented to the Emperor of Gemany, or he could not have arrived at so unjust a decision, which is utterly at variance with the rights of the relative parties.

"Well, there's no help for it now. We have lost the stakes and must take it easy."

When Lieutenant-Governor Trutch opened the December, 1872, session, he said in his Speech from the Throne:

"The announcement which I have been officially directed to make, of the decision of His Majesty, the Emperor of Germany, with respect to the disputed water boundary between Her Majesty's possessions, and those of the United States on this coast, has, no doubt, been received by you, as it has been by myself, in common with all British Columbians, with feelings of profound regret.

"His Majesty, having been good enough to burden himself with the responsible task of settling this dispute, has, in the exercise of his judgment, decided the question adversely to our interests.

"I have no doubt you fully appreciate the nature and extent of the injury which the unfavorable termination of the case has inflicted upon this province, and the whole Dominion, but

Who was British Columbia's first premier? It is 100 years since he held office, but little is heard or known about him. The reasons for this are not hard to find. John Foster McCreight, for such was his name, lived in an age where flamboyant personality and startling action was necessary.

A NEGLECTED CENTENNIAL

By PATRICIA M. JOHNSON

Amor de Cosmos, who succeeded John Foster McCreight as premier, and Matthew Baillie Begbie, his senior in the law courts, were both men of outstanding, if not eccentric, character, and their actions form the basis for a hundred colorful stories.

But McCreight was a reticent man, dignified and correct. His austerity of temperament was considered to be a snobbish aloofness, and he represented intellectualism in a day of frontier action. He was in no sense a man of the times. Reserved, retiring and meticulous, he remained the lawyer, the constitutional l a w - m a k e r, then the supremely e x a c t i n g judge who sought to bring the clear light of legality into the newly-formed, turbulent province.

Another difficulty has been the apparent lack of records regarding McCreight. Political and judicial documents were available, but there was nothing personal about them. Diaries and letters were believed to be non-existent and it was thought that all personal papers had gone when McCreight left the province in 1897.

This curious lack of evidence as to the first premier's real actions and personality was not only a barrier but a challenge.

Twenty-five years of what might be called detective work, have brought this researcher enough information and contacts to build up a picture of a learned and rather lonely man, understood and appreciated by a small group of friends.

Yet he was a man whose activities touched every facet of life in the new western province, a man of flesh and blood, who sought for many things which he could never fully achieve, and who, in his own quiet way, left many stories behind him. Some day his worth and character will be recognized even if it takes another hundred years to do it.

John Foster McCreight was born in 1827 in Caledon, County Tyrone in Northern Ireland. His father was the Reverend James McCreight, a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. His mother was Elizabeth Foster, who was connected with many important people in Ireland. To her relatives he seemed to owe his early education, for in 1840 he entered the well-known English public school of Winchester "as the nephew and ward of the Honorable Baron John Leslie Foster," who was an Irish member of Parliament and Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland.

He was at Winchester from the age of 13 to 17, as a "commoner," distinct from a "scholar," so living near the college and not in the college itself and attending Winchester Cathedral each day.

He won a prize for written work in Latin, and was presented with a copy of Milton's poems — a book which he treasured greatly and gave to his god-daughter when he finally left Canada. From Winchester he went back to Ireland, and because a student at Trinity College, Dublin, where he received his bachelor of arts degree. The next step was his call to the Bar in 1852 as recorded by the Society of Kings' Inns, Dublin.

In 1853, he went to Australia, and set up legal practice in Melbourne. Several of his cousins were already there, and two of them, Vesey Fitzgerald Foster, son of his guardian, and William Foster Stawell, son of his mother's older sister, became famous in law and government. Both these men were a power in politics in the colony of Victoria, where it was reported: "We have an Irish Colonial Secretary, an Irish attorney-general, an Irish surveyor-general, and an Irish chief constable of police." Vesey Foster, later left the colony, but Stawell became one of its most respected settlers serving as chief justice of the colony for 29 years, and as first chancellor of Melbourne University. A third cousin, William John Foster, was supreme court judge in the adjacent colony of New South Wales.

Why McCreight decided to leave Australia will never be known. He may have felt insecure depending upon the political fortunes of his relatives, or he may have experienced a shortage of cases following the slump in litigation as the gold rush died down. Whatever the reason, he decided to move once more. This time he took the long trip to San Francisco, and then up the coast to Vancouver Island. He arrived in Victoria some time in 1860, and immediately started to practise law.

Apparently his arrival was most opportune. The island colony was bustling with activity attendant upon the Fraser and Cariboo gold workings, and there was a lack of trained lawyers. Besides practising in Victoria, McCreight also was granted permission to practise in the mainland colony of British Columbia, a right which he soon forfeited in a dramatic episode in 1862.

The chief justice of the mainland was Matthew Baillie Begbie, who had been sent out from England in 1858 to establish law and order in the goldfields. — and that was exactly what he did, with summary justice and a terrible sureness. The hanging judge was feared from Langley to Quesnel, and few crimes went undetected or unpunished. But in a formal lawcourt, with bewigged counsels and conscientious juries it was a different matter.

Here the judge found it extremely hard to forget his dictorial methods, and here he received his greatest opposition on the grounds of illegal and unprecedented behavior. The case under consideration was that of Cranford vs. Wright, the second stage in a series of litigations concerning the Cranford brothers who were Cariboo merchants and Gustavus B. Wright, a well-known Cariboo packer.

Originally the Cranfords had contracted with Wright to have him carry their supplies from Victoria to Lillooet, and then to Williams Creek for sale to the miners.

Owing to various delays, the goods did not arrive until too late for sale that season, so the Cranfords refused to pay the freight charges. Thereupon they were sued by Wright, and arrested in the upper country. Their sojourn in jail, before being brought to trial, was irregular in the extreme, Robert Cranford being forced to pay for the services of a constable to guard him in jail, as there was no lock upon the door.

The Cranfords then brought counter suit against Wright on the grounds that he owed them money for failing to produce their goods in time, and for suing them jointly, whereas Robert was the real owner of the mechandising business.

The case was tried in New Westminster and received much attention. The best lawyers of the colony were present, D. Babbington Ring and McCreight for the Cranfords, G. H. Cary and Walker for Wright. The action proceeded and was enlivened by many verbal battles between the judge and the lawyers.

McCreight s i m p l y could not understand Begbie's complete disregard of legal precedent and formality, and again and again he felt himself called upon to protest the methods of procedure at the trial. Begbie, who had rarely been criticized before, and who cared little for legal technicalities, let loose his monstrous temper, and expected to get his own way.

The final act came when Begbie, failing to get a unanimous decision from a jury which he had omitted to instruct adequately, refused to agree to a majority verdict and discharged the jury.

Thereupon Ring and McCreight rose in solemn dignity, requesting that the book containing the names of lawyers entitled to practise on the mainland be produced. When the registrar produced the book each lawyer said: "Dash your pen across my name," and left the court. So much did this delight the citizens of New Westminster who had been watching Begbie's arbitrary proceedings with dismay, that a special public meeting was held the same evening.

Ring and McCreight were presented w i t h a complimentary Address "in view of the firm and manly ability with which they repelled the insults heaped upon them by the court — in order to mark public disapproval of the extraordinary c o u r s e of Judge Begbie."

This insistence upon the dignity and exact letter of the law is perhaps the strongest note in McCreight's whole legal career. To him the law was something sacred, to be revered, respected and kept inviolate. Rough and ready justice had no place in his profession and from the very first he was known as "a most learned advocate." It was stated often that he had certainly the best legal knowledge of anyone in the west, and his collection of law books, heavily annotated and much quoted, was famous.

This same collection became one of McCreight's greatest hobbies. Each year he added to it, not just for show, but for long and continued use. On his retirement, he turned the collection over to Chief Justice Theodore Davie, who disposed of it for him. Today more than 100,000 volumes, bearing his name on the fly-leaf, and his comments on the margins, make up a large portion of the Law Library in the Court House at New Westminster.

When McCreight's aristocratic exacting temperament is considered, it seems strange that he should have become a leading figure in the rough and tumble politics of a newly-formed province. Presumably it was his interest in the setting up of laws under a new constitution that attracted him to the government.

Before British Columbia joined Canada, he seemed to be in favor of Confederation, as he is listed as a m e m b e r of the Confederation League in 1868. When it became apparent that British Columbia was to become a Canadian province and was to organize her own provincial government, he was called upon to act as attorney-general in the provisional executive council — being cited as "the leading barrister here."

When elections were held for the new legislature, McCreight was asked to stand, and was elected a member for Victoria, and was prevailed upon to form a ministry. Thus he became the first premier of the province, and under the guidance of energetic Lieutenant-Governor Joseph Trutch, he placed before the House a series of bills providing for the necessary services of the province.

Some 30 bills were passed during the first session, and vital legislation concerning the constitution of the legislative assembly, the revenue funds, appointment of notaries, justices of the peace and coroners, the setting up of public schools and many other fundamental matters were placed on the statute books. All this work was necessary and constructive, and there is no doubt that McCreight's legal knowledge aided its accomplishment.

The fact that it was not spectacular or controversial would mean little to him. Not so to some of the more radical spirits of the day. Amor de Cosmos — whose delightful name was self-given to replace the more common "William Smith" he really was — and John Robson, that upholder of human rights from New Westminster, both complained that there was no real political activity because the legislative assembly was still under the surveillance of the lieutenant-governor.

There were certainly no party lines, and not even a regular opposition group. Responsible government, which every true Canadian has engraven on his heart — and de Cosmos came originally from Nova Scotia — had not yet emerged, although it had been promised when Confederation took place.

Apparently this fact was of little consequence to McCreight for he had legislation to put on the statute books, and that was enough. At the beginning of the second session in 1872, the "reform group" moved that "the administration of affairs had not been satisfactory to the people in general." McCreight did little to rally his forces, and the motion was carried by one vote. He resigned as premier, and was succeeded by the boisterous de Cosmos.

Later that gentleman, "with the stove-pipe hat, wig and dyed whiskers, his enormous nose, and a big red flower in his buttonhole" left for the wider sphere of federal politics, but McCreight never sought to regain his position. He sat in the House for the remainder of his term, and in 1875 retired from politics entirely.

He gave himself solely to his legal profession and was appointed

RICHFIELD COURTHOUSE at Barkerville where McCreight presided.

Queen's Counsel. A few years later, in 1880, he was elevated to the Bench, and along with the Chief Justice H. P. P. Crease, Justices G. H. Gray and A. R. Robertson, became one of the judges of the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

His first appointment necessitated his residence in Richfield, a mile from Barkerville, now dwindling in population since the gold rush of the 50s. Today Barkerville has been revived as a show piece, and the elegant old court house still stands, a mute reminder of a once busy scene. Even in 1880 it did not appear to have much activity, and McCreight complained bitterly in a letter to a fellow judge of the scarcity of cases, and his enforced idleness. Once again he found comfort in his beloved law books — "I read law all day, and I never was in a better climate or as good for study."

In 1883 he was appointed resident judge in New Westminster, and until his retirement he lived in the mainland city, making frequent trips to Victoria for the fall court sittings. The main story told of him by oldtimers of New Westminster concerns his horse, the beautiful chestnut, "Tally." His diary recalls many incidents of his life including each time she was shod. During his absence on business or holiday journeys, she was lodged at the penitentiary in care of the warden, and at one time it was claimed that the federal government was having to provide for her keep.

A small scandal developed over this charge, and some indignant citizens tried to make trouble for the warden. McCreight was able to prove that he had provided a sum of money to pay for her feed, and the matter was allowed to drop. Apparently McCreight and the horse were a familiar sight in the neighborhood, and his attachment to the animal was very real. The friendship ended suddenly for a bill bearing the name of a Vancouver Veterinary Surgeon, and dated 1896, records a charge of $10 for "April 6 visit afternoon and all night. April 7, post-mortem"

As McCreight grew older many changes took place. The most startling one in his life was his apparently sudden conversion to the Roman Catholic Church. He had been a staunch member of Christ Church Cathedral, the Anglican church in Victoria, since his arrival on Vancouver Island, and had held the office of Church Warden.

In 1883 he was baptized into the Roman faith and became a most diligent and orthodox member of his new church. This faith absorbed him more and more as the years went by.

On his retirement in 1897 he left British Columbia and went on a pilgrimage to Lourdes — the scene of the famous shrine where he hoped to receive some relief from his deafness.

He then went to Rome, where he lived for a time.

By 1909, he was established in the English town of Hastings, living near a hostel for aged priests conducted by the Pious Society of Missions. He was most generous to the Catholic parish church, and paid for its heating in winter.

On his death he left many legacies, sums of money to his surviving sister, to the Mrs. Fisher and her daughters with whom he had lodged, and to Catholic charities, including one hundred pounds "to be applied for the benefit of the Roman Catholic Church of New Westminster in British Columbia."

But that was not his only legacy to British Columbia. He left to her the basic laws of the province, and the traditions and knowledge of legal precedent. He left a record as an upright judge and of a man, "learned in the law." In diaries and letters, recently come to light, he left a record of life in the new province. British Columbia cannot afford to forget John Foster McCreight.

they were unable to lift their arms for days, much less use their guns.

For 38 years, John Tod served the Hudson's Bay Company and, in 1851, retired to Victoria, which he found "a warming and congenial place." He bought property along what is now the Oak Bay waterfront for £109 and turned it into a large estate, with a tree-lined roadway running from his house to the water.

He was certainly not a lonely man. He married seven times and had several children. As he grew older, he was in the habit of visiting a local hotel and recounting his adventures of the trading days. He disliked intensely being interrupted whilst talking, and was quite sharp with those who broke the rule.

In spite of being a reasonably temperate man, Tod "took kindly" to gin and soda. A friend of the time described Tod in the following manner: "Above a broad, straight Scottish nose and high cheekbones were glittering, grey eyes, which flashed perpetual fun and intelligence. And the mouth! Had the mouth been small, the mighty brain above it would have burst. As it was, the stream of communication, once set flowing, every limb and fibre of the body talked. The blazing eyes, electrified hair and well-poised tongue all dancing attendance."

In 1882 John Todd died at the age of 92, his long life very much linked with early B.C. history. On his retirement 30 years earlier, he became a member of the legislative council of the colony of Vancouver Island, and later, on Confederation, joined the B.C. legislature.

Whatever else trader Tod did, he certainly left a strange legacy in his Heron Street home.

Although it was never determined if the skeleton discovered in the garden was that of a white or Indian, it was known, however, that the area had once been the scene of a great battle of native tribesmen.

In any event, the late Col. Evans reported in May, 1952, that, with the removal of the bones, all ghostly manifestations ceased.

But perhaps one Christmas Day, Fred Massie and his wife may discover that something has rearranged their decorations. Flying headgear may orbit the hallway. And the old rocking chair might start up once more.

With the intuition of the feline, their Siamese cat may find its fur standing on end, and go scurrying away to a corner refuge.

But then, people don't believe in ghosts nowadays. Or do they?

Women's Lib Won't Like This Book

Reviewed by BARBARA McLINTOCK

The thesis of The Price of Women is that women are naturally and biologically less aggressive than men, and are therefore naturally subordinate to them and can never be equal, although they can and should gain independence by entering the world of work and taking dual responsibility with men.

THE PRICE OF WOMEN, by David Allen. Jarrow Press. 206 pages. $6.95.

With such a theme, David Allen's book can scarcely help becoming one of the most controversial books of the year — comparable to Desmond Morris' The Naked Apes, or Ashley Montagu's The Natural Superiority of Women.

The Price of Women will not be liked by most women, particularly not by those in the Women's Liberation Movement, who, Allen says, are barking up entirely the wrong tree.

Although Allen emphasizes that women's natural subordination to men does not mean natural inferiority, it is a semantic difference few women will be liable to appreciate.

Neither, surprisingly, will the book be greeted enthusiastically by many men. For one thing, Allen places a large amount of the blame for today's imbalance between the sexes on the males for succumbing too easily the "feminine values" inculcated into them by the female-dominated home and school.

For another, he strenuously urges that women must take independence from men and assume equal responsibility to them in areas always considered men's prerogatives — business, government, the professions.

Allen has divided his book into two main sections — the first entitled The Awful Truth about Feminine Equality; the second The Promising Possibilities of Indpendence.

The strength of the book lies in the first part. It consists of a review of scientific literature from such fields as ethology, endocrinology and genetics designed to show that woman is naturally less aggressive than man, and hence will be naturally subordinate to him. Using studies on lower forms of mammals and cross-cultural human studies as illustration, he makes his point extremely lucidly.

Although his data-gathering may have been selective — one cannot tell how many studies he may have rejected because they did not support his viewpoint — on the basis of the evidence presented, his conclusions on the lesser aggressiveness of women are impossible to deny.

In the second part of the book, Allen finds himself on much shakier ground as he moves from the objective world of scientific fact to the shadier and more subjective one of values. He tends to give hypothetical explanations of cultural phenomena with no real evidence to back them up.

The main point he tries to make is that women's natural subordination is not the real problem between the sexes; the real problem is the complete dependence of women on men in today's world with women taking no equal responsibility in a marriage.

Women's task which was historically comparable to men's — housework and family care — has been reduced so much by technology that it no longer gives her independence from men. A hundred years ago men and women were helpmates; now women are parasites.

The great responsibility is placed on men, particularly in terms of financial support for their families. This, Allen says, leads to resentment and sexual repression in men and to what he terms an imbalance in the "emotional economy" of our society.

It also leads, he says, to immaturity in women because they do not have to face what he calls "the real world" — the world of work outside the home.

Allen takes a gloomy view of the world of work, finding it to be composed exclusively of tension, competition, insecurity, anxiety and boredom. It is because of this, he says, that women wish to avoid it, but until they accept this "real world," they will continue to be dependent on men.

In his conclusion, Allen suggests solutions to the problems he has described.

He does not believe the present feminist demands should be granted by men because "to advise men to treat women as equals now, while they are essentially in a parasitical relationship, is to advise men to acquiese to and legitimate conditions which are crippling to both sexes."

Instead, he says, women must take over some of the responsibility from men, which means in practice that women will have to go to work, "not some women, some of the time, but all women all of the time." Men should be legally forced to support women only when the women are pregnant or are raising pre-school children.

Allen does say, however, that he supports feminist demands for equal pay for equal work and for daycare centres for working mothers, because these changes would encourage more women to work.

If women do become independent, he says, this will not make them truly equal, but it will make them "approximately equal."

The great weakness in The Price of Women appears to be tremendous over-generalization. Never once does Allen mention an individual man or woman, or even a hypothetical case history. He speaks as if each statement applied to every North American woman today and this insistence on generalization weakens his arguments.

He also appears to have ignored some of the social conditions which prevent women from taking independence and responsibiltity. These include such problems as relegation of women to lower-paid, lower responsibility jobs, lack of daycare centres for women with children, and the strong socialization process which indoctrinates many girls to consider the home to be their only place in the world.

The fact that Allen never mentions any individuals in the book also prevents it from having any strong emotional impact. Although it is intellectually challenging, Allen's method of speaking about all women as he might about all mammals or all chemical elements leaves the book devoid of humanity.

The Price of Women is basically an intellectual book, a 200-page academic essay on the subject of inequality between the sexes. It is not an easy book to read, and too often Allen lapses into scientific and sociological jargon.

But it is an exciting book, highly controversial, and intellectually challenging to those seriously interested in Women's Liberation and the problem of relationships between men and women.

Although it may be too academic for those with only a passing interest in the subject, it is highly recommended for those who want to study seriously a perhaps somewhat unusual view of the Battle of the Sexes.

REVIEW IN BRIEF

BRIMSTONE CLUB, by F. Van Wyck Mason; Little, Brown; 368 pages; $8.95.

With the merger or demise of more and more publishing houses and the growing disinclination of publishers and literary agents to take chances with unknown writers it is becoming increasingly difficult for new talents, particulary writers of fiction, to break into print.

The situation is not helped by the general reading public who conservately stick to "name" authors, often long after they have written themselves out.

Such a writer is F. van Wyck Mason who has 18 historical novels to his credit, including his latest, Brimstone Club. If you are an avid reader of historical novels and don't pay too much attention to content before buying, let me caution you that Brimstone Club is not the usual tale of intrigue, romance and derring-do.

It is an old writer's pathetic attempt to increase his royalties by joining the current pornographic trend.

The setting is 18th century England and the main theme is the goings-on of a group "of the richest and most powerful men in England, sworn to lives of bizarre sexuality and Rabelaisian debauchery."

My objections to this book are twofold. First, it is badly written, with 18th century and modern idoms ludicrously mixed, and a futile attempt to weave a thin plot (intrigue to encourage American revolutionaries) to conceal the intent to titilate the reader witr filth and sadism.

My second objection is that it is unbelievably bad pornography, a subject which to be successful demands a delicate touch. This book leaves the distasteful impression of a slobbering old man who has mistaken degradation for eroticism.

COPPERHEAD, by James Henderson (Random House; 272 pages; $6.95) is an unusual first novel about a biological attack on North America. Fifteen men and women are sent into Europe and North America as the secret army in an undeclared war.

Each is a living biological weapon — a carrier of a lethal, volatile strain of pneumonic plague. The virus, within a week of its activation, can complete a massive and irreversible chain of infection. The aggressor nation is unknown.

By accident, the danger is first discovered in Montreal. Working uneasily together, Canadian, British and U.S. intelligence agents track down the plague carriers in a hectic five-day pursuit.

The author, an Ontario educator (he has also taught in B.C. schools) has spiced his fast-moving narrative with sex, torture and murder. A horror movie in print.

Indian Problems Treated Realistically

Reviewed by GEORGE INGLIS

MEMOIRS OF CHIEF RED FOX,; Ryerson Press-McGraw Hill; 208 pages; $8.25.

The Memoirs of Chief Red Fox* is an entrancingly realistic account of the early tragic and dismal treatment handed out by the all-conquering North American newcomer—epitomized by the U.S. Cavalry—to the beaten remnants of the indomitable and courageous native Indian tribes.

The reader will turn the pages slowly as he absorbs the poetry of words with which Chief Red Fox describes the country of his own people, their beliefs, their feelings and attitudes towards their own native lands and to the white intruders who ultimately dominated them and drove them into reservations.

One can certainly say that Chief Red Fox knew where of he spoke. 101 years old, he was born on June 11, 1870, in the Big Horn Mountains, the home of the Sioux.

As a child, he lived through the period leading to, and beyond, the Battle of the Bighorn or Custer's Last Stand as it was popularly named — by the whites, of course.

Going to a white school, Red Fox attained the education which enabled him to place his own feelings so clearly and beautifully in writing the story of his life. An adventurous life it was, as, in turn, he became a cabin boy on a sailing ship, an interpreter for the U.S. Army, then, later, a trick-riding star with Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show. With it, he toured Europe and talked with king and princes, presidents and world-renowned entertainment stars.

"Through it all, Red Fox retained his natural feelings for the less fortunate members of his Indian race who faced decimation and slow death on crowded, unproductive reservations. These feelings never left him, as is shown by his own words," Mentally and physically, I have found enjoyment but spiritually, I have been a mourner at the bedside of a dying race."

The Memoirs of Chief Red Fox is a good book for an interested reader to gain a proper and more truthful perspective of the earlier and present Indian problems than one usually finds in a lesser book.

In this June, a month before British Columbia's entry into the Canadian Confederation, in spite of ugly rumors of war over fishing rights, the conflict of claims over San Juan Island, and the indemnity claimed by the United States from Britain as a result of help allegedly given the Confederate States in the Civil War, two railway companies on opposite sides of the border were optimistic enough to enter into an historic agreement.

YEAR OF UNION

Fishing Protection Sought

The Great Western and the Michigan Central "have conjointly undertaken the construction of a railway tunnel under the Detroit River, opposite the city of that ilk." That was the phrasing of the announcement.

The Daily British Colonist simply refused to believe telegraphic despatches that the Emperor of Germany had decided in favor of the United States in the San Juan affair. Commenting, the newspaper repeated an earlier statement, adding: "We took occasion at that time to point out the absurdity of the announcement. A reference to the provisions of the Treaty of Washington . . . would lead to the conclusion that at very least the question cannot be finally decided in less than a year, and it is more likely to occupy three years than one."

But although the report of the decision may have been premature, it was not long before it was confirmed. The German emperor — as might have been expected from a man already sensing the ultimate collision of the two great imperial powers — found in favor of the Americas.

But what disturbed The Colonist's editor, David W. Higgins, even more than the San Juan issue, was the section of the Washington Treaty which appeared to give American fishermen the right to harvest Canadian waters without any form of reciprocity.

And The Colonist was goaded into angry reply when its rival, The Standard," edited by Higgins' personal enemy and former Colonist proprietor, Amor de Cosmos, defended this surrender.

A leading article in the Communist (sic) organ of the city betrays an amount of unfamiliarity with the question of the Canadian fisheries which is truly lamentable in one presuming to enlighten the public.

American fishermen, it went on, would be allowed to fish on the coasts of the Dominion without a licence in future. The treaty proposed a lump sum should be paid for full fishing privileges for a 10-year period. The Standard felt this was a just principle, for if there were more fish than the Canadians could take and cure why not let others share them?

De Cosmos argued the licencing system was never designed for revenue, and that in any event it had long been abrogated.

It had been necessary, to protect the fisheries against intrusion, to maintain a marine police force on constant guard, augmented by British cuisers.

The Colonist flatly contradicted the claim there was an overabundance of fish and argued that since the ending of the licencing and the exclusion of American fishboats "the general condition and increasing productiveness of these fisheries are most satisfactory."

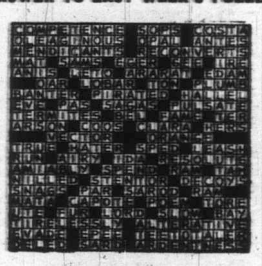
The Colonist feared, even then, that foreign fishermen "who have no special motive for improving these fisheries," might ruin the resource.

". . . And considering that Canadians very properly regard their inshore fisheries as being equally sacred with the soil of their country, such latitudinarjan prattle as our contemporary indulges in about permitting foreigners to utilize these fisheries, is too transparent to deserve notice."

The welfare of thousands of fishermen and their families depended on the protection of the resource which brought "seventeen millions of dollars" to the industry.

"Upon what principles of justice or policy is Canada expected to throw open to the world this priceless inheritance?" The Colonist asked rhetorically. And deemed the question too ridiculous to merit any answer.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



CHIEF PETTY OFFICER STEWART REMEMBERS

Niobe Held Capture Record

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

Henry Stewart—called Jock for most of his long life by reason of being a Scot—dwells these days in the Veterans' Hospital.

They are quiet days. He exercises for half an hour every morning and again for the same length of time in the evening. In good weather he trundles his wheelchair (he prefers to push it rather than sit in it) around the grounds admiring the flowers, which he loves, and he voyages to the bus-stop from time to time, keeping tab on the city's transportation. Not quite the voyage he once made, certainly, but after all . . .

He is 87. Slender, spare, not tall, with the quick blue, long-distance gaze of the sailor, he has been through two wars safely, and wouldn't be where he is now except for the Halifax explosion.

He was smack in the middle of that, and knows he is lucky to be alive. He was on the docks. The blast picked him up and dropped him several yards away, and he never felt a thing. Only his back, he found, has troubled him from time to time ever since, worsening, as these things do, with the years.

The navy has been his life. Glasgow-born, he was one of a family of eight, and remembers his childhood with warmth.

"We had a good life," he says, "but our parents were strict. In the house by sunset every day — or else!"

He himself was "a tough little feller, wanting to see the world," so he joined the British Royal Marines at the advanced age of 15. "And that," he remarked, "had been a tough life, all right!"

It suited him fine. He trained in gunnery at Plymouth and his first ship was HMS Ariadne, a first-class cruiser with a complement of 600. They cruised the West Indies, and Jock was very proud of his gun crew, which won the 1904 championship of the British Navy for its marksmanship. He still has a picture, he says, of that long ago event, when, moving at a good speed and firing at a moving target, they scored 19 out of 21 hits.

He was back in England and was transferred to the cruiser Niobe when the 1914 war began. This time the vessel's job was nabbing German supply ships out of New York, while the U.S. was still neutral, and very busy it kept the crew.

"The Germans were armed merchantmen," he explained, "and we picked them up just about every day. Their crews were sent to Halifax as prisoners, and our own men took the ships to the same port. And," he added happily, "the Niobe held the record for the greatest number of captures!"

His share of the prize money earned during this phase of the argument was the round sum of $750.

He recalls that they slept by their guns during those embattled months, and were frequently chased by submarines. "We saw lots of those!" But they were lucky and remained unharmed.

It's an odd happenstance that with all his long years afloat surrounded by danger, his only real disaster should have occurred when he was on shore. His memory of this seems unimpaired by time.

He stood watching two ships approach, in the harbor. One, as the world knows, carried TNT. They collided . . . and the explosive blew.

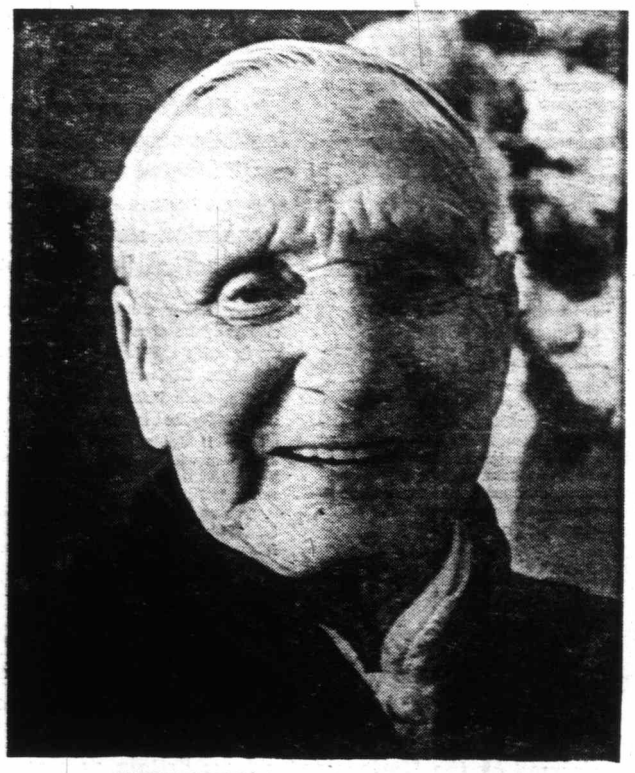
When Jock Stewart picked himself up, dazed but apparently unhurt, Halifax was no longer the same. He remembers that there had been several small boats in the vicinity. They were gone. Vanished. And so were their crews.

"Nothing was ever found of them," he said, and went on to describe the dreadful aftermath of the detonation.

"All day and all night we carried bedding, provisions, medical supplies, everything that was available in the city until outside relief arrived, to makeshift hospitals. Every hall, school and church was filled with the injured."

They covered the dead. And Jock Stewart will never forget the scores of heart-broken relatives who came from far and near to seek and identify the victims.

Terrible pictures remain in his memory like scars. There was a tiny nude baby, he said, blown from somewhere, lying in the street. It could only have been a few weeks old, he thought, because he remembers that the sad little body was carried away in a condensed milk carton.



HARRY STEWART . . . in Halifax explosion.

The master-at-arms of his own ship, who had a house ashore, was trying, in a frenzy of grief and fear, to find his wife, because the house was gone. What he found was a bathtub upside down in a nearby street . . . and when he turned it over he found his wife.

Jock Stewart was luckier than that. He too, married by this time, had a house in town. Every window and door in the building had been blown out, but his wife was safe.

Over the years his life in the navy permitted him to enjoy other interests outside his regular duties. He had always been a good boxer, in fact his father had outfitted their home with a gymnasium for the children, and a friend had taught him to box. In addition, he had played football for his school at the age of 12. So, during his naval career, he found himself training other boxers and football teams.

Like many sailors, he was, as has been noted, fond of growing things. He kept little potted plants in his own small cabins, and he still likes recall that the various officers in the ships in which he served would often come to him to borrow these for whatever festive doings required table decorations!

In 1938, at the age of 54, he decided that it would be a good thing to retire. He and his wife were vacationing in Scotland. But another war was coming ever closer, and presently the service called him back. He was made chief inspector of stores for all of western Scotland, a job which kept him travelling during the entire balance of the war.

Eventually he and his wife and daughter came out to the west coast. He is a widower now, his wife having died, some six years ago, while the daughter lives in Los Angeles. He looks back on the 72 years since he first joined the navy, with a sort of contented nostalgia, remembers affectionately the ships in which he served, and many of Victoria's ranking officers, now retired like himself.

Among these last, one of his special favorites is Esquimalt's former reeve, Commander Wurtele.

"He was a fine officer," says Jock admiringly. "A first-class footballer, too! I can still hear his men cheering him on during a game and yelling, 'Come on, Alfie! Come on!' "

It's a comforting thing when the accumulated years have brought with them warm, gay memories, perhaps, even help to offset wheelchairs and pain-ridden backs!

The Days After Confederation

your sense of its importance will, I believe, be very much mitigated by the consideration that the final adjustment of the dispute will materially contribute to the permanent preservation of friendly and harmonious feelings between our neighbors and ourselves.

"In this view of the matter, the importance of the loss is much diminished."

Next day Premier McCreight brought in a quite innocuous resolution about education.

His political enemies seized this as an opportunity to vote him out of office.

He handed over the reins to de Cosmos, who was sworn in as British Columbia's second premier the day before Christmas Eve of 1872.

British Columbia was then, you might say, for better or for worse, well and truly launched as the the Pacific province of the Dominion of Canada.

Hon. John R. Nicholson is our 21st lieutenant-governor and Hon. W. A. C. Bennett our 24th premier.

Italian Referendum Set

Divorce Foes Act

ROME (UPI) — Promoters of a referendum to repeal Italy's six-month old civil divorce law deposited 1,370,134 signatures with a Rome court Saturday calling for the measure.

The signatures were authenticated by public notaries as required by law.

A referendum can be held in Italy upon production of half a million notarized signatures. No referendum has been held since one in 1946 which abolished the monarchy.

Presentation of the signatures and their approval by the court will leave the way open for the referendum to be held around next April.

Left wing newspapers have reported the government already has budgeted money to hold the referendum.

Pro-divorce groups accused the Vatican of tacitly supporting the referendum and thereby interefering in Italy's internal affairs. The Vatican denied this, but the news that the signatures had been deposited was first reported today in the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

Four bishops in central Italy have been sued by divorce supporters because of backing they gave to the repeal movement.

Parliament approved divorce Dec. 3 while Pope Paul VI was in Australia, despite months of strenuous Vatican and Papal opposition.

Last week, the Vatican announced it was making it quicker to obtain a declaration of marriage annulment in church courts.

WEIGHT WATCHERS
ACTUALLY SAVE MONEY WHILE YOU LOSE WEIGHT IF YOU ACT NOW YOU CAN!
Since 1963, while the price of everything else has gone up and up, Weight Watchers has managed to keep the cost of losing weight down. We had a simple idea: we wanted everyone who wanted to lose weight and keep it off to be able to come to Weight Watchers. So we charged a weekly fee of $2.00.
We've held the line as long as we can.
Beginning July 4, 1971, the weekly fee for Weight Watchers classes will be one dollar more. Our enrollment fee will remain $7. (Includes registration and first class fee.)
But if you join us before July 4, you'll be eligible for our 1971 rates for as long as you wish to stay on the program. Even with this modest cost increase, we think you'll agree that Weight Watchers is the outstanding value in weight control.
Through the years, Weight Watchers has grown. Over 2 million men, women and teenagers have been through the Weight Watchers program. We've added many new features designed to make Weight Watchers a place for all your weight control needs—a true weight control organization. There are many classes for men, women and teenagers—conveniently located throughout this area.
Weight Watchers has always been, and always will be a place of dignity and understanding. Every lecturer has actually been on the program and knows what it means to lose weight.
We are adding the Weight Watchers' Maintenance Plan (effective Sept. 6, 1971)—to help people to stay at their goal weight. There is no other organization quite like Weight Watchers. We sincerely believe there isn't a better value anywhere in weight control.
Join us today. You'll be glad you did.

FULFORD HARBOR — The Harbor House Hotel built as a home by the well known Crofton family in 1902 has been sold and will be torn down in three phases to make way for a new hotel.

Desmond Crofton, a co owner of the hotel, said in a telephone interview from his home on Lower Ganges Road Salt Spring Island, that he and his partner J. M. Gurd sold the hotel to New Westminster contractor Walter Herzog June 15.

Crofton is a son of Fred Crofton who immigrated to Canada from Dublin, Ireland in 1899, married Nona Wilson in 1902 and had the hotel built as a home the same year. He said architects will visit the site next week to determine plans for the new building.

Nanaimo M For Ladys

NANAIMO — Two men, on trial earlier in the week for theft by violence of over $50, appeared in Nanaimo County Court Friday afternoon to plead guilty to a lesser charge of theft over $50.

The earlier trial of Warren Richard MacDonald and Leslie Evan Hinksman, both 20, and of Nanaimo, ended late Wednesday night when the jury could not come to a decision.

On the lesser charge, MacDonald was jailed for 18 months and Hinksman was sentenced to nine months definite and 18 months indeterminate by Judge H. C. MacKay.

They were charged following an incident in Ladysmith Jan. 22 when Stanley Wayne Cross was robbed of about $200.

Robert Gover pleaded earlier guilty to theft with violence in connection with the offence and was given a four-year jail term.

MacKay told MacDonald his previous criminal record was a sorry one and that he would have to change his ways or look forward to spending the major portion of his adult life in jail.

County court sessions will resume Monday when the case of Howard Frederick Jackson, charged with theft by conversion, is expected to go to the jury.

Fired Guard Fails in Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Harmac man who was fired as a result of an arbitration board ruling was unable Friday to upset the decision before the B.C. Court of Appeal.

The court ruled unanimously that Kaston Warde, a senior guard at MacMillan Bloedel's pulp mill at Harmac until his dismissal, has no status in law to attack the arbitration board ruling.

The board had ordered his dismissal because of his refusal to join the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, which is the union certified to bargain for production workers at the mill.

Historical Harbor House Hotel recently sold

Island's Hotel Landmark To Topple for Progress

FULFORD HARBOR — The Harbor House Hotel, built as a home by the well-known Crofton family in 1902, has been sold and will be torn down in three phases to make way for a new hotel.

Desmond Crofton, a co-owner of the hotel, said in a telephone interview from his home on Lower Ganges Road, Salt Spring Island, that he and his partner J. M. Gurd sold the hotel to New Westminster contractor Walter Herzog June 15.

Crofton is a son of Fred Crofton who immigrated to Canada from Dublin, Ireland in 1899, married Nona Wilson in 1902 and had the hotel built as a home the same year. He said architects will visit the site next week to determine plans for the new building.

"The building is getting on in years so (Herzog) will be building a new one," Crofton said.

"He will replace the building in three phases.

"The first phase will be to build a new pub and cocktail lounge. He hasn't decided on the other phases yet but the building will be torn down and replaced with a new building.

The new building, Crofton said, is still in the planning stages but he said it will be two storeys high with no elevators.

Crofton said his parents raised a family of three sons and four daughters in the large house and started the hotel in 1917.

"It was sort of a summer guest house. My mother started it while my father was still overseas (during the First World War).

"We were just kids at that time but we pitched in and helped.

"Since then, we've met many interesting people who have come back year after year. A few have come from New York, and Toronto but most have come from Vancouver, Calgary and California.

"We've had a lot of good parties and very happy times. We had the most happy times when we had tennis tournaments at our (three) tennis courts.

However, as we got older over the last few years, we lost interest in tennis," Crofton said.

He said two of the tennis courts remain and the third was torn down to make way for a swimming pool.

The Harbor House Hotel was owned by the Crofton family until 1964 when Desmond Crofton and Gurd bought the property.

Crofton said Gurd owned most of the hotel since 1964.

'Utter Nonsense' Seminar Told

Deputy Minister Hits Ocean Park Plans

B.C.'s Deputy Minister of Recreation and Conservation Lloyd Brooks said Saturday a federally proposed marine park in the Strait of Georgia is "utter nonsense."

Responding to questions from the audience at the conclusion of a day-long seminar sponsored by the Capital Region branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada; Brooks said he did not favor the park idea.

"We're talking about over 6,000 square miles in the heart of our (the province's) commercial activity," Brooks said, stressing that "economic reality" is his first concern.

Brooks said he did not like the word "park," and would prefer to approach the entire subject under the label "water management area," which would include many uses and activities throughout the strait.

The underwater marine park was proposed by federal Minister of Fisheries Jack Davis last September and has been praised by oceanographers, ecologists and the public. A clear idea of just what a "marine park" would mean, however, has not really emerged pending current federal studies of the proposal.

In his prepared remarks Saturday, Brooks said the B.C. government is "interested," but so far has not been invited to participate in either policy or scientific studies of the park proposal being conducted by the federal government.

He said jurisdiction over intertidal water is a provincial one and no park can be created without the co-operation of both governments. "This implies a closely integrated approach . . . if we are to come up with a water management plan essential for such a park," Brooks said.

The seminar, held at the University of Victoria, attracted about 40 people. Panelists included Brooks, Howard Paish, technical consultant for the proposed park; Robert McHaffie, marine engineer; Dr. R. Slavin of Washington state and Ludlow Kramer, secretary of state for Washington state.

The Washington representatives discussed environmental measures being taken there and the need for increased co-operation and co-ordination between communities on the Pacific rim.

Top Musicians To Attend Summer School

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Plans are now being finalized in Shawnigan Lake for the arrival of the "best assembly of international classical musicians ever assembled in Canada."

Coming will be pianist Eduardo Del Puevo of the Royal Conservatory of Brussels; violinist Ruggiero Ricci, who has performed with the New and London Symphony Orchestras; cellist Janos Starker, artist in residence of the University of Indiana; classical guitarist Sebastian Maroto, guitar soloist in residence of the Radio Television Francaise in Paris; composer Malcolm Arnold of Great Britain; and the Foerstrovo Trio of Czechoslovakia.

They will teach at an International Summer School of the Arts to be held Aug. 1-22 at the Shawnigan Lake school campus. The school is being sponsored by the provincial government through the B.C. centennial cultural fund.

Director Speaks

Executive director for the school, J. J. Johannesen arrived from Vancouver Saturday and discussed the school during an interview.

"Music is like our heart beat, it is a part of us. Children want it, and the type of music they are exposed to early in life will influence the type of music they will listen to the rest of their life."

He emphasized that there is no "bad type" of music, but that there is both good and bad music in every idiom. "The important thing for a child is exposure — once he has heard all types of music he will be able to select for himself."

It is this role that Johannesen sees the summer school as fulfilling, especially for the child who has demonstrated his musical proficiency. "A child exposed to good music will take it for his own."

Gap Criticized

He criticized the gap which often occurs between the musician and his audience, and said that this was another barrier to the appreciation of classical music which the school will eliminate.

"The purpose of an artist is not only to perform, it is also to communicate with his audience, thus creating a true and real rapport. If this rapport is not accomplished, then he is not a true artist."

In line with this goal for communication, an international music festival will be held in conjunction with the school. "This will give the public an opportunity to hear the best assembly of international classical musicians ever assembled in Canada," he said.

A secondary goal for the school will be a bid to establish B.C. as a centre for music. "It is time that the West stopped being on a junior level in music, which is strange when you consider that this is the most beautiful part of Canada."

Although this summer's school for the arts will be limited to young musicians, sire to have the school extend into the visual arts "to be a into the visual arts "to be a place where arts can intermingle."

Nanaimo School-College Move

Vocation To Join Malaspina

NANAIMO — Malaspina College council has given "approval in principle" to a draft agreement to have the college take over the administration and operation of Nanaimo vocational school, Dr. W. R. MacMillan, chairman of the council, has announced.

"The Council is still studying the agreement and some details remain to be worked out," MacMillan said. "We are agreed that the plan to meld the two institutions has many benefits for both but there is one over-riding consideration.

"The Council is unanimous in stating that there shall be no cost to the taxpayer as a result of this merger. If, for that or any other reason and after having adopted a final agreement, the council wishes at any time in the next three years to opt out of the agreement, it can do so on three months written notice. This feature is our right and is written into the agreement," he said.

The agreement would go into effect next Sept. 1 and would be for a three-year trial period. Provision is made so that the agreement can be renewed, amended or terminated by either party on three months notice.

The official name of the melded institution is to be Malaspina College Technical and Vocational Institute. The change in name was provided for in an amendment to the Public Schools Act, Bill 47, passed at the last Legislative session.

However, MacMillan said he felt it will still be referred to as Malaspina College.

At the end of the three-year trial, or any earlier date mutually agreed on, the province is to relinquish administration of the vocational school to the council and title to all assets of the school will then be vested in the participating boards of school trustees of the college.

He said that already the two schools were conferring on merging of administration. "We can see certain savings in joint use of facilities and present equipment, in purchasing and other areas. But the principal benefit will be in providing to all the communities served by the college, a wider and more comprehensive range of technical, technological and academic programs."

Education Minister Donald Brothers announced in April that five provincial vocational schools would be merged with nearby community colleges.

The five schools are at Nanaimo, Kamloops, Prince George, Kelowna and Victoria.

The first merger is expected to take place in Prince George within a week between New Caledonia college and the vocational school in that city.

Nanaimo Pair Jailed For Ladysmith Theft

County court sessions will resume Monday when the case of Howard Frederick Jackson, charged with theft by conversion, is expected to go to the jury.

Jackson is charged in connection with theft of $5,000 from Mrs. Alice Hanshaw, 75, of Ladysmith.

Ladysmith Resident's Natural Interest

Unique Centennial Medal Marks Province's Past

By DOUG SCOTT

LADYSMITH — A plea last year for support for the B.C. Centennial celebrations has been answered by Jerry Parker of Ladysmith with his own creation.

Jerry has operated a mail order house in Ladysmith since 1966, and with his wife Betty, designs and markets medallions, coins, stamps, and silver stamp reproductions for collectors around the world.

It is natural then, that Jerry has produced a centennial medallion.

He runs the only company in Canada that designs its own medals without having its own manufacturing plant.

Parker has a regular clientele of more than 3,000 collectors in Europe, India, Japan, Australia, and all parts of North America. He mails his products to U.S. Senators and Congressmen, Canadian Members of Parliament, millworkers, photographers, journalists, housewives, and even his competitors. He also sends his products to the Canadian National Gallery, the Smithsonian Institute, the Canadian Archives, and the Library of Congress.

Jerry Parker's medals are different. They are not presented merely as medals in little plastic pouches but as collector's items to be displayed with pride. His medals can be obtained in the plastic pouch but his main business is selling attractive vinyl wallets containing a medal and a short history of the event for which the medal was made plus other items commemorating the event.

The Parker B.C. Centennial medallion is attractively produced.

It is about one and a half inches high and has the coat of arms of the province on one side and the heads of a miner, a logger, and a fisherman on the other, along with the words — a Century of Progress 1871-1971. The heads represent the men who work in the major industries of B.C. and the support they have given in the last century.

Because production is complicated, it can tie up capital for periods up to six months. If the medal does not sell it is impossible to regain the capital. The production of commemorative medals is a gamble and a race with time and competitors.

Much of the expense is involved in the medal's finish. The centennial medal was minted from metal blanks of aluminum, brass, and .999 silver. Some of the brass medals were given a silver plate and those in .999 silver were given an oxide finish.

The professional look of the B.C. medal stems from past experience. Parker has produced medals commemorating the anniversary of Sir Isaac Brock, the landing of the Mayflower at Plymouth Rock, the first trans-Atlantic flight by Canadians Alcock and Brown, Apollo XI, Apollo XII, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Manitoba's centennial, Northwest Territories centennial, United nations, 300 years of coinage in Canada, and he is now planning a medal for Prince Edward Island's centennial in 1973.

In 1966, Jerry Parker Ltd. was given permission by the Canadian post office to make reproductions of Canadian stamps in silver. He started the new project in 1968, issuing an Expo 67 silver stamp. He minted 3,000 and sold out in six weeks. The Expo stamp is now sought after by collectors and is worth many times its original price.

Following this success, Parker launched a series of H ship stamps, starting with the Royal William and ending with the Mackenzie Steamer.

The first stamp issue this year is a commemorative stamp honoring Sir Alexander Donald Smith — offered in both bronze and silver.

Parker puts in a 12-hour day six days a week and makes the occasional business trip to trade fairs in California. He recently completed a tour of B.C. in connection with his centennial medallions.

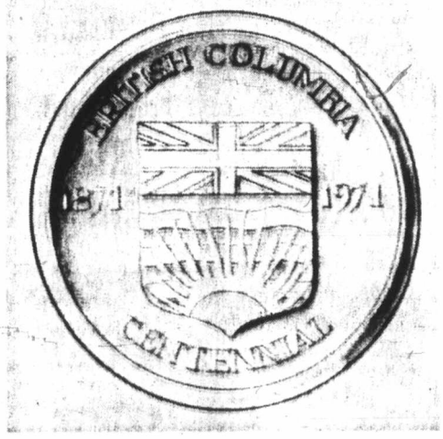
In between this hectic timetable he has managed to come up with another first.

Parker has just been given permission by the United States treasury to produce numistamps — stamps based on the model of silver stamp reproductions. His first limited issue will be a Lincoln head cent. Later most type coins will be minted in the hope that collectors, unable to afford the real thing, will settle for a Parker copy.

The Lincoln head will be available July 25.

With two firsts under his belt, Parker doesn't know what he will turn to next. His customers expect him to create and be original — and to be first.

No doubt he will try to oblige.



PROVINCIAL COAT of arms graces one side of centennial medallion (TOP) struck by Jerry Parker of Ladysmith. Three heads (BOTTOM) of miner, fisherman, and logger mark major industries in province and contribution workers have made in B.C.'s past.

Liberals Choose Lawyer

DUNCAN — Lawyer Mike Coleman of Duncan has been elected president of the Federal Liberal Association for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

At a Liberal meeting held in Nanaimo Friday night Coleman was named to head a broadly-based executive, including vice-presidents Dr. Joe Boulding, psychiatrist, and Stu Wright, teacher, both of Nanaimo; secretary Doug Stewart, teacher, of Duncan; and treasurer Anton Kruyt, chartered accountant, of Parksville.

"We expect an election within a year," Coleman said, "and we've started to build a strong election team now."

The Liberals also reported that they have thanked Finance Minister Edgar Benson for supporting their proposals in his budget Friday.

In a letter to Benson, Coleman said: "Over the past eighteen months the Cowichan-Malahat Liberals have recommended various tax measures. These include tax relief for pensioners; increased basic personal exemptions; deduction of day care costs; a capital gains tax, and an end to special low tax rates for resource industries. We are delighted that the June 18 budget supported our proposals."

Benson Budget Called Bandaid

By DON COLLINS

A leading Victoria labor spokesman said Friday Finance Minister Edgar Benson had answered the need for major surgery in the field of tax reform with nothing more than a bandaid.

While Benson's budget appeared to be gaining general acceptance from most quarters, Victoria Labor Council Secretary Larry Ryan expressed "deep disappointment."

Ryan, an articulate unionist, has over the last several years made an extensive study of the massive Carter Commission report on taxation and Benson's original white paper on tax reform.

He said the formula put forward Friday by Benson marked a sad retreat from the recommendations of his white paper and appeared to be an election ploy.

"I am one of those who was deeply influenced by the Carter Commission analysis and the subsequent white paper," Ryan said.

"But now, out of this mountain of information that was given the public about inequities of the tax system, comes such a very little measure of relief.

"From now on I am not going to take very seriously any white paper produced by the government. The government has beaten a very fast retreat from the original formula and the cost to the country for the white paper would be in the millions of dollars."

Although he was harshly critical of the budget as a whole, he credited Benson with making the right move on three points.

"I'll give him marks for this," Ryan said, referring to introduction of the capital gains tax. "He has scored a breakthrough that will give Canada status."

He was also pleased with the decision to stop taxing the guaranteed income supplement paid to old age pensioners and to a lesser degree with the increase of basic individual tax exemption to $1,500 from $1,000, and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married couples.

However, he said it was "awful" that people earning as little as $1,500 a year would still have to pay any kind of tax. Otherwise, it could be called a minor sign of progress because it was a move in the right direction.

John Schibli, vice-president of the labor council and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, said he didn't think anyone earning less than the accepted figure for the poverty level—$3,200 annually—should be taxed.

French-Canadian Children Different, Scientists Find

TORONTO (CP) — Three scientists who conducted a study of growth and development of French-Canadian children aged six to 16 in Quebec said Thursday the children have physical characteristics different from other groups of children.

Dr. Arto Demirjian, Dr. Milos Jenicek and M. B. Dubuc said the study in which they participated over the last five years showed that French-Canadian children are shorter and have a different proportion of height to weight than United States children of the same age.

The scientists said that while the children are much closer to English-Canadian children in physical characteristics, there is a different growth pattern up to age 15.

After that, said the researchers, French- and English-Canadians are the same.

The three scientists presented their findings at the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Bilogical Societies.

The study, carried out at the Centre de Recherche sur la Croissance at the University of Montreal, was begun on the premise that every population should have its own height and weight standards.

French-Canadian children today are taller but weigh the same, and thus are thinner than their counterparts of 20 years ago, the study showed.

This differnece is not as marked in English Canada, says the report, and the research team is investigating.

Slide Fence Wasn't Repaired

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — A coroner's inquest here was told a slide warning fence that wasn't operating when a Canadian National Railways' freight train was derailed in the Fraser Canyon Feb. 15 could have been repaired before the train wreck.

A CNR conductor said "the major portion of the fence was clear of snow. There wasn't enough snow there to prevent the CNR repairing the fence."

Kenneth Burnside was testifying at the inquest into the death of Donald Barry, 33, of Kamloops, one of three men killed when the train smashed into a rock slide, about six miles east of Boston Bar.

A tugboat crew found Barry's body floating under a log boom near this Fraser Valley municipality April 30. The bodies of two other train crew members, Victor Penner, 42, and Donald Dougan, 35, both of Kamloops, are still missing.

69 Red Boats Seen Off Coast

SEATTLE (CP) — The United States Coast Guard reported Thursday it has spotted 69 Soviet fishing vessels between Heceta Head off the Oregon coast to La Perouse banks in the vicinity of Vancouver, B.C.

A coast guard spokesman said 36 ships were operating off the Washington coast with the majority north of Destruction Island.

North Vancouver Shootout

Suspect Charged

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Leroy Barber, 37, of no fixed address, Saturday was charged with armed robbery and attempted murder following a $35,000 bank holdup and gun battle that left one man dead and an RCMP constable wounded Friday.

Barber was remanded to Monday in a brief court appearance.

RCMP said an autopsy showed the man who was killed died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. His name was being withheld.

The hour-long gun battle took place about 200 yards into thick forest from the Deep Cove residential district of North Vancouver.

The exchange of fire followed a raid on a shopping centre branch of the Royal Bank of Canada by two men armed with rifles and handguns and wearing stocking masks.

Constable Glen Madsen, 30, of North Vancouver, was shot in the arm. He was in good condition in hospital.

One police tracking dog was killed and another wounded before the surviving suspect surrendered to about 50 RCMP officers who sealed off the area and moved in with the two dogs.

A shopping bag containing all the money was recovered at the scene.

The men had forced about 15 customers to lie down on the floor of the bank and ordered the bank manager to open the vault. Several passers-by were also ordered into the bank and down on the floor.

Coffin Nap Was Sarah Bernhardt Quirk

Glad You Asked

Q: About that great French actress, Sarah Bernhardt — how did she manage (in the days before plastic surgery) to look so young? And did she actually sleep in a coffin? — Joanne N., Buffalo.

A: Yes. Quite frequently. "To get used to death," she explained. The aging Divine Sarah looked ten years younger when she went on-stage by a contrivance she improvised. Resembling clothespins, they painfully pulled her septuagenarian folds and wrinkles to the back of her neck.

Q: Wasn't Carol Burnett's mother an alcoholic? — C. Randolph, Chicago.

A: Yes. So was her father. "I've been criticized for talking about my parents as alcoholics . . . but I saw enough to know that drinking is an illness and nothing to be ashamed of," Carol told Paula Edwin in The New Companion. "I'll never forget my mother saying to me, 'Comedy is tragedy plus time.' She may not have thought it up herself, but I think it's a valid observation."

Q: I like Doris Day's down-to-earthiness so much. I wonder if there's anything to a girl friend's claim that the actress had polio at one time, and that is why she took up dancing. True or false? — Peggy T., Columbus, Ohio.

A: Untrue. Miss Day's original ambition was to be a dancer. But this was thwarted when an auto accident injured one of her legs. So she became a top singing star and actress.

Q: Why doesn't the personal physician of Howard Hughes once and for all clear up the mystery — and publicly answer all the questions about the billionaire's physical and mental health? — Elbert M., Shreveport, La.

A: Because the doctor himself has filed suit against Hughes — for $1.8 million. Dr. Robert Buckley of Los Angeles claims he was "fired without cause" on Dec. 31, 1970. Says he was contracted in 1968 to be Hughes' personal physician until 1988 (at an annual fee of $50,000 per year).

Q: With Johnny Carson taking so much time off, how does his second banana, Ed McMahon, feel about maybe slipping into the top job? — Len Levy, Philadelphia.

A: "Naturally," McMahon admits, "at times you think of that moment. I have replaced him many, many times. But I wouldn't want to have the worry of that show that Johnny has — always grooming himself to be better." (Personal note: No question about Ed's sincerity — the show has already made him a millionaire.)

Q: Didn't those actors made up like apes for "Escape From the Planet of Apes" cause a riot when they roamed the streets of Beverly Hills for special scenes? — hannah B., Norfolk, Va.

A: They barely drew a glance from passersby—who took them for out-of-town hippies.

Q: How come Frank Sinatra rated a special "humanitarian award" at the last Oscars? What did he ever do for anybody but himself? — Gerald M., St. Louis.

A: Sinatra's performed countless good deeds for many people. But the singer prefers his helping-hand missions to go unsung. Even pays press agents to keep such activities out of the paper. Like the recent benefit Frank staged for comedian Frank Fontaine, which raised some $20,000 to ease Fontaine's financial fix. Felled by a heart attack, the former Gleason comedian is in such debt to U.S. Internal Revenue that in lieu of cash they even seized his suburban Boston home.

Q: I've heard that Britain's House of Lords is studying a report on pornography and obscenity similar to the white House report. What are their findings? — L.L.L., Nashville.

A: None yet. But there is pressure to clean up movies, the theatre, TV, books and magazines to prevent the issue from becoming a political soccer ball. Spearheading the movement to debate the impact of pornography in the dignified House of Lords is Lord Longford. His research included visiting a "sex supermarket," strip joints in the Soho section of London, and viewing X-rated films as well as live shows such as "Oh, Calcutta."

CANADIAN FLAG is lowered for last time during farewell ceremonies at commemorative stone in Korbecke, West Germany.

'Kleine Kanada' Closes

Canadians Say Farewell To German Hometown

By MAJOR WILLIAM RAE

SOEST, West Germany — Ceremonies held last weekend in and around this picturesque old walled city marked the final departure of Canadian servicemen from Northwest Germany where they had served for the past 19 years.

The marked not only the end of a significant military era but the close of a little-known chapter in Canada's history. Nearly 100,000 Canadians and their dependents had served here over the past two decades. "Hometown" for most of them over these years, was as likely as not, a small town or village with timbered houses and cobbled streets nestled in the rolling farmlands of the Westphalian Plain.

As Canadians probed and prowled the winding narrow streets and ancient squares with their eyes and cameras they discovered a diverse, colorful new world steeped in history and rich in architectural styles spanning more than a thousand years. Its people although reserved were friendly and industrious and above all intensely interested in their Canadian neighbors with whom else community and individual relationships grew over the years.

More than 10,000 children were born to Canadian families in this "Kleine Kanada." Many children whose parents returned for two or three tours of duty, lived and for the most part grew up in Germany. Over 1,000 servicemen brought home German brides, and even a few Canadian girls reversed the flow and married German husbands. But where there is life there is death — so it was with the Canadian Brigade. Close to 500 died while serving here and will remain forever in Germany.

The main ceremonies, the unveiling at Korbecke of a red granite stone sculptured in the shape of a maple leaf and the dedication of a memorial at the Stadt Werl cemetery were carried out by members of the closeout force who had remained in the area to wind up the hand over properties occupied by the Canadians.

This force, headed by Lt.-Col. D. I. Morgan, RCOC, of Ottawa, Ont., had a task of no small magnitude. The Canadian comunity had grown over the years to some 16,000 and had acquired 10 garrisons, churches, schools, ice arenas, supermarkets and hundreds of married quarters.

The bulk of the servicemen and dependents who had served in the Canadian Brigade had departed last fall. About half returned to Canada and the rest to a new location in Lahr, southwest Germany, in keeping with revised defence policies that called for a 50 per cent reduction in Canada's contribution to NATO and co-location of its ground and air forces in one area.

At the unveiling of the commemorative stone Burgermeister Belke of Korbecke praised in his speech the close ties and deep friendship that had grown over the years between Canadians and the local populace.

"You volunteered to serve the cause of peace in the world," he said, and "peace was maintained as a result of your presence. For this we owe you our special gratitude."

In the Canadian section of the city of Werl cemetery dedication services of a memorial erected to the memory of 447 Canadians buried there were performed by Protestant and Catholic padres.

Accepting from Lt.-Col. Morgan a memorial register containing the names of the dead for keeping within the Stadt Ratthaus, Burgermeister Frau Doctor Rohrer pledged:

"On behalf of the citizens of Werl and myself, please convey to the mothers and fathers, the wives and husbands and the sons and daughters of those buried here, our sacred promise to care for these graves along with those of our own dead for all time."

The ceremonies were attended by Maj.-Gen. D. C. Laubman of Edmonton, Commander Canadian Forces Europe and Brig.-Gen. J. C. Gardner of Regina, the last commander of the Canadian Brigade, who travelled specially from Ottawa to take part in the farewell ceremonies.

'Prose-Poem Psychodrama'

Victoria Staging Set For Commended Play

Windigo, a widely-praised play starring 12 Indian prisoners from Matsqui Correctional Institute, will be presented for the first time in Victoria Friday and Saturday at the Provincial Museum.

The play, described as "a prose-poem psychodrama," was written by Cam Hubert of Nanaimo. It will be presented in covert with poetry readings by native poets and a film, Ballad of Crowfoot, by Willie Dunn.

Norm Fife, himself a Matsqui inmate and performer in Windigo, said the cast represents the United Native Club of the prison. They are given short duration passes out of Matsqui in order to present the play across the province.

Although no one in the cast is a professional actor, the production "attacks the mind, the heart and the senses with a savage intensity," according to Vancouver theatre critic Christopher Dafoe.

Following the performance, the audience is encouraged to question the inmates and discuss implications of the play.

Arts, Recreation Summer Coming

A six-week program of arts, crafts and recreation will be held this summer for retarded youngsters attending Victor school.

It's a pilot project initiated by the parents, co-ordinated by the Inter-Municipal Recreation Committee and sponsored by the municipalities. The Greater Victoria School Board's contribution will be the use of the building. The school is at 2260 Victor.

Victor school principal E. W. Sullivan estimated that half of the school enrolment of 65 will participate. The program will run from July 12 to Aug. 20.

Fishing Derby and Fun

Salmon Festival Set for July 1

CAMPBELL RIVER — Campbell River's salmon festival will be held July 1 to July 4.

The program has been planned by a committee led by Michael Cruse.

Main feature of the festival will be a salmon fishing derby which will run throughout the four days. Boundaries are Kelsey Bay at the north to Royston at the south end of the area. There will be weigh-in stations throughout the section.

Six contestants who will compete for the Miss Campbell River title will be presented to the public during the festival.

West Vancouver concert band, directed by Roy Cornick will play on an outdoor stage on Tyee Plaza and give impromptu concerts in various parts of the town.

The group of 85 youngsters won a bronze medal in the 1970 World Band Competitions in Kerkrade, Holland, and played for the Queen during her recent B.C. visit.

On July 1, there will be a children's treasure hunt, a rod and custom car show, fashion show and tea, and stock car racing and demolition derby at Oyster River Racing Association Speedway.

Opening ceremonies, with Mayor Kenneth Forde's proclamation and introduction of guests, will take place on the outdoor stage in the evening. It will be followed by judging of the Kinsmen's beard growing contest, a presentation of The Drunkard by the Campbell River Players, and a band concert.

On July 2, there will be a fishing derby for children 12 and under, performances by the Joy Woodrow dancers, a "torture tank" at which residents will have the opportunity of dunking various public figures, and a synchronized swim demonstration at Centennial Pool. There will be a reception in the late afternoon for Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson in Discovery Inn and a banquet for the Miss Campbell River contestants.

Music throughout the day will be provided by the West Vancouver band, Powell River Highland Laddies Pipe Band, and Norm Porter's Dixieland Band.

Last year's successful arts and crafts display will be repeated at Tyee Plaza Friday and Saturday and a Bavarian Garden will again be in operation on those two days from 10 a.m. to sunset.

Arrival of Ss Beaver will mark the beginning of a full day's activities on July 3. This will be followed by a flypast by 409 Squadron from CFB Comox. There will be a bed race immediately before the parade which is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Program will include concerts by Campbell River High School Band and Chinese Children's Marching Band will perform on the outdoor stage, a watermelon eating contest and firemen's display, water-skiing marathon to Mittlenatch Island and back — approximately 28 miles — water skiing demonstrations, seining demonstration, Indian war canoe races and a skydiving demonstration.

The Miss Campbell River pageant will take place at 3 p.m. in the community hall.

"Capt. Vancouver" is scheduled to land at Cape Mudge at 6 p.m., there will be street dancing on Tyee Plaza in the evening, and a queen's ball in the community hall.

On July 4, there will be a band concert in the afternoon by the Jesus People and awards will be made.
